and the RUST-FREE RUUD-MONEL Gas WATER HEATER

It's Performance-Rated . . . your assurance it will supply plenty of hot water fast enough, to operate any automatic washer continuously . . . load after load, with never a wait between washes.

Ruud water heaters use GAS—the modern fuel that heats water cheaper and three times faster than any other automatic method.

Ruud also makes the Ruud-Hispeed series water heaters, with extra-heavy-duty galvanized steel tanks . . . selective water temperature control . . . Performance-Rated . . . models specifically designed to keep pace with the need of automatic washers. Available at your dealers, now.

* Monel is an alloy of nickel and copper—both metals urgently needed in the country's defense program. Production of Ruud-Monel water heaters is on a severely curtailed basis, limited by the amount of these strategic metals available for civilian use after the needs of the defense program have been met. Distribution of Ruud-Monel water heaters is restricted by government order to those areas in which public water supplies are of maximum corrosiveness, and this advertisement is not intended to indicate general availability of water heaters with Monel tanks.

IT'S WORTH MENTIONING

By Julie Polshek

The Apex Electric Barbecue Rotisserie requires no installation. You simply place it over the grate of the fireplace or grill you want it to serve. The boxlike unit provides its two spits with six service levels. The high-powered motor (switch-equipped) propels the spits by means of a roller chain. Finely built steel unit has gray Hammar-tone-enamel finish. 19" x 19" or 19" x 24", $59.50, $65. Hammacher Schlemmer, New York, N. Y.

The design of the Sohn carafe uses plastic and flame-proof glass to great advantage both eye-wise and functionally. The large opening permits ice-cubes to enter and it makes for easy washing. Black, dark green, chartreuse, cherry, or brown trim. Choice of 4, 8, 16-cup; $2.50, $3.98, $4.98. Matching sugar-cream tray, $4.98. Sohn Candle-warmer (stainless steel, black handle), $8.95. All from Abraham & Straus, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The screen door is closed silently, speedily and tightly by Yale & Towne's Skeeter-Cheeter set. The pneumatic action of its Airliner Closer solves the slamming problem; its companion piece is a push-pull catch (with push-button locking device) that automatically latches the door as it closes. The pair is sturdily made and easily installed. Closer (brass-finished), $3.75; catch (chromed), $2. Bamberger's, Newark, N. J.

Twin fans, rubber-mounted one above the other, enable GE's Floor Circulator to keep all air in the room on the move. They draw air from low and high levels, from far and near areas, without drafts or noise. The cooling effect and air volume (3220 c.f.m.) provided equals that of three conventional fans. Motor is 3-speed (AC). Cord (11-ft.) stows inside the attractive gray hassock. $64.95, Marshall Field, Chicago, Illinois.

West Bend's vacuum-insulated Penguin Server is a gem for outdoor meals. You can utilize it to keep the main course hot or the salad chilled, to maintain the status quo of a frozen dessert, iced beverage, or ice-cubes. The long "temperature control" afforded hot or cold contents makes the chromed-steel bowl equally useful for buffet-service parties or for outings. $6.95 ea., Boston Store, Milwaukee, Wis.

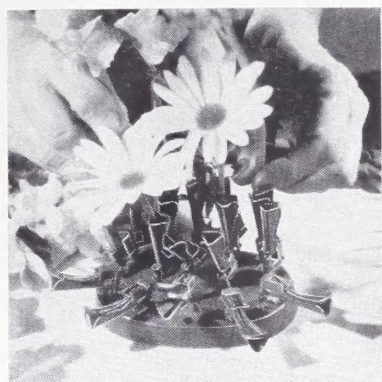

Canvas or other fabric that's refurbished with Nu-Fab paint is also made waterproof, weather-proof, and washable by the rubber-plastic compound. Moreover, the application "glues" the edges of rips or tears. Nu-Fab dries speedily; doesn't stiffen the fabric. Ideal for garden, boat, or beach gear, awnings, car tops. Black, blue, green, yellow, red, gray, buff, clear. $2.95 a qt., Adhesive Products, 1660 Boone, New York 60, N. Y.

A powerful suction cup is molded into the rubber mounting-head of the Ever-Ready Wall Shower. It permits showering facilities to be set up at will in the tub, basement or outdoors, at small-fry or adult level. The rustproof spray head swivels to any angle and is encircled with a rubber massage brush. Hose is equipped with an adapter that fits any faucet. $2.25, Beaumont Distributors, 133 Lexington Ave., New York.

Gooseneck sockets enable each of these stem holders to assume and hold any position. The backs of the two-part, triangular holders are equipped with springs that spread them to fit the girth of the stem inserted. The base of the Reynolds Floral Arranger numbers each holder so the novice can easily follow the flower-arrangement diagrams provided with the sturdy, rustproof device. $4.95, Ranch House, Goleta, Calif.

Swirl-o-matic's brush whirls as it travels; simultaneously scrubs and flushes the surface as it turns. It's revolved (about 800 times a minute) by garden-hose flow and is fed detergent by a tube inside the handle. (Tube fits any Swirl-o-matic; $1.50.) The sturdy washer speedily services windows, autos, decks, sidings. $8.45 with detergent feeder and tablets; 3-ft. handle-extension. $2.50, Melaire Co., 420 Lexington Ave., New York.

When the membership rolls close again—as they must in a few short weeks!—you will be glad indeed that you seized upon this opportunity to obtain

BEAUTIFUL, beautiful BOOKS LIKE THESE—AT THE SAME PRICE AS AN ORDINARY NOVEL!

Now—but for a brief time only!— you can obtain a unique collection of the world's classics, especially illustrated by the world's greatest artists and well printed on fine papers—for the same price as ordinary books!

WHEN THE MEMBERSHIP rolls of The Heritage Club are publicly opened to new members—and you may know that this does not happen often—you are offered an unusual opportunity which you should be alert to seize.

Now The Heritage Club is preparing the announcement of the Seventeenth Series of its fine books, for distribution to its members during the coming twelve months; and the membership rolls are opened—although for a brief time only.

THE MEMBERS of The Heritage Club regularly come into possession of "the classics which are our heritage from the past, in editions which will be the heritage of the future." These books are not falsely deluxe, nor are they old editions dressed up for a new market. They are especially designed by the most famous typographers, illustrated by the greatest of the world's artists, carefully printed by leading printers on papers which have been chemically tested to assure a life of at least two centuries, and then handomely bound and boxed.

You may find this next statement hard to believe; but nevertheless it is true, and it seems a principal reason for the continuing success of this cooperative plan: the members obtain these books for the same price that they are called upon to pay for ordinary rental library novels! Despite increases in the past few years of about one hundred per cent in the costs of producing books, each member pays only $3.65 for each book—or only $3.28 if he pays in advance!

NOW the Prospectus is being prepared for the Seventeenth Series; and in this Prospectus will be described all of the books to be distributed to the members during the coming twelve months. Some of these members have been members of The Heritage Club ever since the Club was established nearly seventeen years ago. If you elect to get into this obviously-satisfied membership, and if you apply in time, you will obtain books like these:

The Autobiography of Benvenuto Cellini, in a large square quarto profusely illustrated by Fritz Kredel; and Madame Bovary illustrated with engravings by the great French painter Pierre Brissaud; and The Pilgrim's Progress with the fine water-colors of William Blake printed in full color for the first time; and Thoreau's Walden with wood-engravings by Thomas Nason; and Voltaire's Candide with illustrations in color by Sylvain Sauvage; and

The Book of Ruth with the beautiful miniature-paintings of Arthur Szyk...

Yet, if it should happen that you do not desire to have any of these books, you are given a list of three dozen Heritage books-in-print—from which to select substitute titles.

THERE HAVE BEEN great book bargains before, of course, and there will be again. But it seems safe to say that never in the history of book publishing has a greater bargain been offered to wise buyers of books.

You are invited to put this statement to the test. If you will fill out the coupon printed herewith and mail it to The Heritage Club, you will be sent a copy of the descriptive Prospectus. Also, one of the available memberships will be reserved for you until you have had time to study the Prospectus and to send in your formal application.

Reservation Coupon

To THE HERITAGE CLUB, 595 Madison Avenue, New York 22, N. Y.

Please send me your new Prospectus, describing the books which you will distribute to the members in the coming twelve months. I understand that you will now reserve one of the remaining memberships for me, awaiting the receipt of my formal application.

DIARY

A polite peek over a decorator's shoulder at the priceless notes in her "little black book."

It's my secret conviction that the ideal way to furnish a child's room would be to hang everything from the ceiling. Well, maybe it wouldn't and want to convert the double-decker into a pair of twins. To go with them there's a wonderful seven-drawer chest, the tall kind you don't see much any more. Saves floor space again! Right now, the girls can't reach any higher than the third drawer from the bottom which is quite high enough to suit

Mrs. Atwater. "I'll keep their party clothes in the top drawers and know they won't get mauled every day," she says. But the girls will grow up to them. And by that time they'll be needing a pair of the combination desk-vanities that come to match. All of these plus a whole series of lower chests, storage units and tables were designed by the Danish designer, Borge Morgensen.

Floor-space savers

be practical. But the more inches of floor space you can leave free and clear, the happier the child is.
That I know. So I always try to build things up, not sideways.
Double-decker beds, for instance, not only delight the sense of make-believe but save that much floor space for block buildings and doll houses. Found some new ones from Denmark at Swedish Modern,
Inc., for the little Atwater girls.
The frames are light beechwood, the head and foot panels, a warm medium-toned teak, both in natural finish. Simple enough, but nothing rustic about them. And they'll have just the right degree of dignified trimness when Louise and Elsie decide they're too old for blocks

My friend, the furniture designer, was speculating. "Either this man is pining to buy a carload of new furniture, or he's decided he never wants to look at another modern thing as long as he lives." We were going through a very new and very imaginative house, the latest masterpiece of its architect who, fortunately, couldn't be with us. Nor was the man who owned it. It was indeed a beautiful house. We agreed, but the furniture looked as if it had fallen off the rag man's truck. A motley array that would never have shed grace on any house even when it was new.

"I hate to suggest it," I answered, "but I'm afraid there's a third alternative. Maybe this man doesn't even see the furniture. Maybe he doesn't even see the house. He sits, eats, and sleeps in it, but does he ever look at it?" I always suspect that's ninety per cent of the reason why so many people have shabby homes.

Kathy begged my advice on a color scheme for her studio. Was slightly startled since "studio" is just a family euphemism for a big bare third-floor room with lots of windows and lots of roughly built shelves, counters and cabinets which Kathy persuaded the boys to rig up when they were going through the home-carpentry phase. She sews there and pounds away at an old typewriter, and sometimes gets the urge to dabble with water colors. The plot, I discovered, was to get the boys to do the paint job.

Decided this was my chance for an experiment. So I suggested they try out Du Pont's Duco semi-gloss enamel for all the woodwork, shelves and counters and Du Pont's new rubber-base Flow Kote for the little remaining wall space and the ceiling. Flow Kote is a flat paint you can thin with water and still wash with water when it gets soiled. And the semi-gloss hides a multitude of sins like all enamel but is considerably less shiny. The color scheme was experimental too—used the semi-gloss in "pewter gray" let down with one-half white, and the Flow Kote in "vista blue." Both colors and paints, I'm happy to say, were a distinct success. After the room was finished, Kathy pointed out that these were "denim" colors and proceeded forthwith to make a gray denim cover for the old cot. The "faded blue" she says is just the color of the sky on a perfectly clear day so now she'll never need to curtain the windows. Maybe the experiment was too much of a success!—M. R.

HOW TO LEAVE HOME and like it

By Louisa M. Comstock

There's no time like the present if you've been daydreaming of a trip to South America. The fact that it is now winter below the equator won't hamper your movements or diminish your pleasure in the slightest, and it certainly guarantees easier reservations and certain advantages to the pocketbook. Even if you can't give South America as much time as it deserves, you can still see a great deal in two or three weeks if you launch yourself on one of the shorter cruises, or fly, or combine both sea and air travel via one of those interchange arrangements which lets you do both without sacrificing round-trip savings. Souvenirs to pick up are a better notion of what our neighbors to the south are really like: furs, leather goods, silver, semi-precious stones, and a head full of design ideas—Indian, Spanish Colonial, and modern. To get down to cases so far as transportation is concerned: Grace Line's luxury "Santa" cruises, in only 12 days from New York, visit La Guaira and Puerto Cabello, Venezuela; Cartagena in Colombia, via Curacao in the Dutch West Indies. Its Casual Cruises, on air-conditioned cargo-passenger "Santas," in 16 to 18 days visit Puerto Cabello and Maracaibo, Venezuela, with stops every other week at Amuay Bay; Barranquilla, Colombia, via Aruba in the Dutch West Indies. Both depart weekly, are $435 up. For either one way or round trip down the east coast to Buenos Aires, there's Delta Line's luxurious service out of New Orleans, 19 days one way, from $500, and 38 days round trip, from $940. Moore-McCormack Lines' summer specials, which leave New York July 10 and 24, and August 7, add the British island of Barbados and the Brazilian port of Bahia to regular east coast ports of call, 38 days, from $1,055. Between them, Braniff Air Lines and Panagra are setting up summer air excursions so that you can fly from New York all the way around South America for as little as $675 air fare, or make the round trip between Miami and Lima, for only $300.

Puritan Past

York, Maine, is a town well-known to salty, seaside vacationists and sailing enthusiasts. This year it celebrates its 300th anniversary during the week of July 20 by inviting the world to come see its venerable houses, gardens, and historic landmarks, among them the gaol, built in 1653 and the oldest standing public building in the English colonies, also the log-built garrison house, built in 1650 and still, presumably, able to ward off an Indian onslaught. York townfolk, dressed in heirloom costumes, will go decorously to church on Sunday in a re-enactment of the kind of Puritan church service conducted by the grim and famous Father Samuel Moody, pastor of the First Parish Church from 1697 to 1747. They'll be at the mercy of the Tithings Man, whose job was to see that all kept the Sabbath soberly. (The obstreperous were bopped and the sleepy tickled with his tithing rod, so it looks as if the occasion could get pretty lively.) Drive from Boston by car or bus (about a $2 bus trip) to York Harbor. Or fly to Portsmouth, N. H., or Portland, Me., and make the trip to York by car or bus. If you drive yourself, follow Route 1. For information on planned tours in York, with or without guide, and for a list of available accommodations, write to the Tercentennial Committee, Town Hall, York, Maine.

Land's end

The scenery of Quebec's Gaspé Peninsula is obvious on much of the 550 miles of highway which circle it. You also find its foreign atmosphere apparent in everything from language to that rich, savoury meal-in-a-bowl, habitant pea soup. There are also a sufficient number of modern hotels to serve a quick trip around. But for those who go with eyes, mind, and heart open, even the less scenic portion of the coast has its own vital beauty. Land meets water unbuffered and unembellished, and against this pale water-color background, the sea-scoured houses of unpainted wood seem almost luminous, the single geranium in the naked window is sheer drama, and even the rusty brown of drying nets assumes a special brilliance.

You can do the Gaspé by motor coach: Thos. Cook & Son's Romantic Gaspé Tour, includes it in a busy all-expense once-over not only of Quebec but of New England, 13 days, $275 plus tax from New York; the Gaspé Peninsula Tour available through the Union Bus Terminal in Quebec, 6 days, $64.24 including hotels throughout and meals at Perce. You can drop in by water on cruises of the Anticosti Shipping Company, P. O. Box 69, Quebec, 11 days from Montreal, visiting Quebec, Prince Edward, Cape Breton, and, unique to these cruises, Anticosti Island, and the town of Gaspé, whence you take a shore trip to Perce, from $185, shore trips extra. Canadian National Railways offer daily 4-day circle tours by automobile out of Mont Joli, $495 all-expense, and you can use its unique line along the south shore either for connections to Mont Joli, or to get out into the peninsula on your own. Or you can drive it yourself, in which case get in touch with your automobile club or oil company travel service, and with the Province of Quebec Tourist Bureau, either in Quebec City, or at 48 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 20.

Your own, your native land

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL

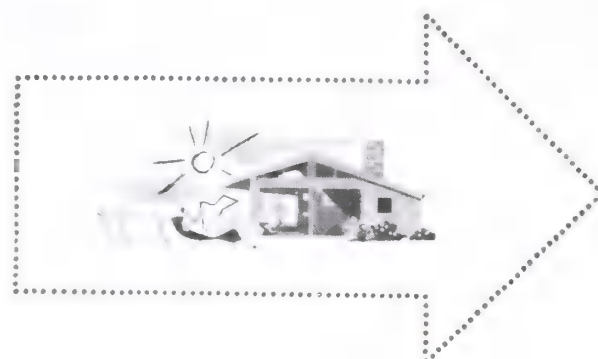

calls your attention to

A NEW KIND OF SMALL HOUSE

One of the most characteristic aspects of American life is the way new forms keep emerging as we solve new social problems. While other countries and other cultures strive to preserve the status quo, our fluid American attitudes help us to arrive at new answers very soon after finding that we have new problems.

The appearance of a new kind of small house is an example of this adaptability. This new house type, to be found in all parts of the country, is luxurious, polished, sophisticated. But it is also extremely easy to maintain, inside and out. Ease of maintenance is the essence of this new approach to living. For the owners of these new houses have built them to retire to, or to move to when they want to reduce overhead. Interestingly enough, these new houses are not being built by older people, but by people in their peak earning years. Generally, they are double-purpose houses—built to be used one way for five or ten years and then to be converted to other uses. They are “looking ahead” houses, planned for the future.

You will find examples of the Retirement House on the next 10 pages

WHAT IS A RETIREMENT

America has given birth to a new kind of small house. It's built to serve one set of needs when new, but planned primarily to meet the later requirements of an older couple—to help them float through their last years without financial strain and with a minimum of work.

The retirement house is born of a new set of social conditions: high income taxes which make it virtually impossible to save enough money to live on the income thereof, our increasing longevity, and the medical science of geriatrics. As a result, people are building small subsidiary houses in their peak earning years for eventual use during retirement. Because of the diversity of individual requirements, the retirement house takes a number of forms. We show you examples of four different types on the following nine pages.

A SMALL GUEST HOUSE built on the same property with the main house, where guests may be luxuriously housed during the peak years of middle age, but to which the owners will retire in later years when they rent the big house for income.

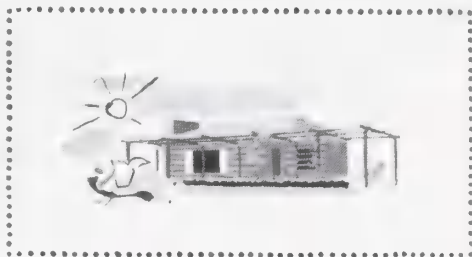

AN INCOME-PRODUCING STRUCTURE which contains a small apartment or penthouse, where the owners can live without rent while their property pays the taxes plus a little extra for income.

A PLAYHOUSE designed to be used first as a recreation and an entertainment annex to a larger house, and in later years to be converted into living quarters for the owners when the big house is rented for income.

A RESORT HOUSE built in a mild climate, to be used first as a vacation house, but designed to provide good easy living for older people.

THE GUEST HOUSE IN THE GARDEN

By Jean Harris

A retirement house built during middle years may start as a guest annex, designed to give visiting couples big-house luxuries like this generous outdoor living area, at the same time allow them complete independence from the family.

Cliff May, designer
Tommy Tomson, landscape architect
Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Beloin, owners

This is one type of small house that may be converted to full-time use by its owners in later years.

See how it fulfills the needs of a new kind of retirement

We are changing our attitude toward retirement. It means something quite different today from what it meant when we were children. Our former concept of a retired man as a semi-invalid, who putters about aimlessly from day to day, has become obsolete. The new science of geriatrics has discovered it is just that feeling of uselessness that shortens a man's life, or a woman's. Older people need to be active, need to feel there is a necessity for what they are doing.

At the same time, business and industry are coming to realize it is wasteful to dismiss an employee who represents many years' investment, just because he has reached a specified age. When the time comes for him to slow down, they find it is wiser to reduce his duties, to retain him as a consultant or on a part-time arrangement. So retirement today is more likely to mean slower-paced living, a kind of semi-retirement. (Continued on page 90)

You can have more luxurious living in a small space if you plan it as one big, multi-purpose room. Instead of bedrooms, this house has built-in beds in the living room. But bathroom (see plan, opposite page) includes dressing room with wardrobe and built-in vanity.

Another device for making maximum use of small space is the dual-purpose, built-in unit. Storage units for books, linen, and fireplace wood all double as end tables for beds and couch. Drawers underneath couch hold bedding.

THE PENTHOUSE THAT EARNS ITS KEEP

The principle of the "taxpayer," applied to the home.

Here is a three-room apartment over a four-car garage.

You don't have to wait until you retire to build an income-producing structure where you can plan to live well and unencumbered in later years. Though located in a business section, this garage-top apartment has a 10' x 22' garden on its own level. Fence of white-painted redwood splints gives privacy and protection from breezes, screens unattractive view. Overhead trellis makes pleasant shadow patterns.

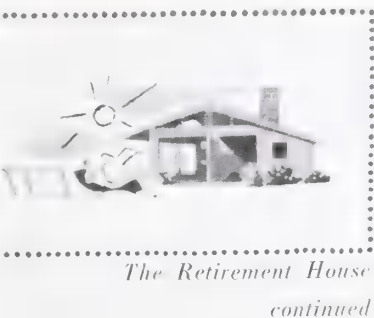

Thanks to the enclosed garage-roof garden, the living room can have sliding glass doors like a house in the country. Plants in pots are easy to take care of, make the outlook far more pleasant than you would expect from windows which actually face backs of neighboring shops. Income from garages below is enough to pay taxes and basic expenses.

Although the apartment is small, it is furnished with a few big-scale pieces that give it the same luxurious atmosphere as the big house from which the owners moved. Scenic paper on one wall creates an optical illusion of distance. On the street level (lower photograph) a short brick wall projected from the building divides apartment entrance from garage area, provides background for foundation planting.

Joseph Copp, Jr.
and Robert Hanley, Decorators

Looking back through the apartment from the garden, you can see how living room merges with dining room to create feeling of spaciousness. Mirrors on back wall of dining room reflect garden, give room additional light. Windows in wall at right are screened by ceiling-to-floor blinds (painted to match walls) that hide unattractive view of commercial locale.

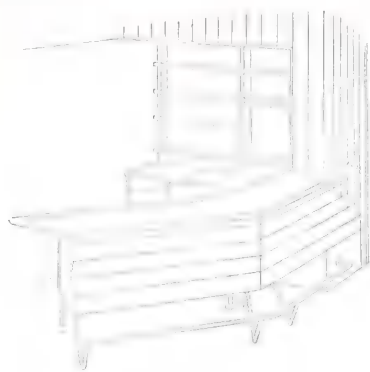

THE CABANA-PLAYHOUSE

This playhouse, built first to take the wear and tear of entertaining off the big house, will convert neatly to a work-free apartment whenever the owners are ready to reduce their overhead and social obligations

Henry Eggers, Architect

Cork floors and backgrounds of natural stone and wood make a genial setting for simple furniture, but reduce upkeep to a minimum. Sofa is built in; chairs are light and easy to move when cleaning. House is heated by Uskon electric radiant heating panels in the ceiling.

A sense of spaciousness is an important psychological requirement for a retired couple who have spent their peak years in a big house. In this room, now used for large informal parties, the glass walls and high peaked ceiling forestall any feeling of confinement. In another corner of the same room is the bar and storage unit at left which contains a sink and refrigerator. Only the addition of a small stove is needed to convert it into a kitchen adequate for a couple.

This playhouse, built on the grounds of the owners' big house, fills one of the basic requirements of a retirement house—outdoor living space on same level with indoor living area. Playhouse itself has almost no garden to be maintained, since it overlooks steep hillside lush with wild vegetation, and flowers are grown in tubs. It now contains dressing rooms for swimming pool located across lawn seen in photograph at left. It was taken from terrace of the main house.

THE WORK-FREE RESORT HOUSE

A good vacation house in a balmy climate gives you everything you will need in later years for all-season living

By Mary Roche

The things that make a resort house a relaxing and glamorous place to spend a holiday are so nearly identical with the basic qualifications of a good retirement house, that it's downright foolish not to aim for both. The main difference between them is that a vacation house sometimes contains a few crudities, aesthetic or functional, which are easy enough to put up with on a holiday, but hard to take on a permanent basis. Avoid these, and you'll have a perfect house for your later years.

See how well architects Twitchell & Rudolph met both sets of requirements in this Florida house designed for a New England couple, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Healy. It is small, as it should be, but every (Continued on page 89)

The glass walls at both ends of this little house open up extensive vistas of the bayou and greatly enlarge apparent size of interior which actually measures no more than 800 square feet. Fixed panes alternate with ventilation panels of glass louvers.

The economics of the retirement house

A business man who has just forsaken the nine-to-five routine himself, weighs the economics of the retirement house and tells you why and when you should build one

By Harvey H. Smith

If your unearned income is so great that you could deduct your salary and still have enough to pay all of your current expenses with some to spare, you don't have to worry about owning a retirement house. Or if your salary is in the truly fabulous class, and your expenses so modest in comparison that you are salting away a tenth of a fortune every year after taxes, you can afford to dismiss this question. But how many people do you know in that position?

For most of us, it will be next to impossible to amass during peak earning years the amount of capital necessary for a retirement income large enough to live on without curtailing expenses. If your personal earnings are your main source of income during your peak years, once they are reduced you will almost certainly have to reduce your overhead. That's where the retirement house comes in.

Whatever your circumstances, there are many reasons why you will be happier living in a smaller house after your children are grown and you have less occasion for large-scale entertaining. But if your income is reduced, you won't want to spend any of it for taxes and maintenance on space you don't use or don't need. Assuming you already own a large house or are about to build one, you really can't afford not to have a second, smaller house in the offing.

The more pertinent question is: When should you build a retirement house?

As you can see by the four houses shown on the previous pages, many people are building houses planned for this purpose during their peak earning years. Today there are very good reasons for such a decision.

During an inflationary period such as we have now, real property offers a more reliable investment than intangibles such as stocks and bonds. Although building costs are high today, there is no indication that they will decrease or even become stabilized. So there is every likelihood that you will obtain more for your building dollar now, than if you waited another ten or twenty years. Furthermore, the longer inflation continues—and there's no foreseeable end in sight—the more your retirement house will increase in value.

Your second house can become more than insurance against old age. It will give you a cushion in times of stress, should you meet up with unexpected financial reverses. If the going gets tough, for any reason, you can always rent the second house—or rent the first and live in the second.

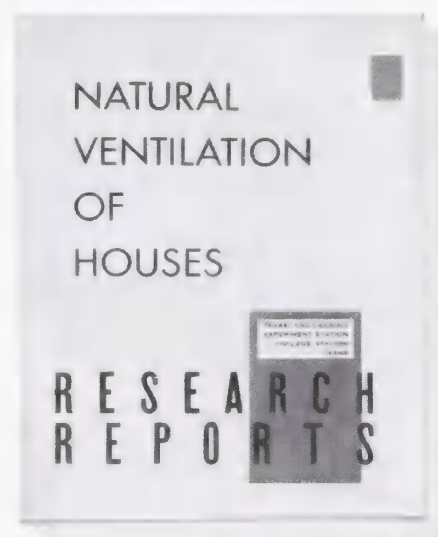

In any case, investment in a second house need not represent buried capital. If you plan it wisely for interim use, it will give you immediate financial returns or an equivalent savings in expenses. From an income-producing structure such as the garage-penthouse shown on page 44, of course, you derive revenue from the very beginning.

In the case of a resort house, it will save you part of the cost of an annual vacation. You will have the pleasure of using it part-time during the years (Continued on page 113)

How to harness the breeze in hot, humid weather

Comfort in hot humid weather is largely dependent on good ventilation. For, within certain limits of heat and humidity, all your body needs for comfort is to be dried by moving air. But to get good ventilation, we need to clear up many misconceptions, fill in many factual gaps on air-flow behavior. To this end, HOUSE BEAUTIFUL and the Texas Engineering Experiment Station have just completed a joint research project. First findings are presented on the next 4 pages. Others will be treated later.

One of the many instruments used in our ventilation studies was this experimental room on the campus at College Station, Texas. It turns on a pivot so that it can be rotated to wind or sun from any angle. Its window walls can be opened to any desired extent and its roof pitched to any angle. Tests were also made with scale models in wind tunnels and inside actual houses.

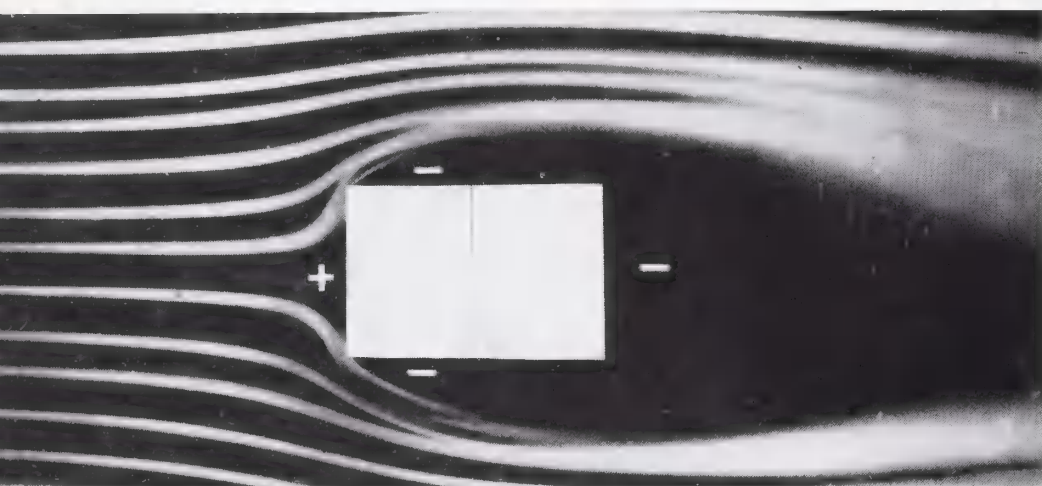

The breeze won't come in if it can't get out

The breeze flows around your house

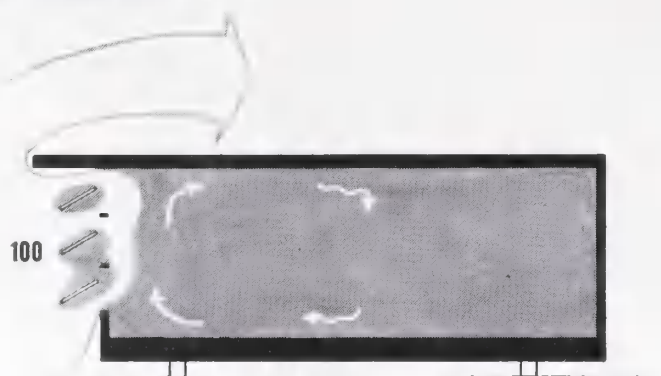

... just like water around a stone

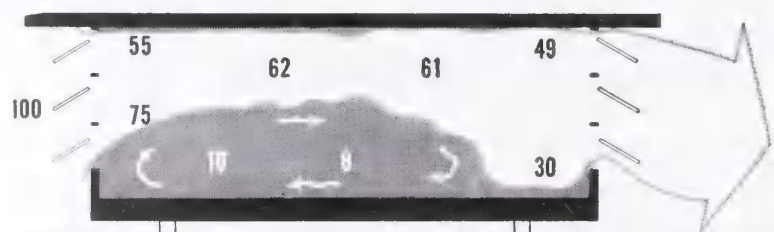

When the wind blows around your house, it envelopes it, creating areas of high and low pressure (left). High pressure areas are generally in the region of walls which face the wind. Low pressure areas occur at the opposite side of the house (leeward) and at either end. Airflow through the house is a result of air being forced into openings on the windward side of the house and sucked out of openings on the leeward side. It takes both of these openings to ventilate a room.

Therefore, in order to get the air to flow through a house you must have openings to let it in and openings to let it out. If there are openings on only one side of your bedroom, for instance, there cannot possibly be effective ventilation—even though the windows face the wind. The air will merely pile up against the opposite wall and build up enough pressure to prevent any more wind from blowing into room, as tests in the experimental room clearly show (below). Yet the moment you open corresponding windows on the opposite side the wind blows right on through. Numerical values given in diagrams are in feet per minute of air movement.

But the breeze won't flow into your house

... unless it can also flow out

Larger windows toward the breeze actually cut down speed of air flow inside room.

In this test, size of window opening toward breeze was increased, while that of window away from breeze was unchanged. Far from improving ventilation, this actually cut down air flow all the way across.

But larger windows on side away from the breeze will speed up air flow inside room.

Here conditions were reversed—size of window toward breeze was unchanged while that of outlet was doubled. Note that this greatly improved air flow all across room, especially on side away from breeze.

Large overhangs above windows away from breeze don't help air flow inside room.

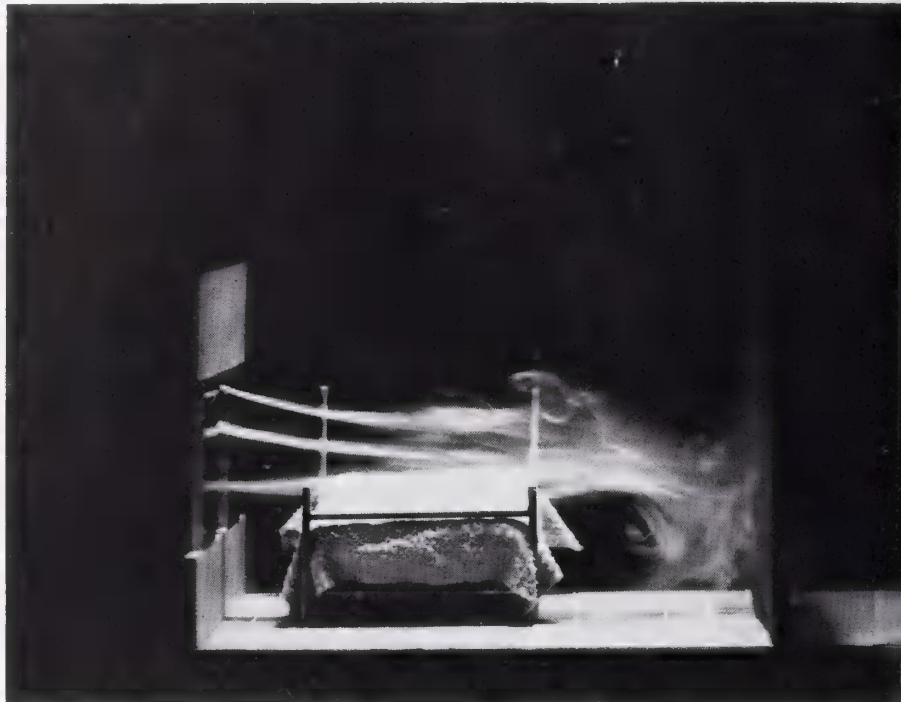

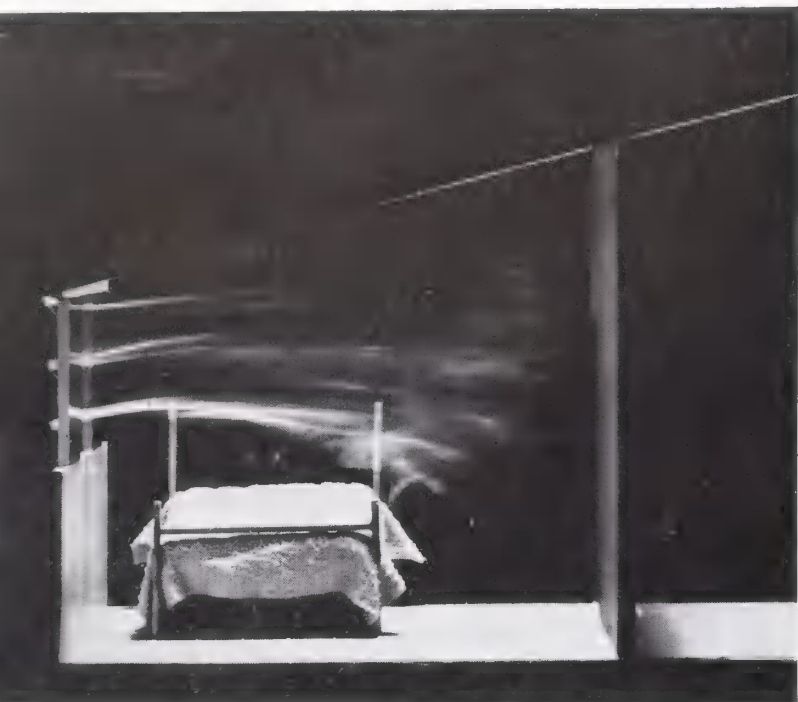

In test at right, large overhang was added to roof on side away from breeze to see if that would improve ventilation within room. As you can see from air speeds, this had little effect on air flow across room.

Changing the direction of breeze inside the room makes it slower, more sluggish.

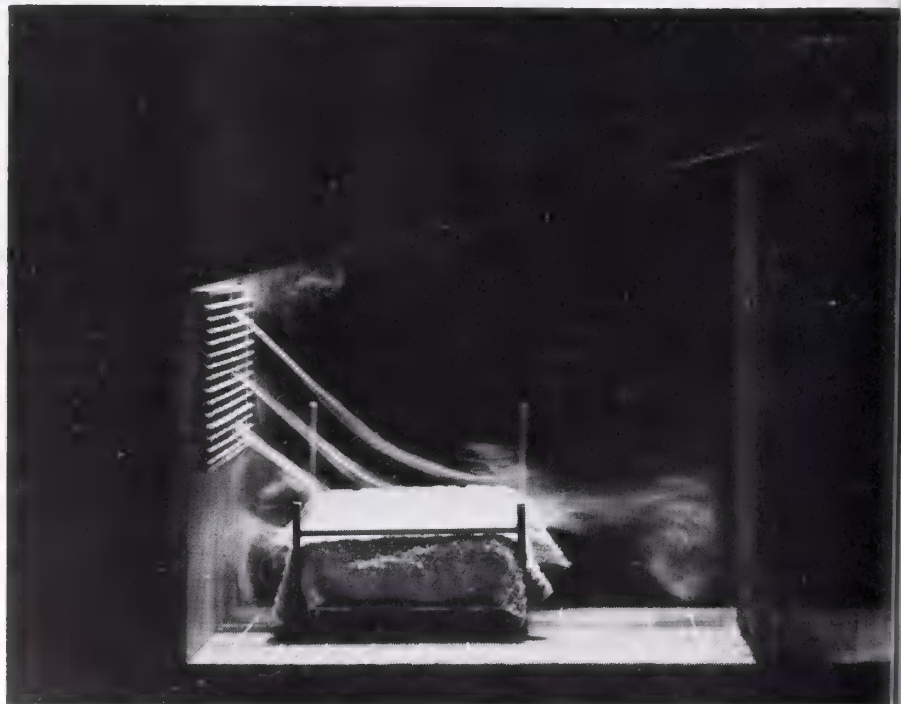

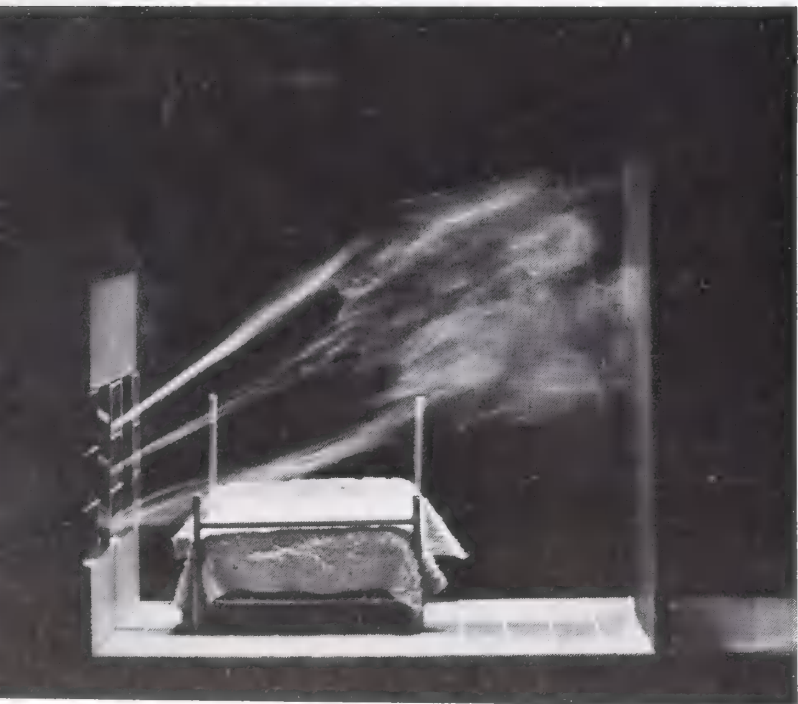

In this test, high windows (left) were moved down to floor (right). This not only improved air flow but kept it down where it does most good—in "living zone" where people normally sit, stand or recline.

How to put the breeze where it does the most good

These four pictures show you that window acts like a nozzle on a hose . . .

. . . enabling you to direct the breeze to where it does the most good

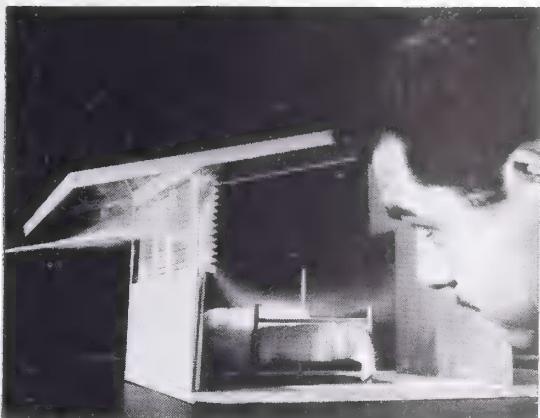

For warm weather comfort, it is not enough merely to have the breeze in the room—it has got to be in that part of the room where it's needed. In this connection, the breeze-side of inlet window is of great importance. Our tests show that such windows act very much like nozzles on a garden hose. The way they shoot the breeze into the room has a lot of bearing on how it behaves thereafter. By and large, the jalousie type windows make the best nozzles. As you can see in the photo (right, above), they give a very accurate control of the air stream because horizontal louvers can be rotated to direct the air current as desired. Casement windows give somewhat less control, double-hung sash scarcely any.

On the facing page you see the results of wind-tunnel tests made on a scale model of a typical bedroom. In the first (top, left), the windows are casement type, relatively high off the floor. The air flow is upward, toward the ceiling, thus missing the bed. However, by merely lowering the window in the wall (top, right), with solid wall between window head and ceiling, the air flow tips down directly across the bed.

The third test, bottom left, shows nozzle effect of horizontal awning-type sash. It gives a more accurate control of incoming breeze but directs it up toward the ceiling. The type of horizontal louver that gives complete control is one like the glass jalousie (bottom, right), which rotates at any angle, gives you direct breeze down onto the bed from even a high window.

All of which boils down to five basic points. (1) To get good ventilation, the room must face the prevailing breeze. (2) You've got to provide a way for the breeze to get out as well as to get in. (3) You have to make sure you have enough openable sash on opposite walls—the more the better for summer comfort. (4) You have to locate the sash properly in the wall with reference to the room's use and location of its furniture. (5) You have to select the right type of sash for the purpose. Only when all these factors are properly solved can you be sure of good built-in ventilation.

A photograph of one of the research team adjusting the model bedroom in the laboratory wind tunnel, preparatory to making flow tests.

Things you should know about ventilation

Moving air is naturally sluggish, lazy. Every time you make it turn a corner, you give it an excuse for not moving at all. So for good ventilation, let the breeze move in straight lines.

Any obstruction across an opening cuts down the speed of the breeze. Even insect screening reduces it by fifty per cent.

There's no substitute for real cross ventilation—that is, openings on opposite or facing sides of the room. Diagonal or catercornered windows give very little ventilation, no matter what the advertisement says.

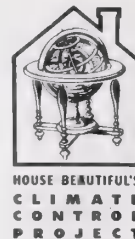

Opening a double-hung window top and bottom does not give any more ventilation than opening all top or bottom sash. Unless there's an opening opposite it, no breeze can enter room at all.

It makes no particular difference whether your inlet windows are high and outlets low—or vice versa. What does matter is that both be as large as possible.

Remember that the living zone of a room is the six feet nearest the floor. Unless you have good ventilation there, you won't be comfortable—no matter how much breeze there may be up higher.

Breezes always fall at sunset, often failing completely around midnight. So if your nights are hot, better supplement your breeze with an attic fan. Be sure its exhaust blows with the breeze, not into it.

In many parts of the country summers are either so hot (Phoenix-Yuma) or so humid (New Orleans-Houston) that moving air alone is not enough for full comfort. Then you need full air conditioning—i.e., air that's cooled and/or dried.

In this house

THE BREEZE IS BUILT IN

In Miami, they need every trick in the bag for summer comfort. This house uses them all: louvered wood walls, glass louvered partitions, louvered doors on bedrooms and closets, awning-type windows, sliding doors that open up whole walls, attic fans, bathroom exhaust fans, ventilated floors. It even has a ventilated pantry!

By and large, you can be comfortable in Florida summers if you can (1) stay out of the sun which is very intense, and (2) stay in the breeze which, at least along the coast, blows with remarkable steadiness from the southeast during the daytime. This house, fortunately located on Miami's Biscayne Bay, has full and permanent access to this ocean breeze. Architect Parker's main problem was to exploit this "natural resource" to the fullest. He has done it, first, by placing all the main rooms broadside to this breeze (see plan, page 63). Then he has opened up his walls to the maximum, using awning-type windows, sliding floor-to-ceiling panels, jalousies and louvers. In the living room this leads to spaces as open and airy as a Javanese pavillion.

In other parts of the house, where solid interior partitions would have blocked cross ventilation, he has used wood jalousies for interior doors and partitions to assure ventilation and privacy at the same time. Besides these architectural measures for manipulating a breeze, there are fans for making one. One in each bath, one in the pantry, one over the kitchen range exhaust heat and odors directly; and two large attic fans pull cool air into the house at night when the breezes are not working. Thus no matter what part of the house they are using, the occupants will always be bathed in moving air.

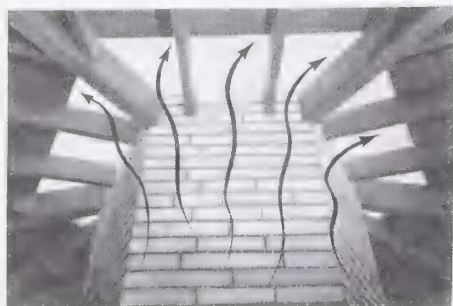

Like a great parasol, the spreading roof of this hexagonal living room fans out from the central chimney and carries out far beyond the walls to protect them from sun, thundershowers, and sky-glare. The room itself faces south and commands a magnificent view across the bay. Since the bay is three miles wide at this point, there's no problem of privacy and these walls can be glass. Since the prevailing breeze is from this direction, most of this glass wall slides back. And for protection from the late afternoon sun, a special heat-absorbing, glare-reducing glass is used. On entrance front (left) both ventilation and privacy are secured with floor-to-ceiling wooden jalousies on each side of flush panel front door.

In addition to genuine through-ventilation from big openings on opposite walls, the living room has an effective exhaust at the center of its peaked ceiling (above). This hexagonal cupola has glass sash which stay open all summer and a wide Ludowici-Celadon shingle tile roof to keep out blowing rain and direct sunlight (below).

One triangular section of the big hexagonal living area is furnished for dining. Round table may be placed in corner near chimney for intimate meals, or moved to the wider area and extended to seat ten for a party.

Occupying one corner of man-made island in Biscayne Bay, house has magnificent views, full southern exposure, prevailing summer breezes.

The hexagonal living room has three glass walls aimed seaward so the view dominates the entire area. Even the furniture is especially designed with transparent cane backs so nothing interrupts the broad panorama of the bay.

Just as many people do not realize that the typical Florida summer is seldom hotter than that of Kansas City, so they are apt to forget that Florida winters can often be as chilly as those of San Francisco. Here again, comfort is a matter of common sense and it's sensibly taken care of in this house. Large glass areas catch the low winter sun all day; and an oil-fired, forced warm-air heating system does the rest. This system, incidentally, has still another fan which can be used in hot weather.

SCREEN BY EMILE NORMAN

When you enter house through front door (right, above) you are in a sort of lobby that's actually only a segment of the hexagonal living room. But it's visually separated from dining area by planting box and trellis, and from living area by translucent plastic screen studded with shells.

"STARFISH" PAINTING BY LODEWYK BRUCKMAN, COURTESY GRAND CENTRAL MODERNS

The study, seen above from living room, is furnished to sleep an overnight guest in comfort. The wood жалюзиs in background are used as sliding doors to clothes closet and as hinged door to hall, thus permitting essential ventilation.

You can see (below) how the parasol roof of the living room, with its cupola and central chimney, protects the big sliding glass doors. The study and bedrooms have banks of awning-type aluminum sash which permit ventilation even when it's raining and give a full 100% opening to breeze when wanted.

Another dramatic view of the hexagonal living room, this time at night. General illumination of the room comes from a deep wood cornice which runs around entire perimeter of room. Lights are arranged to flood both ceiling and, through "egg-crates," room below. Light at top of chimney comes from floodlights in the cupola.

A seven-panel screen, hinged and folding, separates living room from bedroom hall (above) and entrance door. Though it is high enough for visual privacy, it doesn't interfere with ventilation through living room and hall.

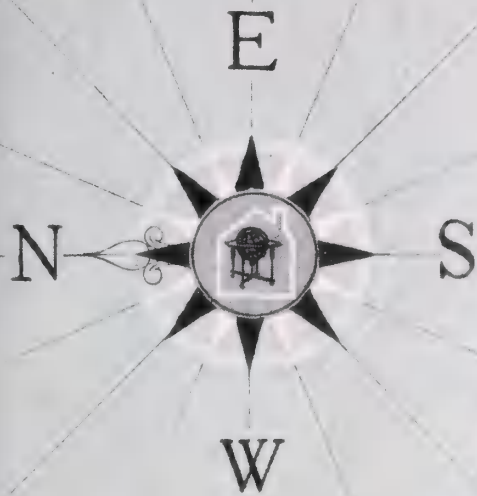

This closet for storage of luggage, tennis rackets, golf bags, and the like, needs air movement to avoid mildew. Jalousied hall door and outside window give it genuine cross ventilation and help the ventilation of hall as well.

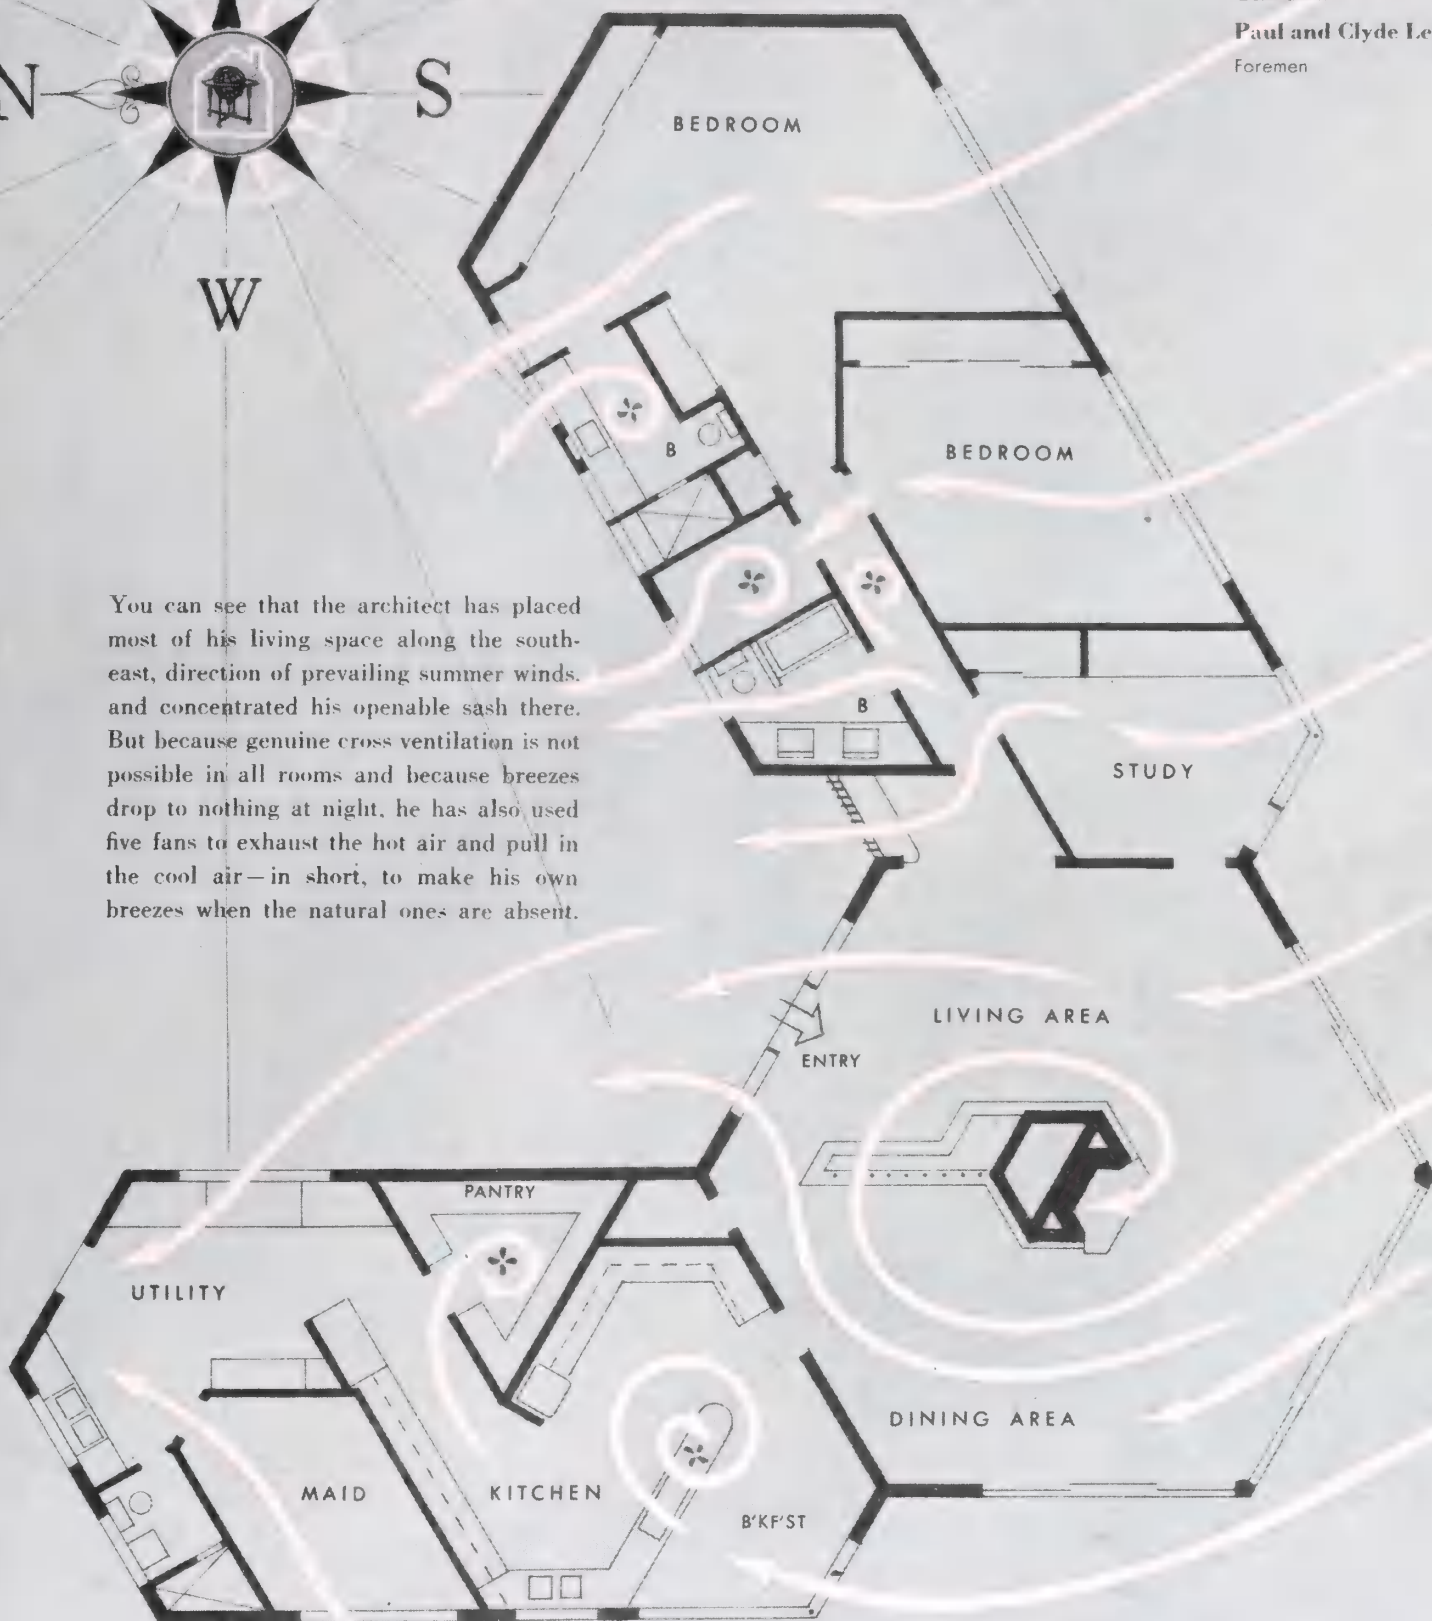

The house takes its form from zoning and set-back restrictions of odd-shaped plot. But it makes good use of view, winter sun, summer breeze.

You can see that the architect has placed most of his living space along the south-east, direction of prevailing summer winds, and concentrated his openable sash there. But because genuine cross ventilation is not possible in all rooms and because breezes drop to nothing at night, he has also used five fans to exhaust the hot air and pull in the cool air—in short, to make his own breezes when the natural ones are absent.

WOOD STEPS...

easy to build yourself

Wood is the cheapest and best material you can use for garden steps. It requires no special tools or skills, lasts about 10 years

ECKBO, ROYSTON AND WILLIAMS, LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTS

Easy installation: Simply bed the wood directly onto sand. Tamp to get firm contact over entire surface. No need to fuss with mortar or elaborate preparations. Local lumber yard will saw redwood, red cedar, or locust logs into slices like these for you. Overlap as shown to avoid tilting.

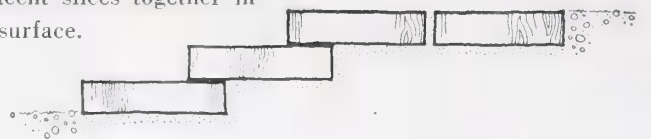

THOMAS CHURCH, LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT

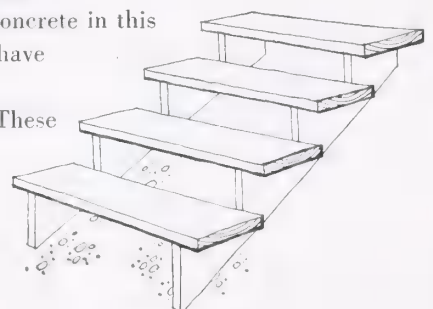

PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

Low cost: Wood is the cheapest material to buy or to install. Slices can be cut from logs culled out as unsuitable for sawing into first-class lumber. You don't even have to remove the bark. If you use small diameter slices, as here, to save installation and repair cost, butt adjacent slices together in one firm surface.

Appropriate material: Wood textures and colors fit naturally into garden surroundings. There's no glare or massiveness of concrete in this flight of garden steps. Wood steps have a natural grace, even when solid instead of open, as in this design. These are supported by stringers, but you can substitute 2" pipe plus T-supports.

HENRY FREE, LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT

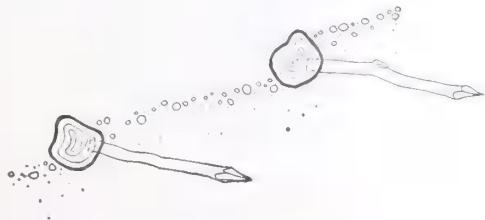

Reasonable life expectancy: Wood resting directly on the moist ground can be expected to provide satisfactory service for upward of ten years, varying somewhat on kind of wood and degree of protection afforded by your wood preservative treatment (soaking in pentachlorophenol or copper naphthenate is most satisfactory for home application).

INNOCENTI AND WEBEL, LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTS

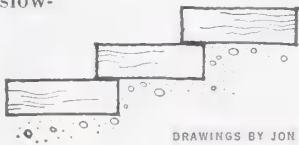

Resistant to abuse: Its natural resilience helps wood to bounce back after punishment. Wooden steps in a ramp, for example, won't be damaged if you bump a wheeled piece of equipment up or down them, as long as each log is pinned, as shown, to prevent turning under pressure. Connecting fibers in log are so tough that they wear surprisingly slowly under the scuffing of normal foot traffic.

OTTO HOLMDAHL, LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT

Non-slip surface: Wood is rough-sawn or split for garden use, so offers safe footing even in wet weather. You can put curves in your flight of steps without jeopardizing safety of those who use it. But if any planting is done, you'll have to keep it trimmed back off the treads. Use only slow-growing, non-juicy plants.

How to use Music in your life

PART V

By Richard Williams

Editor's Note: This is the fifth in a series of articles by HOUSE BEAUTIFUL's music editor, explaining the place that music has in your life. No one has to take a college course before listening to the classics, he has said, but enjoyment does call for a willing attitude. Day-dreaming while listening is one way to get started. Then you can go on to concentrating on the melody. But you are more likely to gain a love for music if you hear the same works played often.

What is easy music and what is difficult music? Can we set up any kind of guide to help you in your choice of music? I presume that if I asked an art critic the same question about painting, he'd reply that the easy paintings are those which represent life realistically. Painting, he might say, becomes more difficult as it parts company with reality and veers into the abstract. That definition won't do for music. While some music is descriptive, none of it represents life realistically.

In the first place, the distinction between simplicity and complexity, between lightness and heaviness is always an individual, a very personal decision, and more so in music. No question is difficult to which you know the answer and no music is difficult to which you respond. I think Bach is difficult and Beethoven easy, Haydn difficult and Mozart easy, Moussorgsky difficult and Tchaikovsky easy. That's my opinion and nothing more. It is probable that every music lover, when asked to list easy and difficult composers, would list left and right columns of different names, according to his personal response.

One man's gamble by the sea

By George Marek

May I introduce myself?

I am an admirer of the past, an antique collector, a bargainer for bibelots, the knight of the knickknack. The sight of a Derby or a Chelsea mark on a piece of porcelain fills me with pleasure. Fortunately my wife, though less ardent in the pursuit of the antique than I am, agrees with me. We live in a large, high-ceilinged apartment in New York City, in an apartment house that dates back to the days of wasteful space and unscientific building. This apartment is filled with statuettes, books, clocks, plates, old boxes, paperweights, and decanters—dust collectors all, but to me eminently satisfying. These are the things which I have gathered together in my travels in Europe, for which I have haggled, or over which I have been cheated, and which I have carried personally into the ship's cabin, not entrusting them to the ship's hold.

Though I make my living in the Twentieth Century, I do my living in the Eighteenth. Not quite, of course: I am exaggerating to make a point. But I do believe that if Dr. Samuel Johnson were to visit our apartment, we would need only to light a few candles to make him feel at home.

As to architecture, for many years I have been familiar with the work of Christopher Wren but quite unfamiliar with the work of Frank Lloyd Wright. My conception of the modern style

The whole concept of our house grew out of the fact that the site overlooked a public beach from which we wanted privacy. Instead of closing us in behind walls pierced with small windows (which would have been the traditional solution), the designers projected a 24-foot deck over the sand dune which makes the living room appear to extend out to the ocean and screens out the crowded beach. So we have all the assets, no liabilities. The same kind of furniture is used outdoors as indoors, so it can be shifted back and forth as needed. It also emphasizes the feeling that living room and deck are one big room. Ceiling under shed roof slants upward, is painted blue, so it seems to merge with sky beyond. Floor is spatterdashed so that tracked-in sand isn't as noticeable as it would be on a solid color. All the paints and stains are by the O'Brien Paint Co.

One man's gamble by the sea

The informality of a beach house may rule out Chippendale and Staffordshire, but it can be just as decorative. Fish in numerous variations were chosen as our decorative motifs. Modern designers also know how to use the outdoors to create an illusion of space. Since deck furniture matches that in living room, we can bring the mate of this table indoors and push the two together for parties. The play of light and color through the plastic fish panels created by Emile Norman is an endless delight.

Draperies of the sandpiper print for the long glass wall of the living room were made in 20 separate panels—10 for the small panes above the cross beam and 10 long ones for the sliding doors below it. Since each panel moves independently, we may have any arrangement we need to control sun and glare at any hour of the day. We can draw two or three panels to cut down the light in one corner without having to sacrifice the view or darken the room. Narrow 2-tier console converts to full-width dining table for parties.

of home building and home furnishing was, until recently, about as accurate as somebody's conception of the Venus de Milo who had seen that celebrated statue only as a plaster cast reproduction with a clock in her belly. "Modern" was to me bad modern. I don't think I can be blamed too severely; so much modern is bad modern. At any rate, "modern" represented chairs made of aluminum tubes covered with materials of neon-light colors, such chairs as I had seen in the lobbies of small hotels which were "entirely refurnished and under new management."

This original "clamshell" plan was inspired by the attempt to give every room an ocean outlook, while avoiding the extra construction cost of lining them up in a straight row. You can see from the diagram that even the bedrooms at the rear of the house have a view of the sea in addition to true cross ventilation.

SEA VIEW

Breeze is funneled into louvers at back of living room.

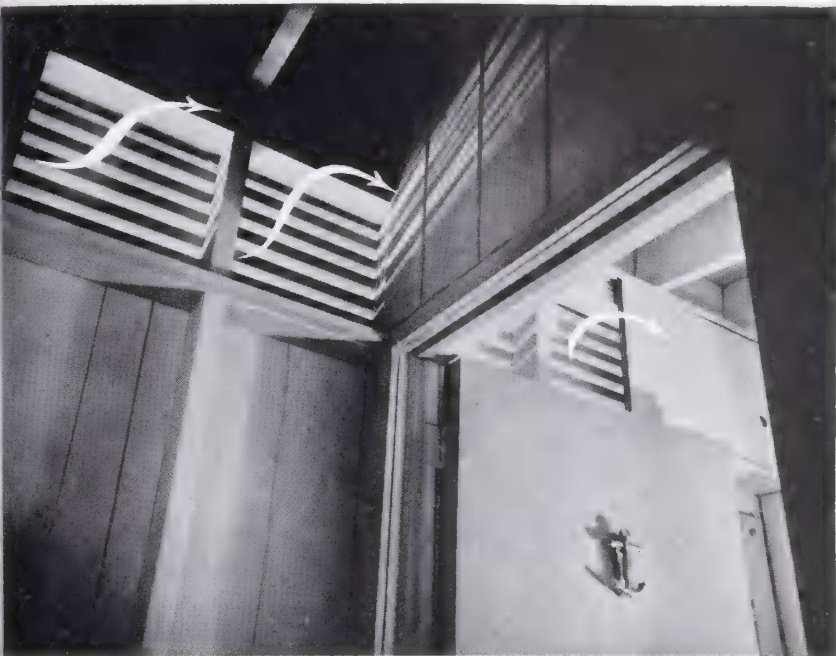

The key to the success of our house is the modern handling of site and view. The traditional method would have been to bulldoze a level place in the dune to accommodate a boxy house. Instead we built on top of the dune with the deck skimming over it, and opened up the house with a glass wall to take full advantage of the sea. Thus normal view from deck and living room is of the far horizon. People on the public beach below do not see us, and we are not distracted by them.

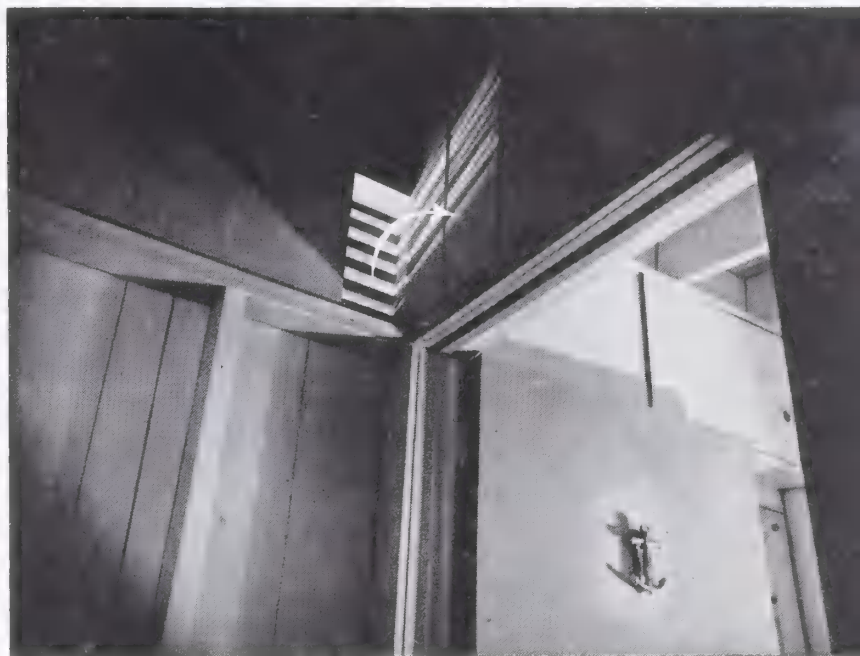

DRAWING BY SIGMAN WARD

It passes through them into bedrooms.

Louvers may be closed by sliding doors.

See how we have true cross ventilation in all rooms, thanks to the louver in the back wall of the living room which acts like a funnel to catch the prevailing breezes. They flow automatically through the louvers into the hallway and bedrooms. If we don't want breeze, we can control it by closing the sliding panels on the bedroom side.

Square in reverse. Instead of being transported from modern times to the Eighteenth Century, it was the other way around with us. Two years ago we rented a small house for the summer on Fire Island. This island is nothing much more than an extended sand-bar off the coast of Long Island. It lies in the open ocean. It is unmanicured, and, though it has recently become a popular summer resort (Wolcott Gibbs's play, Season in the Sun, having unfortunately contributed to the island's notoriety), it still retains the glory of direct contact with the sea. On Fire Island you feel that you are really living on the sea, that you are traveling on a small freighter and not on the "Queen Elizabeth." After one summer my wife and I were both mad about it, and we decided that we would like to (Continued on page 96)

Folding shutters screen the kitchen while meals are being prepared. When dinner is ready, the shutters are opened, and food is served across the counter which we also use as a bar. Bar supplies are kept in the cupboard below.

Known to some as "Trader Vic" and author of the forthcoming book, "The Kitchen Kibitzer"

From Lucullus through Henry VIII to Diamond Jim Brady, all the great gourmets in history have been men. All the great gourmet cooks have been men, too—Escoffier, Brillat-Savarin, and, in my humble opinion, my own father. If they'd been women, the French, who take a brisk and logical view of almost everything and especially the face-feeding business, would have spelled the word gourmette. Doesn't that make sense to any of you guys who'd as soon be caught wearing a corset as stirring up a soufflé? Matter of fact, I've never been able to understand what started the idea that an interest in food and the preparation thereof was strictly for women and panty-waists. It sure wasn't that way in the old days when bringing home the bacon meant that the old man had to go out and take his chances with a wild boar. And by the old man I mean the lord of the manor himself, because the pursuit of a good mouthful was a noble occupation, the mark of a gentleman, and it called for a stronger right arm than it takes to swat a golf ball. And you can bet your hat that those old boys, home from the chase with bow and arrow, didn't just dump the carcass in the hall and tell the little woman to take it from there. They supervised the turning of the spit first-hand. They were right in there basting from the word go, and knew a few things about seasoning to taste. They had to know their stuff to protect their investment, and to show the guy in the next castle that they could knock the spots out of him when it came to serving up a succulent joint.

You can get yourself all dusty in a library looking up stuff like this, or you can take my word for it that a yen to cook is in the same rugged tradition as jousting or going on a crusade to fight the Saracens. And let me clinch this argument by saying that some of the best Joes—and the biggest shots—in the country are terrific performers with a frying pan and famous for it.

The easiest way to break into this cooking act is to get yourself a barbecue set-up. (It's crazy and illogical, but everybody sort of expects a man to take over the hocus-pocus of a barbecue but not a kitchen.) And once the little barbecue (Continued on page 114)

Hearty Salads

PART II in a series of definitive articles on salad-making, a skill to master as your first step if you want to start being a gourmet

By Virginia Stanton

House Beautiful's Party Editor

Last month, I discoursed at some length on the mixed green salad, which I honestly believe to be the gauge of any cook's finesse with flavorings (and which I also believe any cook can perfect if he or she is willing to explore the herb and spice department and experiment with dressings). But this is only one type of salad—a piquant assistant, so to speak, to a heartier dish of meat or fish. It's important, but never enough of a meal in itself to stay the inner man.

But there are limitless ways in which you can make a salad a gourmet meal in itself. And if you are of the school that thinks salad meals are exclusively for hot summer weather, toss such old-fashioned thinking out the window, for you are missing a delightful variant for your menus all-year-round.

I give a slew of recipes later on, but if you're wondering what goes into one of these hearty salads, the answer is almost anything in the way of meat, fish, or vegetables. Indeed, after you read my recipes you may say, "Why, that's just cold meat and a salad," which is basically what they are, but presented in a new and, I think, more flavorsome, interesting way.

Leftovers—to some a dreary dib or dab they feel they must force themselves to use up—are to me an exciting stimulus to create a new salad dish. The usual method of using up beef is to make a hash of it. But for a change try a Salad Hudsonio, which you can concoct with beef and vegetables. (Continued on page 106)

The only kind of embroidery worth your time is that which you create yourself. When you create your own pattern, and style the colors and textures of fabrics and prints, you get the full enjoyment of the creative act. These two masterpieces, inspired by this beautiful moth, were made by Mariska Karasz, our Needlework Editor, who put her mind into free-wheeling and her needle into free-stitching. Borrow your Embroidery Designs from the beauty around you

You certainly can design. Ideas are everywhere around you. Use them and enjoy the pleasure of being creative

All you need to create your own embroidery designs is the eye to see. For putting down what you see is easy after you have learned a few embroidery stitches. Even though you “can’t draw a straight line,” in the art school sense of the word, you can get across your design ideas easily and readily with needle and thread. LEFT: Here's proof you can design as you embroider as you sew—all simultaneously. For the mat and napkin at left are sewed entirely with embroidery stitches, and these same stitches become the decorative expression of the shell motifs. The mat is hemmed with the feather stitch. The appliquéd shell is sewed on with a couching stitch and is decorated with more couching and Cretan and more feather stitch. The napkin is hemmed with a couched buttonhole stitch, trimmed with Cretan and couching. BELOW: Another example of how you can sew with embroidery stitches. The appliquéd border is held on with the Cretan stitch (basted, first). The napkin is hemmed with the feather stitch. The corner is ornamented (with the design of a sea urchin) with the Cretan stitch, worked closely around a center hub of a contrasting color. Everything—appliqué and all stitches—derives from shells, which you will certainly want to use as the centerpiece of your table setting.

The secret to hot weather garden beauty

By Dr. Joseph E. Howland
House Beautiful's Garden Editor

You don't have to keep your yard full of flowers all summer to have a good garden. To attempt such a utopia can easily kill your enthusiasm for gardening. But for reasonable effort you can have an over-all garden beauty that never fails or fades, no matter how hot the summer. Here's what you do. Go in heavily for sturdy plants with handsome leaves. Leaves can take the heat better than flowers, and they also provide textural beauty that is fairly permanent, in contrast to the short-term beauty of flowers. No, this doesn't mean that you forego flowers. You still grow some, but you re-orient your thinking so that you build your (Continued on page 83) garden around foliage plants rather than around flowers alone. Some of your foliage plants may bloom, a few, even strikingly so, but always think of flowers only as the extra "plus." Your garden must be beautiful when no flower is present. Maybe this sounds like a tough assignment. Not at all. All over America more gardeners are trying it each year—and succeeding brilliantly. The biggest hurdle is the mental block. Flowers have been made so all-important in recent years that pushing them back into (Continued on page 111)

THE WORK-FREE RESORT HOUSE

A resort house can satisfy all the needs of retirement living if it is constructed for all-season comfort. This house in Florida is raised from the ground on concrete piers to allow for the under-floor ventilation that is necessary to keep it cool and dry in the summer.

architectural device has been used to make it seem spacious. Both of the end walls are entirely of glass, allowing the eye limitless range up and down the bayou. Likewise the side walls composed of cedar louvers extend the apparent width of the interior, since you can see out when they are open. Though it is not so easy to see in, at one corner of the house there are two opaque wood panels to provide privacy for the bathroom, while another panel of obscure-glass louvers gives it light and ventilation.

Indoors, the master bedroom and bath are the only rooms closed off by full floor-to-ceiling partitions. The rest of the interior is really one big area strategically planned to make the maximum use of space. See plan, page 49.) A wall of built-in storage units (which serves as the living room side as a back for a built-in sofa) turns one corner of this big room into the extra bedroom that is so desirable in a house planned for an older couple. The kitchen has no real wall. The line-up of counters and equipment plus the cupboards above them screens cooking activities from the living room, but the space between counter and cupboards has been left wide open.

Outdoor living on the same level as the rest of the house is neatly taken care of by a balcony projecting over the bayou. The glass doors that separate it from the house proper are located several feet inside the roof line, so that part of this outdoor living room is shaded from direct sun.

Well-planned, built-in furniture helps considerably to make this little house work-free, as well as to save space. Both bedrooms have built-in chests of drawers, and the living room a built-in sofa with an end table all in one piece. The movable furnishings are of easy-to-care-for materials—wrought iron, glass, woven reed, sisal. Nothing has to be dry-cleaned or polished. On the other hand, nothing looks makeshift.

Most important of all, this house is well constructed for year-round living. The concrete piers that

Your semi-retired status may require you to go right on living in the same place you have lived during your peak earning years. But you may want to live in a different house. First there will be the economic reasons which Harvey Smith outlines on page 50. Almost certainly, you will need to reduce your overhead.

There are social reasons also. Your needs will be quite different from what they were while you were bringing up a family and maintaining a position in your community. You will need less space. You will need a different kind of space. The house that is specially designed to meet the needs of an older couple is a personalized house—one of many personalized house types we have developed in America. But the retirement house is perhaps the most personalized of all, since there is no longer the need to sacrifice present, individual pleasures for the sake of future benefits to the whole family.

This kind of house is becoming more familiar on the American scene as our population includes more older people. Twenty years ago we had about six and a half million white people over 65. By 1950 there were about eleven and a half million, and 20 years from now, it's estimated, there will be almost fifteen million.

It's also probable that this growing group of people over 65 years old can expect to live longer lives than those who have reached that age today, thanks to the progress made by the medical profession in solving the health problems of older people. This specialty of geriatrics is helping us to learn the real nature of the old, just as pediatrics played so great a part in helping us to know the real nature of children.

But you don't have to wait until you are 65 to build a retirement house. As shown by the houses pictured on pages 40 to 49, a retirement house can be a dual-purpose house, planned primarily for its owners' later years but also for various interim uses such as those of a guest house, a playhouse, a resort house, or even an income-producing structure.

Some people are building these houses, not as adjuncts to their own "big" houses, but on the grounds of a son's or daughter's house. In this way they can spend their later years close to their children. (Continued on page 94) embroidery is fast and easy to learn. It also lets you make your pattern with broad, rough strokes and without strained precision. It lets you be impressionistic instead of realistic. Therefore you do not need the practiced technique that would be required if you were drawing with pencil or brush.

Everyone has creative ability, but most of us are held back by the barrier of not knowing how to put down what we are thinking about in our mind's eye. But embroidery stitches are a medium of expression that can be learned in a matter of minutes. And there are all kinds of stitches to give all kinds of effects. There are filling stitches to cover large areas of space quickly with all kinds of textures. There are other stitches, like couching, which produce lines (like a pencil mark) to help you sketch in your pattern. Other stitches let you make dots, dashes, loops, stars, leaves, zig-zags—in short, anything your heart desires.

When you play around with some of these stitches for a while on a piece of practice burlap, you begin to see how you can compose with them. It is like learning the alphabet before you learn to write words. Not hard, but very necessary.

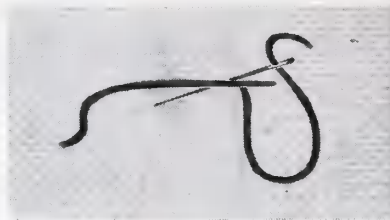

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL has proved, with rank amateurs who hardly knew how to thread a needle, that this kind of modern free stitching is a fast way to achieve personal expression (which is also personal satisfaction) while making worthwhile objects for the home. And working with various yarns and fabrics you develop your sense of texture—the awareness of what goes with what in fineness or coarseness, which can be an invaluable asset forevermore when you select clothes or furnishings.

Study the table mats and napkins on pages 84 and 85 to see what can be done with only four stitches. The "Stag-tip" handle knife (courtesy of Mayhew Shop) gives you an idea of the size of the mats.

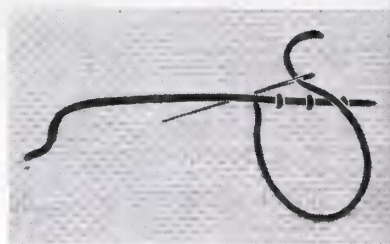

Couching

Couching is a very simple method of producing a rich dramatic effect with decorative threads which are either too heavy to be pulled through the fabric or too precious to be wasted on the wrong side of it. It may be used both as an outline stitch and as a filler stitch for solid areas. The method consists merely of laying your heavy thread on the fabric and catching it down with a finer thread.

Lay the heavy thread to be couched on top of the fabric, shaping it to follow the line of your design. If you cannot control it easily with your left hand, it would be a good idea to pin it in place. If the thread is not too heavy, you can thread a needle with it and pull it through the fabric to anchor one end. Pull needle holding finer thread through fabric close to couching thread.

Did you miss Lesson I, II, or III?

If you would like to enlarge your repertoire with additional stitches, you may obtain reprints of Lessons I, II or III in HOUSE BEAUTIFUL's Creative Embroidery Series by writing to the Readers' Adviser Service, 572 Madison Avenue, New York 22, and enclosing 15 cents for each to cover handling costs. Lesson I, from our January issue, explained the running stitch, the outline stitch, and the Cretan. Lesson II from our March issue explained the feather stitch, couching, detached buttonhole stitch, and raised stem stitch as well as the Cretan, ladder, and Vandyke. Lesson III, from our May issue explained the chain stitch including the lazy-daisy variations, as well as the Vandyke and the ladder stitches.

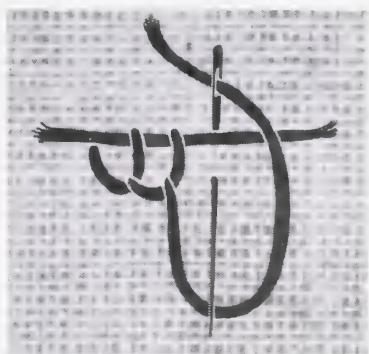

Buttonhole Couching

Instead of catching down your couching thread with plain vertical stitches, you may vary the effect by using any simple stitch that will allow the couching thread to show. The buttonhole stitch is a very good choice if you would like to make a border of couching, as I did on the napkin, page 84.

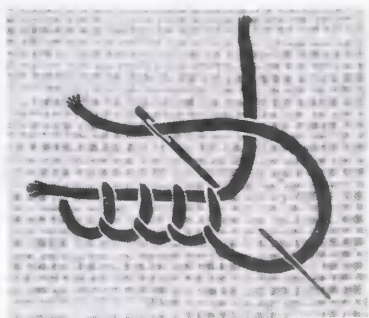

Buttonhole couching may be worked from left to right as shown, or from right to left. Lay the thread to be couched on top of the fabric as for plain couching. Pull needle holding thread for buttonholing through fabric below, but close to couching thread. Draw your thread around toward the right in a counter-clockwise direction to form a loop, and insert your needle above couching thread and somewhat to right of starting point so that it points into the loop. Hold the loop down with your left thumb so that when you pull the needle through it will cross the loop.

When you come to a corner, turn couching thread to make right angle. For corner buttonhole stitch, insert needle at same point where you inserted it for previous stitch and slant toward corner.

For first stitch around corner, insert needle a third time at the same point where you inserted it for the two previous stitches. Then continue as before.

dren and grandchildren but completely independent of the younger members of the household.

Another plan is to build a small house on the grounds of a club where you can use club facilities for dining and entertaining. It might even be a possibility to arrange to have the club staff help with part of the maintenance. Small houses of this type have already been built on the ground of at least two clubs in California—the Uplifter's Club in Santa Monica and the Portuguese Bend Club in Palos Verdes.

NOT every older couple wants to live in a house. Some prefer an apartment, particularly if they plan to spend a good deal of time traveling or visiting far-flung relatives. A smart investment for a couple in their forties or fifties would be to build a small garden apartment containing about a dozen units specially planned for the older couple's needs. They could be rented immediately or all but the owner's could be sold on a co-operative basis. In addition to the individual apartments, such a building might well include one or two community rooms plus some guest rooms and private dining rooms which could be rented by the tenants when needed. The management might also supply community services, a physical director, a trained nurse.

As a rule, old people dislike changing from surroundings to which they have become accustomed. On the other hand, the neighborhood where you live during your peak earning years may be quite unsuitable for a life of retirement. That's all the more reason why you should decide now where you would like to spend your later years and become familiar with the place and the people before you move there for good.

Certainly a mild and equable climate is desirable for most older people if it is at all possible. That's why the vacation house is so often planned as the retirement house. But the location should not be too isolated. The older you get the more you will want to be able to see people easily and frequently, without having too close relationships forced upon you. Likewise, you should not be situated so far off the beaten track that you might have an accident without anyone's discovering it for days. On the other hand, you will certainly want to be free from disturbing influences like heavy traffic or noisy, inconsiderate neighbors.

Just because the retirement house is a highly personalized house, there is no formula for it that would meet the needs of every older couple. As people get older they become more fully developed individuals with more individual requirements. But no matter how much retirement houses may vary to meet these personal requirements, they should have a few basic characteristics.

Above all, the retirement house should be small. Not only is a superfluity of space unnecessary, it serves to increase the financial and maintenance burden. The house should be all on one floor and preferably include some outdoor living space that is likewise accessible without having to go up or down stairs.

It should be as easy as possible to maintain, both indoors and out, without the help of servants. Indoors this means convenience as well as easy cleanability, since convenience of equipment and storage is one of the best accident preventives. Outdoors, it means having little or no lawn or gardens—unless one of the owners looks forward to gardening as one of the pleasures of his or her declining years. In that case it should be only as large as one person can tend easily without being weighed down by a burden of responsibility.

IF YOU are planning a retirement house while your children are still at home, it may be difficult to realize that the needs of an adult couple without children are considerably different from those of a family. For one thing, there is less need for privacy of one person from another. If you want to write or study, listen to music, or concentrate seriously on a hobby, you will be able to do it in the general living area without fear of interruption or distraction. That means that you can plan a highly personalized house without going to the expense of additional space for private pursuits. But even though they don't require extra space, such activities will call for certain other provisions such as proper lighting or conveniently located storage, if you want to enjoy them to the full.

If you can afford more than minimum space, it should probably be allotted to a guest room. While guest rooms have become somewhat of a luxury for the growing family, because of today's construction costs, they fill a more functional place in the lives of a retired couple. Older people usually like to be visited by their children and grandchildren, as well as the old congenial friends whose company they now have time to enjoy. In addition, a guest room can be almost a lifesaver if there is a sudden need for a nurse or a full-time companion.

ONE thing a retirement house should not do is make you feel tied down. Your house should be such that you can pick up and leave whenever you feel like it, and know that it will be safe and cared for while you are gone.

Now study the guest house in the garden shown on page 41, and see how easily this type of house may be converted to meet the needs of retirement. Following are the materials used in its construction:

The Cretan Stitch

The Cretan stitch is much more simple to work than you would guess from the intricate effect it creates. It is primarily a filler stitch. The diagrams show how it may be worked from top to bottom of the fabric, but you will discover that it is possible, and sometimes more convenient, to turn your work around so that you are really working from side to side.

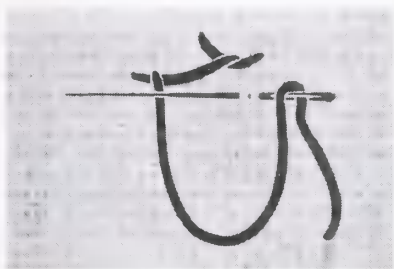

To start the Cretan stitch, pull thread through fabric near top. This starting point will mark the beginning of an imaginary line of your row of stitching. Carry thread around to right and pass needle under a few threads of fabric on a horizontal line a little below the starting point. The needle should be turned back toward the center and carried across the slack thread.

Now make a similar stitch on the left side of the imaginary center line, with the needle pointing back to the right.

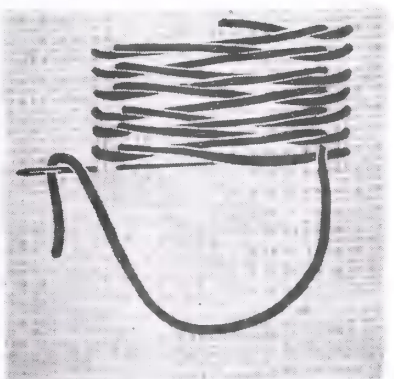

Your third Cretan stitch will be on the right of the center. Your needle must be drawn across the slack thread each time in order to produce the twisted effect.

When working from top to bottom each stitch should be taken a little below the one you have just made on the other side of the imaginary center line, rather than directly opposite it.

You can vary the basic Cretan stitch by increasing the distance of the stitches from the center line, but keeping those on the same side of the line fairly close to each other. This will produce the intricate-looking twisted texture you see here. Or you could fill in a circle by gradually increasing the distance from the center line and then decreasing it.

build a summer house there. We had never owned a house before.

For many years I had been an enthusiastic reader of this magazine, but only recently had I become receptive to certain of its ideas on modern housing. The need for a fresh approach to the problem of living comfortably in an uncomfortable age began to appear a real need to me. The more I thought about these ideas, the more I felt that I wanted to give them a trial.

So I asked for the names of some modern designers. I looked up two of them and approached them with this proposition: "Build a house for living by the sea according to your own ideas. Build exactly the kind of place that would show us the correctness of your views. I will have nothing to do with the plan. All I will do is to pay the bills."

A silly plan? A rash undertaking? A house built according to somebody else's enthusiasm, not yours; a foolish notion? No, my wife and I felt that we wanted a house free of inhibitions and that our "classical" background and habits could contribute nothing. We determined to take this gamble because we both felt we'd get something good, even if at first we might not recognize that it was good. We figured out that we could afford to spend about $15,000 to build a house on the land we had bought. The budget having been agreed on, we bowed out. From the point of view of architect and builder, we were the ideal clients: deaf, dumb, and blind, but financially solvent.

ELDREDGE Snyder was the architect, Thomas Church, the landscape designer. I took both of them out to the island at the same time. Snyder asked a few questions, some of which seemed to have little enough connection with architecture. "Do you play cards?" he wanted to know. "Do you like to give large parties or entertain just a few friends? Do you listen to music? How many guests do you think you want to have on week ends? Does your wife cook? Have you a maid? How much time will your son (aged eighteen) and his friends spend with you? Do you like to fish?"

Armed with this seemingly irrelevant data, the two men marched over the sand dune as if they were two detectives looking for the missing revolver. They measured the height of the dune, took a few photographs, and then announced that they had seen all they wanted. Total inspection time: 25 minutes.

While we were seated at the dock waiting for the boat to take us back, Snyder picked up a discarded cardboard box lying on the ground. Ignoring me, he turned to Church and said, "I have an idea—a plan like a clamshell, something like this." Then he took out a gold pencil and sketched on the box something which meant nothing to me. Church said, "Looks good to me, but let's get the privacy with a horizontal barrier instead of a vertical one."

IT wasn't until many months later that I realized the whole solution to our problem had been settled during that 30-minute boat trip. The clamshell plan, I learned, would give us what everyone wants in a beach house—an ocean view for every room. (A more obvious way of going about it would have been to line up all the rooms, side by side. But this would have greatly increased the perimeter of the plan, likewise the construction costs.)

The other important decision had to do with the way the house was to be placed on the site, which turned out to be far more important than I would ever have guessed. Our "lot" was no more than a sand dune facing the public beach. We had supposed it would be necessary to bulldoze a level spot for the house. But it was Church's idea to perch the house level with the top of the dune and expand its living space with a deck which would conceal from our view the public beach below us. Site planning, I discovered, is a fundamental step in the design of a modern house.

Presently the plans arrived. My wife and I looked at them and we pretended that we knew what they represented. We did not know. We showed the plans to our friends, who said that they looked wonderful. We said, "Go ahead."

My business then took me to Europe. My wife went with me. When we returned, we rushed out to the island. The house was nearly completed. Right on time—well, almost. Six weeks behind schedule!

The first time we stood in the living room, the floor of which had only partly been laid, and looked through the frames of not yet existing windows onto the ocean, the first time we saw this implausible mass of blue enter, not by way of a single window or door, not by this aperture or the other, but through a full expanse of the house—that first time we felt a lifting of the heart, an exhilaration which rushed at us like the waves that played outside and below. It seemed to me that the house had its arms wide open to embrace the ocean. That was, so to speak, the purpose of the house, to bring us as close as possible to that element for the sake of which we had come to the island. And we who had never lived in any but a square, boxy room, we who had never been in a room with a slanting roof, let alone a room shaped like a clamshell, understood perfectly what had been done here—and why.

For the first time, we realized that the modern approach to designing a house begins with a statement of the problem. Then you proceed to solve the problem on its own merits. There is little you can learn about it from the past, because the problems then were different. A modern house is not conceived in thin air. It literally starts with the ground, the view, the sun, the winds—then adds to these your own ideas on how you want to live.

We had obtained 1,622 square feet of enclosed living space for a little over $15,500 including the designers' fees. We have now lived in the house for a summer season. Often we have re-experienced the excitement which we felt on the first day. We still marvel at the house, we are still meeting it as an explorer meets an undiscovered region, we have in no way begun to take it for granted. Nearness has but lent enchantment. We have here learned what is for us a new kind of living.

THE experience, though it has not made us discontent with our city life, has proved to us that the modern idea—demanding service from both gadgets and nature, putting to work both the accumulation of human ingenuity and the array of the inhuman elements—is sound and good.

Perhaps I speak too grandly of a little summer house. But I am sure that the principle applies to any house, summer or year-round.

Two characteristics distinguish this kind of living. First, what I call its tidy informality. We can live and entertain in a relaxed, unbuttoned, informal way, without having the rooms cluttered and messy. Our Bohemianism is bound

A trio of windows in the guest room face north, but another window on the south side looks out on the ocean and provides cross-ventilation. Tracked-in sand does not show up on spatterdash pattern of Armstrong linoleum and may be brushed easily from the flat weave of the rug by Chenille Rug Co.

ois. We rough it in smooth style. Our guests are happy, we jump up from the dinner table, we serve ourselves, we sleep as late as we want, we slouch on couches, loll on chairs. Some of us converse in one corner while the others play cards on the center table under the bright light, and nothing interferes with anything else, and nobody interferes with anybody. The mechanics are easy, the space ample, the rooms quickly cleaned and straightened up.

The other characteristic is, as I have already indicated, the use made of nature, both pictorially and climatically. One of the most amazing feats of modern architecture—one that's hard to appreciate fully until you actually experience it—is the way the outdoors is used to add distinctive character and the illusion of space to a small house. The ocean is all around our house and its sound and color permeate every corner. In the living room the view is open only toward the ocean. Sitting in this room, you never get bored, for again and again your eye is forced to travel to the ocean outside. The four-star entertainment of sky, waves, sea, and clouds is endlessly mesmerizing and relaxing. At night in the bedroom you hear the ocean. When you wake up in the morning, its sheen comes through the curtains.

This house has brought us—veteran apartment dwellers cut off from the sky, the sea, the clouds—into contact for the first time with the universe around us. We have learned about things we never knew existed. That's another thing about modern architecture. It brings you into focus with the world you live in.

We also get absolute privacy—a unique achievement in this crowded place. The two louvers which protrude from the sides of the house shut off the view of the two neighboring houses. Consequently we get the illusion of being the only house on the island.

As to the use of climate, the house, I am tempted to say, manufactures climate. The entire house is so set that the prevailing winds are invited into the rooms. We have full cross-ventilation. (See the louvers in back wall of living room, pages 74-75.) At no time have we been uncomfortable. It is not true that it is always cool at the seaside. It sometimes gets mighty hot and sticky. Never, however, in our bedrooms. Even though they are "back" rooms on the side away from the ocean, whatever breeze

Thanks to the "clamshell" floor plan, even the master bedroom at back of house has a sweeping view of the ocean. Column at left of window is flue for "Acorn" fireplace in living room (see page 68). blows off the ocean is to be found at work in them. When we want heat, we light a fire in the cute little Acorn fireplace. Any time during the summer you want relief from the brightness and the sunshine, you can sit in the living room and you will be lapped by shade. The six-foot overhang of the roof takes care of that. The width of it was precisely calculated so that in July, when the sun is highest, it doesn't even reach as far as the glass doors. At first we couldn't figure out why each section of this shade device had an open slot in it. Snyder gave us the answer: to keep the overhang from behaving like a sail in the wind. During a heavy blow of which we have many during the early fall, the concentration of wind force under the overhang could easily lift it, and indeed the whole roof, right off the house. But the open slots allow enough of the wind to escape to diminish its strength below the danger point. This is the same principle, we were told, as the anti-spin slots in airplane wings.

When you are ready for sun, you can go out on the deck and get baked. The left-hand corner of the terrace (facing the ocean) retains the sun longest, and we have sat there in our bathing suits on a Sunday in October.

You enter the house by a sloping runway, a kind of gangplank. The ramp, to a certain extent anyway, keeps uninvited visitors away. I don't know why, unless in some way it is a reminder of the medieval drawbridge. During the construction of the house there were crowds of curious who clambered all over the place and often annoyed the contractor. Since the completion of the house, we have not been bothered by droppers-in. This is contrary to expectation, since the house has created quite a lot of discussion on the Island.

The ramp leads up to the apron of the house, a large deck which is an extension of the living room and separated from it only by full length sliding glass doors. Very shortly you forget the glass doors are there. The demarcation between living room and deck seems to be no more important than, say, the edge of a carpet. The fact that we have the same kind of furniture on the deck as in the living room adds to this illusion of oneness. You feel that the living room has no wall—or rather that its wall is the horizon.

It is on the deck that we do most of our outdoor living. We don't even go down to the beach unless we want to take a dip in the ocean or a walk on the sand. It is like having a country club contiguous to your living room. From the deck—deck is the right word because you have the illusion of being on a ship—you can look at the g ings and comings of beach life. Yet you are sufficiently removed not to have the people on the beach make you self-conscious.

All this goes back to the fact that our house was built on top of the dune, instead of in it. Because of this elevation, the deck serves as a barrier between us and the beach which is as effective as a high wall. Our view of the ocean is unrestricted. But the people on the beach have to look up in order to see the house, and the angle of their upward vision cuts off all but the outer portion of the deck. So our glass-walled living room is as private as if it were screened by an iron curtain.

We often serve lunch on the deck, and my wife, who is an early riser, takes breakfast on the deck in the silvery stillness of the early morning. For purposes of entertaining, it is equivalent to another living room. A dozen people can move about. Even a major cocktail party would be possible, though as long as we are healthy we will never give a cocktail party.

As to the furniture, we found that the two couches come in handy as extra beds for our son's companions, that the rope chairs are among the most comfortable chairs we have ever sat on. The long side table is also extremely serviceable because it acts like a buffet. When there are six of us, we place the boards side by side and use it as a dining-room table. The movable curtains are decorative but also do a fine job of controlling the glare.

You can see the sandpipers down on the beach. They are small, serious, and busy birds, and their purpose in life is to see by what close a margin they can run away from the waves without getting their feet wet. It is nice to see their pert forms repeated indoors on our draperies. It is fun to draw the curtains into various arrangements, but we never close them fully as we are supposed to do (see page 71), because even at night we prefer the presence of the ocean. We are particularly enamoured of the two fish panels of plastic made by Emile

Norman. They are not only beautiful but also carry on a kind of game with the sunlight, throwing daubs of color into the room.

One of the remarkable features of the living-room-kitchen arrangement is the seeming remoteness of the kitchen, though actually both rooms are one, in California style. It is due no doubt to the slant at which the kitchen is set. It is tucked away and yet not out of the way. The kitchen was provided with shutters which can be shut when our Frida is cooking or washing the dishes, and can be opened when she is ready to hand out the food. Frida, being almost part of the family, does not shut the shutters. It doesn't seem to make much difference. We never feel disturbed and we never feel that we are living on top of the kitchen.

As to the kitchen, I quote the proper authority, my wife: "Exciting with its coral-colored stove and refrigerator; immaculate with its plastic-covered counters and cleverly designed cupboards; practical in its compactness and convenience; comfortable with its window opening onto the street outside; always entertaining with its view of the passers-by or the inhabitants of the living room."

There are one or two minor faults. Should any house be expected to be perfect? The sliding doors don't move easily. The windows in the maid's room should have been larger. And the fireplace, though it heats with reasonable efficiency, is something I have not got used to. It bothers me to build a fire off the ground. I realize that it is hundreds of dollars cheaper than the regulation stone fireplace, but it might have been worth spending that extra money.

These are important reservations. Altogether the gamble by the sea has won. We have a house which we love, which works well, and which looks good. And we have learned something new. We have learned that man does not live by Crown Derby alone, that he does not have to cloister himself in the Eighteenth Century in order to have beauty. We have learned that new surroundings of new beauty must be created, if we are not to turn into museum attendants. We have learned that new problems call for new solutions. And these solutions do more to enrich today's living than do the solutions of the past, no matter how much we admire the traditional measures.

easy when it is melodious. "Give us a tune," is the slogan. We want to hear something we can sing or hum. But I will show you certain compositions by Bach or chamber music by Schubert which contain beautiful melodies, yet they are not easy to listen to. It is nearer the mark to observe that not all melodies but a certain type of melody is the easiest and most ingratiating. This type of melody is near the folk song. It has a long breath and easy intervals. It is "catchy." Its range is limited; it doesn't wander all over the scale. In short, it is singable. Such melodies are to be found in all kinds of music, including certain modern music, but they occur in most luxurious vegetation in that period of music which is called "Romantic."

There is another quality, one less recognized, which distinguishes easy music. That is its dramatic content. This is the quality to which we refer when we speak of "exciting" music. Several ingredients make up excitement—contrasting harmony, colorful orchestration, and strongly pronounced rhythm being three of the chief ingredients. In such music there is always something going on. It "sounds" and pulses. It storms and shakes, it weeps and laughs uproariously.

Haydn, for instance, wrote exquisitely beautiful melodies, but used no obvious apparatus, no strong effects to create his drama. The result is that Haydn appeals to the cultivated taste. How far more obvious is the drama that lies in Verdi, the excitement that is presented by Liszt, the color and orchestral glitter that a Rimsky-Korsakoff can display!

Combine beautiful melody with dramatic presentation and you come to the Romantic school which I mentioned. Here, then, among the master melodists who at the same time are great dramatists, you will find that music with which the enjoyment of music can begin. This is the "easy" music.

AS FAR as any guide can be given—and always keeping in mind that exceptions are frequent—beginner's luck leads to the following: Brahms, Chopin, Dvorak, Grieg, Liszt, Mendelssohn, Puccini, Rachmaninoff, Rimsky-Korsakoff, Schumann, Tchaikovsky, and Verdi.

Beethoven belongs in a category by himself. He is by far the most popular composer, but surely not because of any catchy melodies he wrote. It is his special genius to have written music that comes closer to our problems than perhaps any other music. He is popular with all people, from top to bottom, the unlearned and the erudite alike. Great as he is, he too is beginner's music. Particularly the symphonies!

As we proceed from the Nineteenth Century into our own, we arrive at music which, though no longer distinguished by the pure melodies of the romantic age, is exciting in color and orchestration. Debussy's color and sensuousness, Richard Strauss's tremendous sense of drama and orchestration assure them of frequent representation in the repertoire. Stravinsky, in whose work we would look in vain for the "conventional" melodies that still survive in Strauss and Debussy, is fascinating to us because of both qualities, color and orchestration. (I am speaking of Stravinsky's earlier works, of Petrouchka or The Rite of Spring, not the later ones.)

Strauss and Stravinsky are what I might call "almost-modern" composers. Here we come to a break.

We are confronted with the fact that "almost-modern" is popular, "modern" is not. I say that, though I know that certain modern compositions of Berg and Bartok, for example, are beginning to have a wider circle of listeners. In general the resistance to modern music is strong. Two reasons are given for this cold-shoulder attitude. The first is the traditional reason that one has to get used to the new language in which every new music speaks. The passage of time and frequent hearings are required to understand new ideas. That is undoubtedly true, though with surprising frequency the public has understood the new at once and has responded with alacrity.

ANOTHER reason suggested by some critics is that much of the music written today lacks an essential ingredient of popularity. Is it possible that the composers have lost interest in the great emotions, that they lack the warmth which a popular work of art must possess? Is it possible that not the public but the composers are at fault? Only time will tell. In the meantime, it is wise to keep our ears open. If we don't we might miss out on the truly great event—the birth of a real masterpiece.

The Feather Stitch

The feather stitch is one of the most versatile of stitches because you can use it to outline a form or you can use several rows of it, in straight lines or wavy, to fill in a form. Or you can expand it to become a form itself.

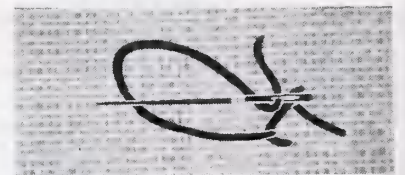

Many people work the feather stitch from top to bottom. But it may also be worked from right to left as our diagrams show. It helps to imagine that you are working along two parallel horizontal lines. Pull your needle and thread through the fabric at a point near the right end of the lower line. Your first stitch will be a straight stitch along the upper line, somewhat to the left of the starting point. But before inserting your needle, draw your thread around clockwise to make a rough circle, holding it in place with your left thumb, so that your needle points into the circle. Pull needle through fabric and across the stitch you have just made.

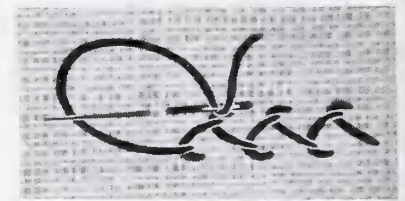

Your second stitch will be along the lower line, somewhat to the left of the first stitch above. But before inserting needle, draw your thread around in a counter-clockwise circle, holding it in place with your left thumb, so that your needle will point into the circle. Pull needle through fabric and across your second stitch.

Return to the upper line to make your third stitch in the same manner as your first.

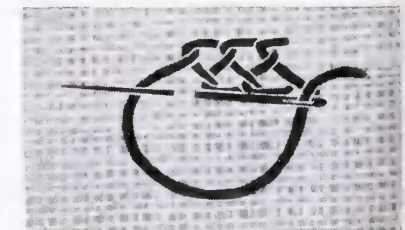

Continue working to left and alternating from upper row to lower row. Be sure you hold slack thread down each time with left thumb so that needle crosses the new stitch each time it emerges from the fabric.

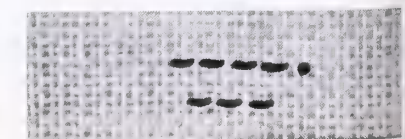

The back of your work will look like this. It shows you the stitches your needle will make as it goes under the fabric. Dot indicates starting point.

This is the closed feather stitch—a variation you can make by eliminating the spaces between the stitches. Each new stitch begins where the previous stitch on the same line ends.

On the back of the closed feather, your stitches will be close together.

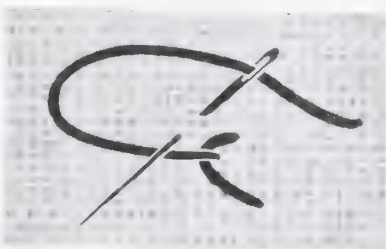

Another variation is the slanted feather stitch, the version which is perhaps the most familiar to you. You can get this effect by slanting the needle toward the center each time you make a stitch. In doing this stitch, it may be helpful to imagine that you are working between four parallel lines with equal spaces between them. Your upper stitches will slant between the two top lines; your lower stitches between the two bottom lines. The space between the upper and lower stitches will be about the same as the depth of the stitches themselves.

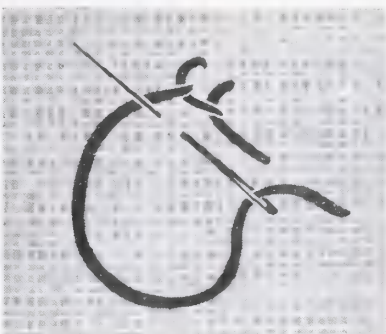

The back of the slanted feather stitch will look like this. You can also use this as a diagram to show the relative spacing of the stitches.

The double feather stitch is a variation of the slanted feather which is made in the same basic manner. After you have made your first stitch, slanting your needle toward the center from the top line, take a second stitch, a little above and to the left of it, but slanting your needle in the same direction. Your needle should emerge from the fabric on a line with the top of your first stitch.

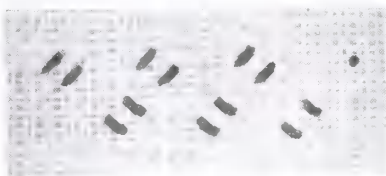

Drop down to the lower line and take your third stitch slanting your needle upwards so that it emerges from the fabric on a line with the bottom of your second stitch.

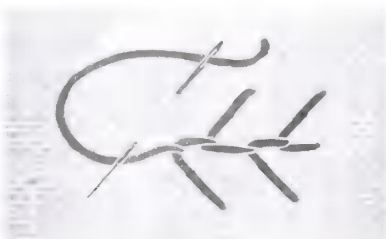

Your fourth stitch, slanting in the same direction as your third stitch, would start on the bottom line, that is, the same line on which you started your work.

This is how the double slanted feather stitch will look on the back. The dot is your starting point.

This is the spine or backbone variation of the slanted feather stitch. To get this effect you eliminate the space between the upper and lower stitches. As you make each stitch, your needle emerges from the fabric close to an imaginary center line.

I find that a salad of vegetables lets you serve them at their peak of goodness without the worry of wondering whether they will be over-cooked to sagging limpness. I cook the vegetables ahead of time, removing them from the flame at just the right point of crispness. Then I marinate them in salad dressing and keep them in the refrigerator until serving.

Canned boiled onions, drained and marinated in a French dressing, cooled, and then sprinkled generously with chopped parsley, are a terrific addition to a salad. Canned beets, asparagus, artichokes, celery—in fact any of your favorite frozen or tinned vegetables are delicious. But all vegetables, fresh cooked, tinned, or frozen, should be marinated for at least two to four hours in French dressing before serving. By marinated I mean covered with the French dressing you are going to use on the salad, and stored in a covered container until it's time to use them. The vegetables soak up the dressing and become a delicacy. It doesn't hurt them to marinate overnight. Then you can pour off the French dressing and use it for the lettuces in your salad. With canned vegetables, drain them and rinse them off with cold water before marinating. They need longer marinating than fresh vegetables.

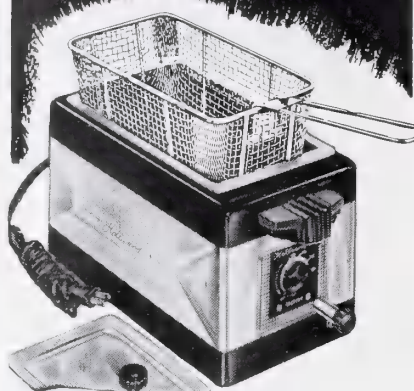

Avocados are invaluable ingredients of hearty salads (of any salads), because they have a taste affinity for so many different things—fruit, chicken, and fish. A glamorous platter of gracefully shaped avocado halves stuffed with melon balls or jellied consommé or tomato aspic surrounding chicken or seafood is a handsome salad. If you fill avocados with shellfish, use a French dressing flavored with tarragon vinegar or with lime juice in place of vinegar.

LAST month I listed salad herbs, some of which you might grow in your own garden. Briefly, I think you need parsley, chives, burnet (a cucumber flavor wonderful with all fish), lovage (celery-like and wonderful in all salads and cottage cheese), tarragon which compliments both fish and chicken, and dill (specially good with fish, and in salads where you use smoked meats).

Take a new look at your storage or supply shelves to see what you can extend into a salad that perhaps you have never thought of before. Try smoked turkey in a salad, for instance. Or such things as mushrooms or smoked oysters. These give a subtle, unexpected flavor to salads. Tomato aspic (I specially like Glorietta brand tinned aspic, put out by the Santa Clara Packing Co., San Jose, Calif.) and jellied cranberry sauce are colorful additions to a salad.

For most hearty salads I prepare a salad platter rather than a salad bowl. Select a large flat wooden tray with an edge about an inch deep. If you can't find a tray that fills the bill, use china "chop plates." If you can find them with an edge, so much the better, for that keeps the salad from falling over the rim.

As a base for these salad platters, curly lettuce broken or torn in four-inch lengths or longer are good. A row of red lettuces around the platter gives a color lift. Inner tiny baby leaves can be scattered around the tray as decorations and I think there should be always broken chunks of iceberg lettuce particularly since the men like it.

For our first salad let's dream up a chicken deal. Stuffed eggs are good with cold chicken, as are sliced tomatoes, freshly cooked cooled asparagus, and avocado curls (made by cutting the avocado in half, taking out the seed, and spooning out the smooth pulp). Chopped celery sprinkled on the avocado gives a crunchy texture to the otherwise soft avocado. Marinate the sliced tomatoes and the asparagus, and have your salad greens all prepared. Even the day before you can stuff the eggs and store them in the refrigerator.

Arrange the bed of lettuce on your tray with care. Do this an hour or two before your guests arrive. Cover with wax paper and then with a damp tea towel and store in the refrigerator.

Slice the chicken (or turkey), and arrange around the outside of your tray, or around half the tray. Around the other half arrange the asparagus, with the tips facing out. Don't mind if the dressing from the marinade is spilled into the lettuce because it will add to the flavor. Then arrange a row of sliced tomatoes around the tray, making a ring of red color. Sprinkle with chopped chives and freshly ground pepper. In the center of the tray put your chunks of broken lettuces and over the top put the avocado curls with chopped celery. Serve at once and with two sauce boats of dressing, one French and one sour cream, so that each guest may have more dressing if he wishes.

Hot biscuits, or "Brown and Serve" rolls, or hot cornbread are delicious with this platter.

French Dressing

- 1 shallot
- 1 teaspoon Mei Yen or M.S.G. (Mono-sodium glutamate)
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
- 1/8 cup white wine vinegar, tarragon flavored
- 2/3 cup olive oil
- 1 tablespoon Pernod (optional)
- 1/4 teaspoon dry mustard

Mix as usual, mashing the shallot in a mortar with a pestle. Add sugar, Mei Yen, salt, pepper, and mustard. Then add the wine vinegar and let stand for a few minutes. Put all this in a Pyrex pitcher and stir while slowly adding olive oil.

Sour Cream Dressing

- 1/2 pint commercially soured cream
- 1 shallot or small green onion
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon Java cracked pepper (Spice Islands), or freshly ground pepper
- 1 tablespoon chopped chives
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley
- 1 dash Cayenne (this is hotter than hot; use sparingly)
- 2 tablespoons white wine tarragon vinegar
- 1/4 cup olive oil

Mash shallot with sugar and salt in a mortar. Add pepper and Cayenne, then mix this into sour cream. Add vinegar and oil alternately and very slowly. This is a must. Stir constantly while adding oil and vinegar. Store in covered container until ready for use. If sauce gets too thick, thin it with cream.

For salads try cold lamb, ham, chicken, and even the proverbial cold cuts purchased at the corner delicatessen. These all can be raised to the gourmet level by marinating or soaking the meat in a zesty dressing. If the sauce does not cover the meat, turn it occasionally. Keep in a covered container in the refrigerator for at least three hours or longer.

Beef Salad Hudsonio

- 2 cups diced cold beef (I prefer it rare)
- 1 can Trupak white onions
- 1 can artichokes (S & W Hearts of Artichokes)
- 1 can tomato aspic (Glorietta), diced
- 4 zucchini squash, not fat ones, cooked whole until barely tender

Drain onions and artichokes, keeping the liquid for a soup base. Cook artichokes in French dressing for three minutes, cut in half lengthwise, cool, store in covered container in the refrigerator until ready for use. Treat the onions the same way. Cook zucchini in 1/4 cup water and 2 tablespoons olive oil and two cloves of garlic, until barely tender, from five to ten minutes according to size. Split in half then in two-inch lengths, marinate in French dressing.

When ready to serve you can do it in two ways. Have your salad on a platter or mixed in a big bowl. If you do serve it in a bowl, it would be most attractive to have all the ingredients in separate dishes and mix it in front of your guests. If you wish to have a glamorous tray, arrange a bed of lettuce, red and green. In the center place broken Romaine lettuce, well tossed in dressing. Over that put the cold meat that has been mixed with the dressing. There's no need to marinate this delicious beef, if it is leftover steak or rare roast beef. But if it is boiled beef and not too tasty you must marinate it. Around the center of Romaine and beef, arrange drained onions well mixed with chopped parsley. Arrange, alternately, diced tomato aspic, artichokes, and zucchini. Sprinkle all with chopped chives and parsley and chopped fresh oregano. If you do not grow fresh oregano add some of the dried herb to the dressing.

French Dressing

- 1 clove garlic
- 1 shallot or green onion
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1 teaspoon M.S.G.
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon Java cracked pepper (Spice Islands)
- 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1/4 teaspoon celery seed
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 2/3 cup red wine vinegar
- 1 1/2 cups olive oil
- 1/2 teaspoon oregano (optional)

Mash garlic, onion with sugar in the mortar. Add salt, M.S.G., mustard, pepper, celery seed and mix well with the garlic. Add Worcestershire and vinegar. Allow to set for 15 minutes or longer, pour into Pyrex pitcher, stir rapidly, slowly adding oil.

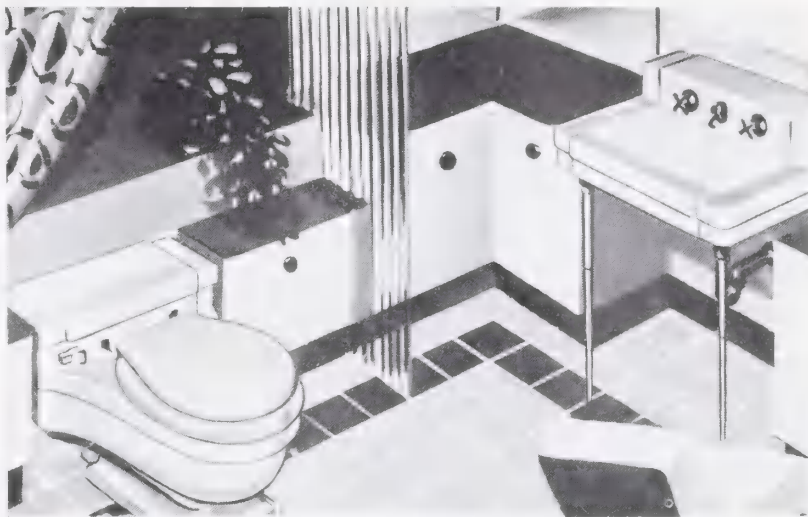

After you have marinated the vegetables in the salad dressing, pour excess dressing back into the bottle. Heating does not injure it.

This salad can be varied a hundred ways, by using different meats, such as lamb, ham, etc.

If I use ham, I like to marinate it, for it has such a decided flavor and the dressing adds a new subtlety. Cold carrots, lima beans, and baby beets are all good companions of ham. Instead of the oregano in the dressing, add a finely chopped small sweet pickle.

It's the dressing that lifts fish salads from the "very good" to the gourmet level. You must eat shellfish the day it is cooked, for its delicate flavor vanishes rapidly.

Crab Louis

Get freshly cooked crabs and have them cleaned. Remove meat from shells (this takes time, but it is worth it), and store in a covered container in the refrigerator until ready for use. As the Crab Louis requires lettuce chunks, arrange lettuce chunks in the center of the tray, and put the crab on top. Surround this with avocado curls, then celery sticks and freshly cooked asparagus. For the outside row, tomatoes and cucumbers.

Louis Dressing

- ½ cup white wine vinegar, tarragon flavored
- ½ cup olive oil
- 2 tablespoons catsup
- ¼ cup chili sauce
- 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon paprika
- ½ teaspoon M.S.G.
- ¼ teaspoon dry mustard
- 2 tablespoons horseradish
- 2 or 3 tablespoons thick cream

Pour vinegar with the catsup, chili and Worcestershire sauces into a 4-cup Pyrex pitcher, add dry ingredients, beat well. Add the oil and beat until thick about another half minute. Add horseradish and beat a few seconds. Then add cream. Beat until thick, store until ready for use. Beat again if oil has separated.

I have such a delicious sauce for prawns that you can use canned ones and you won't taste any of what some people call the "tinned" flavor. Of course, the freshly cooked ones are the best of all, but with this sauce they are all delicious. An excellent canned shrimp is called Blue Plate Cleaned Shrimp, Jumbo-packed by Southern Shell Fish Co., Inc., New Orleans, La.

Norris Sauce Vert

- 1 cup chopped parsley
- ½ cup chopped chives
- 1 small clove garlic
- ¼ teaspoon Portuguese paprika (If you can't get this, use the same amount of paprika, plus a dash of cayenne pepper.)
- ¾ teaspoon dry mustard
- 1 teaspoon brown sugar
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
- 1 cup dry white wine (I prefer Chablis)
- Strained juice of 1 lemon or 2 limes

Mash the parsley and chives in your mortar. This takes time, but by putting a little in at a time and scraping it out when it is a paste, it is not such a tough job. Anyway—mash and put in your Pyrex pitcher. Into the mortar put garlic, sugar, salt, pepper, mustard, and paprika, and mash all to-

A good sour cream dunk is:

Sour Cream Sauce

- ½ pint commercially soured cream
- 1 clove garlic
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
- 2 tablespoons white wine vinegar, tarragon flavored
- 1 small bunch fresh dill
- 1 tablespoon chopped burnet or 2 thin slices of salted cucumber
- 1 tablespoon chopped chives
- 2 tablespoons chopped tomato (seeds removed)
- ¼ cup olive oil

Mash the dry ingredients with the clove of garlic. Add to the sour cream. Mix in the chives, burnet, and tomato pulp. Then slowly add vinegar and oil, alternating them, and stir the mixture continuously as you add them.

Here are a few secret flavor additions to your French or sour cream dressings for fish:

A tiny jar of caviar gives a definite lift to a fish-salad dressing.

A tablespoon of chopped capers added to a dressing for salmon salad is a delicious note.

A teaspoon of curry or a double amount of Mei Yen gives an oysterish flavor which is an addition to a salad of canned fish.

Tuna, Salmon, Mackerel or Fish Salad

In selecting canned fish for a salad, remember that while salmon is delicious, mackerel is very good and half the price of salmon. If you buy tuna, try to get it packed in its natural juices, for most of the packs done in oil are too rich for salad. They are good for cookery, but for a salad I prefer the natural juice.

Velera brand Jack Mackerel, packed by the San Carlos Canning Company, Monterey, is a delicious fish. This gives you only the center of the fish. Rinse off the sauce if you like, but in any case, drain it well. Cucumbers, tomatoes, celery and water cress should also be on the salad tray.

If you use your own freshly cooked fish, serve it in chunks.

To assemble your tray, have lettuce chunks and water cress in the center (if you are serving canned fish) already dressed with French dressing. Around this, arrange either sliced tomatoes or small yellow or red tomatoes. Then, on one side arrange the fish and on the opposite side of the tray arrange the cucumbers; to divide the tray put celery sticks which have been dressed in French dressing and sprinkled with chives and parsley. Sprinkle chopped chives (they are a must) and chopped parsley over the whole platter.

Sour Cream Dressing for Fish

- 1 teaspoon M. S. G.
- ½ pint sour cream
- 1 shallot or green onion, tops and all
- ½ teaspoon sugar
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 4 tablespoons apple sauce
- 2 tablespoons white wine vinegar
- ¼ cup olive oil
- ¼ teaspoon horseradish (Heinz Dehydrated)
- ¼ teaspoon dry mustard
- 2 tablespoons apple cider
- ¼ teaspoon freshly ground pepper

Mash shallot or onion in mortar with sugar, salt, pepper, horseradish, M.S.G., and mustard. Mash to a paste, mix well, and add to sour cream. Mix in apple sauce and then add cider, vinegar, and oil slowly and alternately while stirring the sour cream constantly. This can be mixed early, covered, and stored in the refrigerator.

French Dressing for Fish Salad

In using a French dressing with sour cream sauce, you must use the same basic ingredients so that the two will blend well.

- shallot or green onion
- teaspoon sugar
- teaspoon M.S.G.
- teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
- ¼ teaspoon dry mustard
- ¼ cup white wine vinegar
- ¼ cup olive oil

Mash shallot or onion in mortar with dry ingredients. Add vinegar and allow to meld for a while. Stir and slowly add olive oil.

Because our family is so crazy about chop suey, I ran up a salad of leftovers that made a big hit.

Chop Suey Salad

- 2 cups meat, pot roast, or boiled beef cubed
- 1 cup celery cut diagonally
- 1 cup carrots cut diagonally
- ½ cup green onions cut diagonally
- 1 cup mushrooms
- 2 small cloves garlic
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- 1 teaspoon honey
- 1 tablespoon soya sauce
- 1 tablespoon meat concentrate or ½ can consommé or Sauce from pot roast

Prepare your vegetables, cutting mushrooms if you wish or leaving whole if small. (I prefer mine left whole for they are so attractive.) Into the frying pan put the garlic, honey, and oil. When it is warm add soya sauce and meat concentrate or a half can of consommé. Add vegetables, mix well, cover, and cook from three to five minutes. The vegetables should be crispy. Put in covered container until ready for use.

Salad Dressing

- 1 small clove garlic
- 1 teaspoon honey
- 1 teaspoon soya sauce
- 1 teaspoon M.S.G.
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- ¼ cup red wine vinegar
- ½ cup olive oil

Mash garlic with honey and M.S.G. Add pepper, soya sauce and vinegar, then add olive oil, stirring the brew rapidly. Store in a bottle until ready for use. Be sure to add sauce from vegetables before dressing the salad.

When ready to assemble salad, arrange Romaine lettuce around tray. Have it broken in serving pieces. Drain the colorful vegetables, putting their liquid into the salad dressing. This is important, for the dressing should have that extra kick of the consommé and vegetable flavor.

Hot bread is fine with most of these salads. I have several favorite varieties. For instance, Sourdough French bread cut in generous "sticks" (make the sticks by cutting the loaf lengthwise and then into thirds). The pieces should be about 6 inches long and about 1½ inches thick. These should be buttered and heated, rubbed with garlic if you wish. Or, if you can get them, try very long Sourdough French bread rolls. These are easier to prepare and more attractive because they are uniform in size. Cut lengthwise in quarters, butter them, and proceed as you would with the bread.

proper perspective in our thinking requires real effort. But why go through life limiting eye appeal (enjoyment) to color alone? It's no particular trick to train your eye to register small differences in texture. But once you develop the appreciation of texture, you gain a whole new area of pleasure in gardening.

Garden color itself will take on a new dimension. You'll discover that there's no such thing as one, standard "leaf green," and that fuzziness, thickness, scalloping, and even changes in the physical size of a leaf can completely alter the visual effect of any one shade of green. So can changing the color of reflected light (as by painting a garden fence or wall). Pruning, too, affects apparent color, since it alters the proportion of light and shadow in your garden.

Shadows are very important to you, because they introduce a second beauty for each leaf, and soon you position your plants so that their shadows are caught on plain surfaces as they move with the sun and the wind. By exploiting the inherent beauty of leaves, to play big against small, fuzzy against smooth, compact against loose, thick against thin, you improve your ability as a stage manager. You create the illusion of more garden than exists.

Next, you should turn to rocks and pebbles—and sand, if it is a logical ground cover in your area (certainly it is for beach country or the desert). Exploit the beauty each of these natural materials can supply at such a low-upkeep cost. Texture again is the important contribution, but investigate color possibilities, too.

Be sure that the particular rocks, pebbles, or sands are just right for the part you want them to play. Be as uncompromising as when you select the plants for the composition. Then stage your materials smartly. They are just sand, pebbles, and rocks—dull, repetitive units—until used imaginatively and importantly as part of the aesthetic composition.

Texture beauty is much more subtle than the riot of color that satisfies the novice. But it's also more practical. It's a permanent garden beauty no heat can destroy.

TIMELY TIPS for gardeners

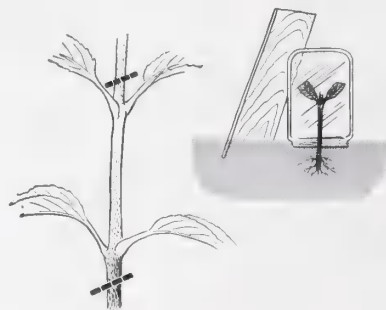

SKETCHES BY JOHN L. HILMER

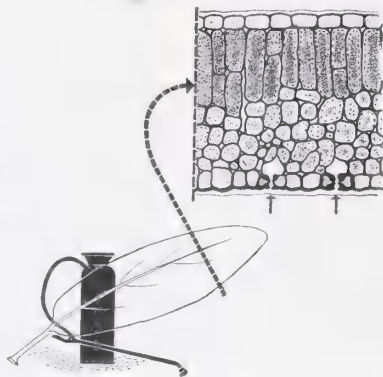

Roll up grass killed by grubs. Spray or dust whole lawn with DDT or chlordane; then inoculate with milky spore disease for lasting control.

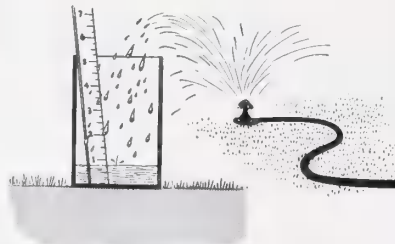

Summer-prune grape and wisteria vines threatening to grow out of hand. Shorten back to firm new wood. Make the cut just above a leaf or branch.

Make cuttings now from favorite shrubs. Shoots have started to harden; root best now. Insert in moist soil. Keep air humid by covering with glass jar. Shingle shades from direct hot sun.

Spray newly set-out plants with "Wilt-Pruf" to seal pores of leaves against water loss. Has no detrimental effect on necessary "breathing" by the leaf.

Keep sprinkler in one spot until an inch of water has fallen. This wets soil 4 to 6 inches deep. Then add 1" layer of mulching to cut evaporation.

CAN YOU AFFORD NOT TO OWN A RETIREMENT HOUSE?

when you can do so many things you cannot do when you get older. It will serve as a sampler of your future, less active life. As your tastes and activities change, you can alter it, if you wish, to fit in with your changing desires. In any case, it should be designed and equipped for comfortable, year-round use—not just for roughing it on occasional vacations or week ends.

A guest house or a playhouse can save you some of the money you would probably have to spend otherwise on clubs, restaurants, theaters and other forms of entertainment. If you build it during your prime years, you will also have an opportunity to observe at first hand its strong and weak points, and of strengthening the latter, if you want to. The best way to appraise a guest house is to occupy it yourself occasionally. A guest's eye view will bring to light shortcomings which you might never discover any other way.

To obviate shortcomings and avoid costly mistakes, impress upon your architect how important it is that your second house be simple and easy to maintain and that the fixed charges be low. To ensure the latter (if you build elsewhere than on your present property), select a location where taxes are low to start with and one which won't develop too fast, attracting young renters with growing children. For that, in turn, would mean new schools, water and sewerage systems, assessments and increased real estate taxes.

To reduce your expenses to a minimum—an essential after you retire—choose materials and equipment that will keep your maintenance costs low: an efficient heating system, insulation, wall surfaces that don't have to be papered or painted too frequently, stainless steel, aluminum, cement, stone, and other durable materials with little or negligible deterioration.

It is significant that the retirement houses shown in this issue are not houses which the editors dreamed up and had built. They are four that merely indicate the beginning of a trend. They are evidence that families are taking a new view of retirement, and have decided that if they are to have any control of their standards of living in their old age, they need to set the pattern for it in their middle years. These people have already determined how comfortable and luxurious they can be in their later years.

Out here in California where the zest for outdoor living approaches mania, barbecue pits are the rule rather than the exception. As a consequence, the recipes for barbecue sauces, laid end to end, would reach the moon, and some of the results constitute a gastronomical hotfoot. A few rare individuals, however, who take their barbecuing seriously, and with common sense, achieve outstanding techniques worth passing along. A certain group of them favors the charred steak, rare in the middle, and Sam Morse of Del Monte, California, is one of them.

For those who have not heard of this fabulous character, Sam Morse pioneered the Monterey Peninsula, ran cattle there in the early days and has guided its destinies for the past several decades. I'll give you Sam's recipe just as he gave it to me.

Sam Morse's Steaks with Mustard Sauce

"I don't know any better way to cook steaks than to get a good bit of charcoal good and hot, put the steaks on the fire, let them burn a little on the outside and when they look just right, take them off. I have a way of sort of bouncing my tongs on a steak as it is cooking. When the steak bounces, it is usually done. A good thick sirloin usually takes about 15 minutes to cook. It is a little charred on the outside and still red on the inside.

"I find the only successful way to make mustard sauce is right on top of the steaks. I take a big, specially made pan which reaches across my grill so that I can get it warm. I put the cooked steaks in this pan with plenty of pepper and salt on them to start with, cut a few of them in half so that they will bleed, and spread a layer of dry mustard on each one of the steaks. Then I use a generous amount of butter which I have allowed to soften in the sun or at the side of the fire, and sprinkle on quite a bit of Worcestershire sauce. I then turn the steaks over and swish them around until the sauce is smooth.

"So far, with several thousands of steaks, I have never had a complaint. There is one thing that is essential—you have to have good meat to start with." That last sentence is important. Broiling is one sure way not to try to camouflage inferior, flavorless, or cheap meat.

Not all barbecue enthusiasts live out west. A friend of mine, Hi Erickson, stems from Chicago, and his looks belie his interest. You'd never expect a guy all duded up in fancy alligator shoes and a blue silk shantung jacket to be so accomplished a fisherman and hunter but he'll talk hunting and fishing into the wee hours. He keeps a portable rotisserie right in his dining room and it's a nice touch to eat your soup and salad while watching your chicken cook on the sideboard. Hi's barbecue sauce for steaks has established his reputation as a satisfactory cook and he claims it is also excellent on spareribs.

Hi Erickson's Barbecue Sauce

"First, I start off with a good-sized portion of mayonnaise, then add chili sauce—enough to loosen up the mixture—then add a teaspoon or so of Kitchen Bouquet, some Worcestershire sauce, and some hickory-smoked salt to take away the blandness. By this time, the mixture looks like a thick soup and you are ready to apply it to your meat. I use a small paint brush and cover the surface thoroughly before popping the meat or ribs into a double grill which cooks both sides at once. I really think that this is the reason for the good flavor because the juice is all sealed in and the barbecue sauce chars on the outside and forms the flavor of the meat."

With the passing of years and their dubious gifts of middle-aged spread and graying hair, I have become firmly convinced that if a man is successful in one field he can be so in another, if he so wishes. I'm thinking now of my very good friend of Chicago, the late Fred Lorish, who was one of that city's leaders in the world of finance. Fred was one of those unusual individuals of many talents. You might have found Fred with brush and palette, working on one of his marvelous snow scenes, or he might be working on one of his masterpieces in the art most dear to me—cooking.

I'll never forget one Christmas when I was visiting friends in Chicago. Fred dropped in to wish us a Merry Christmas and brought a beautiful package labeled "Smoked Chicken from Hillcrest Farm." Inside, packed in pine needles, was the most delicious chicken I've ever tasted. If any of you fellows who read this can cook a chicken the way Fred did, you've arrived.

Hillcrest Smoked Chicken

"The equipment is simple for anyone who has an outside grill in his yard. Cover the fire grates, where you would normally build your fire, with ordinary bricks, leaving cracks—probably $\frac{3}{4}$ of an inch wide—between the bricks to allow the smoke and heat to filter through. Build a healthy fire in the ash pit. Applewood is best but the wood of any fruit tree will do. Hickory or oak can be used but they are more appropriate for meats.

"As the iron cooking grates may become too hot, it is advisable to cover them with a wire frame of some kind, an inch or two above the grate, to keep the fowl from scorching on the hot iron. A piece of wire mesh or even an inverted wire dish drainer will suffice. Now with a washtub of suitable size to cover the grating, you are ready to start in the business.

"Large roasting chickens, weighing five pounds or more when dressed, are the best type to smoke. Soak the chickens overnight in a strong salt water solution. When ready to smoke, wash chickens, sprinkle with salt and pepper, place on the wire grating, and cover with the washtub.

"Keep a medium hot fire, adding fresh wood when necessary. The top of the tub should be too hot to hold your hand on comfortably for any length of time, but not hot enough to sizzle when touched with a wet finger. To cut down heat, push the bricks closer together and close the fire door. The smoking process should be slow and even and should take at least three to

Double Trouble

A squad of gremlins moved in on us while our January 1952 issue was being made up, and some architects' names got switched around. On page 42, Architect John Byers was credited as the designer of the house owned by Mr. & Mrs. Kenneth McEldowney. This house was designed and built by B. Bernie Bates, Edward E. Bates, and R. L. Bates of Van Nuys, California. Mr. Byers is the designer of the Esther Williams house, which was shown on page 39. HOUSE BEAUTIFUL sincerely regrets this error.

four hours. The chickens should be turned from time to time and occasionally stood on end to insure even cooking and smoking.

"When the chickens are about half done and are turning a golden brown, put a large pan of water on top of the bricks in the upper fire chamber. (The fire, you understand, is in the ash pit.) The steam from this pan of water keeps the chickens moist and juicy. They will be delicious served hot or sliced cold. Being partially cured, they will keep under refrigeration approximately three weeks.

"I have used the same equipment at various times to smoke turkey, pheasant, and fish. Wild ducks are too gamey and, in my opinion, are not improved by the smoky flavor."

Barbecued Shrimps

Dip peeled shrimp in soya sauce and barbecue on a hot fire. Delicious as tidbits for an opening course.

Barbecued Oysters

Marinate large oysters in soya in which you have chopped a little garlic. If obtainable, add two ounces of saki to each cup of soya. Let oysters marinate for 20 minutes to a half hour. Then skewer and barbecue for five to ten minutes or until delicately brown. For tidbits cook longer.

Try a salmon barbecue if you have a way to get the really fresh fish. My father always burned the bark of live oak trees, which he let die down well to a bed of coals, before beginning. He'd have his fish filleted out and small bones removed. He'd place these on one of those old-fashioned bread toasters—the kind that was made of two grills placed together which held the toast in between. Put this over the hot coals and during the cooking constantly daub the fish with melted butter. As a dauber use a cheap fiber brush, or make a dauber with a piece of cloth on a stick. The cooking time of fish depends on thickness, so you have to watch what you're doing. For the sauce he'd start with a little broth or court bouillon made from the bones and head of the fish. To a small amount of this broth (say one cup) add one shallot, and a little pepper. Heat until broth is almost half the amount, add dash of tabasco, salt, pepper, ¼ pound butter, juice of half a large lemon. Thicken with two beaten egg yolks.

THE KITCHEN KIBITZER—HIT SHOW

Remember while beating in the eggs not to cook this directly over the fire but use a double boiler. A good twist to this sauce is to add a handful of macadamian nuts which you have first boiled for 20 minutes.

Bud Seevers is from Corpus Christi, Texas. He has sent me this recipe for Texas style baked calf's head.

Baked Calf's Head

"Dig a good-sized hole in the ground (in clay soil) and build a big mesquite log fire in it. When the fire is going good and the flames subside a little, cover the hole with a piece of tin to keep all the fire and heat in the ground. (If the fire burns out too rapidly it should be replenished as it takes a number of hours to heat the ground sufficiently.) At cooking time, the fire is allowed to burn down to ashes and coals.

"To prepare the calf's head, remove the hide and wash the oral cavity. Cover it with a layer of heavy paper and then thoroughly wrap it in several wet burlap sacks.

Place it in the ashes and coals, cover it completely with coals and hot dirt from the pit and refill the pit. Put the tin cover on and build a big fire on top of the tin, maintaining the fire until serving time. Cooking is entirely by ground heat and the foregoing process is an all night or all day job, the fire being started in proportion to the serving time desired.

"To serve, the skull must be cracked open with a cleaver to get at the brains which, with the tongue, are seasoned to taste. The meat on the outside of the skull needs no seasoning. It is rich, sweet, and has a flavor all its own and is probably the most delicious meat on the animal. The method of wrapping and long, slow cooking retains all of the flavor and imparts a special tenderness. Ordinarily, a head will serve eight to ten people."

Bud sent the following recipe for Carne Guisada which came from Jose Alegria (Joe Happiness), top chuck wagon cook on the King Ranch for more than 20 years.

Bud wrote: "For further explanation, Carne Guisada is known by several names, some of them unprintable. Most of the ingredients are hardly even mentioned in polite society but the ultimate result is most delectable. Calves' fries should always go into the pot.

Carne Guisada

"This is called Camp Stew, better known as Cowboy Stew and sometimes called Wagon Wheel Stew. Cut up four pounds of beef into one-inch cubes, add a pound and a half of the liver cut the same way and do the same with the kidneys and tripe. The heart and sweetbreads may be added if desired (and generally are). Put in a tablespoon of Worcestershire sauce, two tablespoons of tomato catsup, one clove of garlic, pepper and a chopped green pepper.

"Cook until the meat is partly browned and the juice starts to come out, then add a tablespoon of lard and one and a half tablespoons of flour. Mix well and add enough water to cover the meat. Add any vegetable desired.

You meet the most interesting people in my business and sometimes you make friends with people you've never even seen. Take for instance, Maxine Smith de Fernandez of Colonia Polanco, Mexico, D. F. We got acquainted through correspondence about a coconut product she is putting on the market. She wanted some dessert recipes and I wrote her for some Mexican recipes and the first thing you know it was Vic and Maxine. Here's her recipe for potatoes baked in hot ashes and coals.

Baked Potatoes or Yams

"Clear the hot ashes and coals from a place in the fire bed, dig a small pit, 3 or 4 inches deep and big enough to accommodate the number of white potatoes or yams desired. Put the potatoes in the pit, cover over with a little damp earth, then with hot ashes, and rake the fire over them. Build up the fire if necessary while the potatoes are baking. After about 35 or 40 minutes, test the potatoes by piercing with a clean sliver of wood. If the sliver passes through the center of the largest potato easily, they are ready to remove from the fire.

There has been added to the Baker collections a complete new grouping of modern furniture designed by Finn Juhl. The Baker traditional lines include Georgian Mahogany, Palladian and Far East styles, as well as a large variety of upholstered furniture.

The need for zone control is clearly shown in this photograph of the exterior. With this expanse of glass, the solar effect of a bright winter sun could quickly make southern parts of the house uncomfortably warm—if it weren't for Honeywell Zone Control.

HONEYWELL ZONE CONTROL CREATES

A Wonderful New and Superior Kind of Comfort

Now you can have the exact temperature you want—in every room—with Honeywell Zone Control

The handsome new home of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth E. Sutton in Apponaug, Rhode Island, is a superb example of how large glass areas can give a feeling of spaciousness to the average size modern home.

And it's a superb example, too, of how Honeywell Zone Control can give you comfortable, even warmth—in every part of the house—all winter long.

In developing the floor plan, Knight Dexter Robinson, designer with the architectural firm of Cull and Robinson, realized no ordinary temperature control system would do.

The large glass areas and the length of both the north and south outside walls definitely called for zone control," he says. "So I divided the house into a north area and a south area—and gave each its own thermostat system."

Today, because of Honeywell Zone Control, Mr. and Mrs. Sutton and their guests enjoy the right degree of even warmth—in every part of the house—no matter how changeable the winter weather.

So why don't you investigate Honeywell Zone Control? Ask your architect and heating engineer how easily you can have the new, superior kind of comfort.

The dining room is located in the north heating zone (shaded area on the floor plan). Even on a sunny winter day this room could be too cold—if there was any wind at all from the north. But Honeywell Zone Control guards against this condition—and the temperature in the dining room is always just right.

Owners say the Honeywell electric or electronic clock thermostat is wonderful because it turns down the heat—automatically—when you go to bed, and gives you a nice cool room to sleep in; turns up the heat—automatically—while you're still asleep, and your home is warm when you get up. Saves you fuel, besides! Ask your architect, heating engineer or heating dealer about the new Honeywell thermostats and other automatic heating controls that can make the heating system in your home a better heating system.

In the living room (southern heating zone) you get the true feel of spaciousness that's so much a part of the Sutton home. And from the large southern "wall of glass" you also get an idea of how rapidly the heating load can change when it's sunny one minute and cloudy the next. But with Honeywell Zone Control on the job, the Suttons' comfort remains constant.

You can have a new kind of house

1. Would you like your new house to be cleaner, quieter, more convenient, more comfortable, more suited to modern living than any house could be before? It can be done.

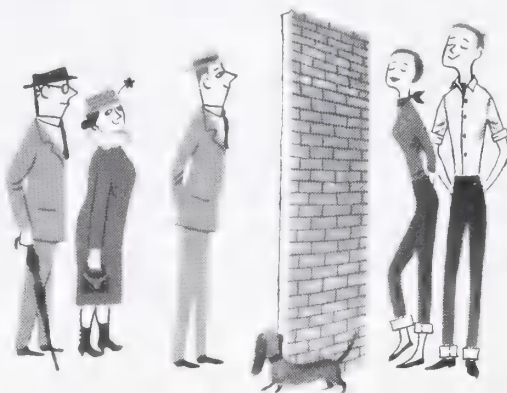

2. When you plan your new house, you can shape your floor plan in an economical rectangle. You don't need wings or jogs to get better ventilation because comfort is built-in.

3. You don't need the halfway measures to halfway comfort you used to think were necessary. Yes, you save money on movable sash and storm windows, screens, fans, louvers.

4. You can group your windows for a feeling of space and a better view. You can place them high for better lighting and ease in furniture arrangement. You can put them anywhere.

5. Or you can use a solid wall where the view is poor or where you want privacy. Such a wall will give you a bonus in storage space and let you place your house more freely on its lot.

6. You can gain privacy and space by putting your bathrooms in the interior of the house. They'll save you, too, the cost of a window you probably couldn't look out of anyway.

7. You can arrange your floor plan for your convenience. You can put your interior doors and walls where they will function best, instead of placing them to encourage a draft.

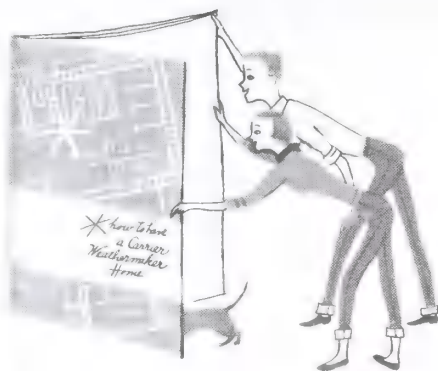

8. You can take advantage of the climate. Proper exposures, well-planned roof overhangs and well-placed shade trees will make your new house easier to heat, easier to cool.

9. Yes, easier to cool. Because we're talking about the Weathermaker Home. With the Carrier Weathermaker Air Conditioner that heats and cools. (You can use it in any house!)

10. The Weathermaker Home makes functional use of its air conditioning in all the ways we've talked about . . . and more. So a Weathermaker Home shouldn't cost any more.

11. We've only been able to hit the high spots of the Weathermaker Home idea on this page. But we've got a 32-page booklet which will tell you much, much more. Why not write for it?

Once the corner's on, there it stays—firm, secure and neat. No amount of Junior's jumping or restless twisting and turning can undo these corners. And because your sheets are trade-marked "Sanforized," they'll always fit perfectly—washing after washing!

Can't wrinkle EVER!

Here's sweet sleeping bliss—a crisp, smooth sheet that can't—absolutely can't—wrinkle! From the day you put a fitted sheet on until it goes to the laundry—you're assured of a smoother sheet than you've ever known before!

Easiest bed making ever!

Just put this sheet on—and there it stays secure till laundry day! No more corners to push in every day—no more straightening rumpled sheets every day! And the corners will always fit perfectly—if your fitted sheets are labeled "Sanforized."

COOL summer sleep!

Imagine a hot, hot summer's night—not a breath of air stirring! Imagine how you'll appreciate a sheet that stays flat and firm—never musses up and bunches around you!

Ask for the "Sanforized" label on your favorite brand of these new-type sheets. It guards their most important feature—lasting fit.

•SANFORIZED• TRADE ® MARK

Cluett, Peabody & Co., Inc. permits use of its trade-mark "Sanforized," adopted in 1930, only on fabrics which meet this company's rigid shrinkage requirements. Fabrics bearing the trade-mark "Sanforized" will not shrink more than 1% by the Government's standard test.

How to put twin beds in a sitting room

PHOTOGRAPH BY MAX TATCH

Twin beds in a sitting room need not be a calamity, as proved by the arrangement in this room. Besides architectural interest, beds actually appear to take up less space along one wall. Structural changes, including partition, bookshelves and trim across front make beds into daytime sofas; by night, they are conventional beds complete with books, reading light, privacy.

They Thought I Was Crazy to Ship

LIVE MAINE LOBSTERS

as Far as 1800 Miles from the Ocean

But I Have Already Shipped 47,694 of them and My Customers Are Delighted!

When I began talking about shipping live Maine lobsters direct to the homes of sea-food lovers all over the country—many of my friends here shook their heads. Veteran lobstermen told me I was crazy. Whoever heard of selling live lobsters by mail? How could they be shipped? For generations lobsters had been sold only through the traditional channels of trade—from lobsterman to distributor to retailer to consumer. But I was determined to test my "new-fangled notion." So I experimented and surprised inland friends by shipping them buckets of live lobsters.

I had my answer in the enthusiastic letters that began to pour in: "lobsters arrived in fine condition, alive and kicking" . . . "best lobsters I ever tasted; real, fresh-from-the-ocean flavor."

I started to advertise, using a modest little one inch announcement. It brought a rush of orders. Today thousands of seafood-lovers regularly order my lobster feasts by mail.

Why My Lobsters Have Real, Fresh-from-the-Ocean Flavor

Here's how my "crazy idea" works: You write and tell me the date you plan to have your lobster feast. I select your lobsters fresh from the cold Maine waters. I pick the plump, solid ones, about a pound and an eighth in weight, the best eating size, when the meat is at its tender, delicate best. I pack these choice lobsters between layers of rockweed in my Ready-to-Cook metal container. Then I put the container in a pine cask, pack it with ice and rush it to you by 1st class Railway Express with re-icing en route if needed. Your lobsters arrive on schedule for the royal banquet. You have only to punch a few holes in the container lid, pour in a quart of salted water and put the container on the fire—all without even touching the lobsters. Wait till steam starts, then cook for 15 minutes longer and take off the lid.

There are your lobsters, done to a gorgeous scarlet, steam-cooked to perfection in real Down-East clambake style. Good? They're heavenly. You've never tasted better lobsters. The tang of the sea is in each luscious morsel.

Live Delivery Guaranteed Within 1,800 Miles—For Date You Name

Let me know the date set for your feast. I guarantee to deliver your lobsters alive in time anywhere within 1,800 miles—or your money back. But please allow a week between your mailing and my shipping. Enclose check or money order for price quoted: express charges are collect. Complete cooking instructions and booklet "How To Eat A Maine Lobster" included.

Plan now to thrill your family and friends with the finest eating in the world! Share an order with your neighbors—the cost is low for such a sumptuous feast of delectable Maine lobsters.—Ed. Myers, The Lobster Man.

IF POLIO COMES

I will remember to Let my children continue to play and be with their usual companions. They have already been exposed to whatever polio virus may be in that group, and they may have developed immunity (protection) against it.

Teach my children to scrub their hands before putting food in their mouths. Polio virus may be carried into body through mouth.

See that my children never use anybody else's towels, wash cloths, dirty drinking glasses, dishes, or tableware. Polio virus could be carried from these to other people.

Follow my doctor's advice about nose and throat operations, inoculations, or teeth extractions during the polio season.

Be ever watchful for signs of polio: headache, fever, sore throat, upset stomach, tenderness and stiffness of the neck and back.

Call my doctor at once, and in the meantime, put to bed and away from others, any member of my family showing such symptoms.

I will not Allow my children to mingle with strangers, especially in crowds, or go into homes outside their own circle. There are three different viruses that cause polio. My children's group may be immune to one of those. Strangers may carry another polio virus to which they are not immune.

Let my children become fatigued or chilled. Overtired or chilled bodies are less able to fight off polio because resistance is low.

PANTRY SHELF NEWS

By Julie Polshek

Fresh chicken livers in serving quantities are seldom available; hence, those who fancy this delicacy look to the canned ones. The rub here is that I, for one, found these didn't pass critical muster. Capn's Corner, an infant enterprise in Camden, Maine, contended they had a chicken-liver pack that would dispel even my full-blown skepticism. Subsequent sampling substantiated their claim. The delicious morsels proved to be butter-tender and rich-flavored. It's equally rare to find livers so large and uniformly sized.

Capn's Corner's small scale canning operation and exacting standards are the essence of the matter. They're extremely fussy about the quality of the livers used. The processing is done in small batches and with skill. To assure themselves that the product is all it should be, they hold some livers out of each batch for comparison with those that undergo canning.

In addition to au naturel livers packed in a rich chicken broth, Capn's Corner packs two chicken liver specialties, deliciously concocted from regional recipes. One gives you the livers in rich brown gravy; the other dresses them in a savory concoction called Pira Sauce, which merges tomatoe bacon, garlic, spices, chicken broth and peppers to delicious advantage. All the varieties are packed in 20-ounce cans and priced at $1.79. These facts also apply to Chicken Giblets in Brown Gravy also available from this source. The whole roast chicken they also pack merits far more than this passing mention. Its stuffing, a regional one called Fisherman Stuffin' brought down the house. Just bread, crackers, and seasonings, but Capn's Corner has a special touch in assembling them.

The bird itself, a 3-pounder, succulent and rich-flavored and remains intact until it reaches the table heated and accompanied by its brown gravy. The price is $3.50.

Unusual cocktail snacks are a ways in demand and fertile imagi nations produce a never-ending procession of new ones. Smoked, pickled vegetables are newly arrived from Texas to add to the variety of such snacks. Quite an innovation, and mighty good munching. The menfolks, especially, indicated high approval of the tangy Ance fare and thought they should accompany sandwiches as well as drinks. The group offers a choice of whole string beans, giant green asparagus, whole okra, mushroom caps. There is an olive pack in the group treated in the same manner as the vegetables.

The vinegary flavor of the garlic-laced pickling agent dominates when you start to munch; the smoke flavor follows and pleasantly lingers as an aftertaste.

I wondered whether honest-to-goodness smoke was used and, if so, how infused. Inquiry revealed a smoking method worth relating. The raw ingredients are briefly blanched, then go to an old-fashioned smokehouse where they're salt-cured and smoked in the same manner as meat. A thorough washing follows, then a bath in a liquid smoke compound to undo the shriveling caused by the smoking. They're then ready to take on the spiced pickling brine.

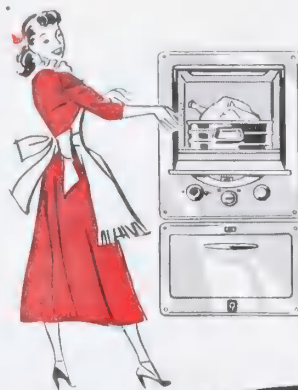

Quite a number of fine food shops have these Ance products on their shelves. But if they're not available in your area, you can obtain them by mail from Charles & Co., 340 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y. Two 8-ounce jars of beans or okra cost $1.80; a like quantity of olives or asparagus, $2.00, mushrooms, $2.98 plus 43¢ postage.

Too bad that Au Gourmet Sliced Pumpernickel in cans escaped my attention at the time I reported the Noack sliced cold-cuts recently.

But the weeks of picnic weather ahead give you plenty of opportunities to pair them up. To get back to what the bread itself offers: Its pungently flavored dough is made of pure rye grain and slow-baked for some 18 hours. It is rather coarse in texture because the grain is cracked rather than ground to convert it into meal. It's an unusually hearty bread, as dark as brown-bread. The loaf is sliced almost as thin as wafers, but the bread is so firm that the slices hold firmly together under the pressure of butter- or cheese-spreading. The round slice is perfectly sized for sausage cuts and hearty enough to match the meat's flavor.

It may strike you as slightly mad to suggest teaming up sliced meats or cheese with an oatcake. I think if you give the Scott's Highlander Oatcakes a whirl in that role, you'll thank me for suggesting it. The cake's savor also combines ideally with meat, egg, or fish spreads for canape use. The small fry will doubtlessly prefer their allotment spread with butter or jelly, and go for it in a big way. The tasty cakes should win favor where there's resistance to oatmeal-in-the-bowl. They're the finest I've encountered, made in the Scotch manner, in Scotland itself. The label indicates sugar but it's not evident when you munch. It doubtlessly does play its bit though, in the rich flavor of the cakes.

If you can't find a local source for the pumpernickel or oatcakes, Vendome, Inc. will supply them by mail. The address is 415 Madison Ave., New York. The postpaid price of the bread is $1.75 for 3 cans; the cakes, $2.10 for 3 (12-ounce) cans.

HOW TO LEAVE HOME

and like it

Never ones to carp at a farewell magnum of champagne, or a well-selected spray of bon voyage orchids, we still think it's time we did a little sermonizing on the subject of bon voyage gifts. The practical objects on this page, for example, are a far cry from the time-honored glamour basket of rare fruits. Yet they are a tried and tested tip-off on the kind of gift the modern traveler really thanks you for forever after. Their emphasis is on usefulness, light weight, and compactness, for porters are scarce and excess weight is costly. They also give you the reputation of being a mind reader because of their pleasant tendency to forestall the inevitable emergencies of travel.

Suggested, especially for Americans in Europe, are:

A comprehensive, all-round guide book, like Richard Joseph's "World Wide Travel Guide," Doubleday, $3.50.

One good book on each country to be visited. (Best to date on England is Richard Joseph's "Your Trip to Britain," Doubleday, $4.50.)

The return of the Luxurious Bathroom

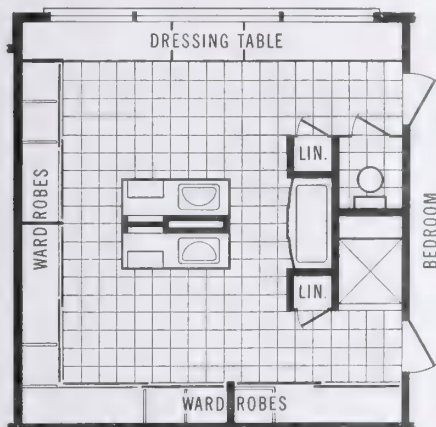

While the rest of the world has smiled at us, we have doted on our bathrooms. But, thanks to this "dotage," the average American bathroom is the best in the world, and it clearly reflects our attitude that nothing is too good for our physical comfort. During the depression and war years we neglected the bathroom somewhat. But now, with prosperity, it has bloomed again, growing both better to look at and more practical to use. Study all the variations on the next 40 pages and you will see for yourself what glamorous new heights today's bathrooms are reaching

This man's bathroom, as practical as it is handsome, is described on page 142

High colors, rich textures

Now you can have as much visual warmth in the bath as anywhere else without cramping efficiency. This bath-dressing-room planned for use by two people has back-to-back lavatories in plastic counters, separated by two-way medicine cabinets. Wardrobes lining two walls of room have sliding doors paneled with hand-woven blinds. Paul Laszlo, designer.

The revival of marble

The elegant, water-shedding material that is as old as the custom of bathing is back again, teamed with new synthetics and modern equipment. Here, the walls, floors, and counter-top lavatory are all of marble, while the built-in dresser is topped with plastic laminate. The round shaving mirror over towel rack is framed with fluorescent light and set flush with the wall that separates the toilet from the lavatory and dressing area. There is a built-in seat in the shower. (See plan.) This room has electric heat as well as circulated warm air. Henry Eggers, architect; T. H. Robsjohn-Gibbings, decorator.

Glamorous decoration

There's little resemblance between this room and the grimly sanitary baths of the Thirties. Yet everything is easy to keep clean. Putting all fixtures on one side saves space for elegant dressing area. Home of Mrs. E. S. Hopkins, designed by Jon Konigshofer.

Why do you bathe? If keeping clean is a grim duty, then bath time for you is probably a mad scramble to get results, and your bathroom, a sterile contraption designed to improve your efficiency. We have become so obsessed in this science-minded age with the hygienic reasons for cleanliness, we are likely to forget that bathing was an important part of the culture of many peoples who never heard of the germ theory of disease!

We may feel bathing is necessary for health just as we know we must eat to live. But we can also make it a pleasant experience, a relaxing interlude in the day's activities. We have developed dining into one of the arts of living—lavishing attention on the design of table appointments, comfortable furniture, attractive surroundings. We have learned to combine dining with other pleasures such as listening to music. Why not the same for bathing? Why, for instance, wouldn't it be nice to bathe outdoors in fine weather? The objections are immediate and obvious—no privacy, no conveniences! But even those obstacles are not insurmountable. The semi-outdoor bathroom shown on these pages proves you can enjoy fresh air and growing vegetation just as easily while bathing (Continued on page 142)

You can bathe in the fresh air when the weather is warm by sliding the glass doors between indoor and outdoor sections of the room out of the way into pockets built in wall of house. Outdoor area has complete privacy, is protected by overhead screening. But brick walls, tile floor, and extra lavatory need no protection from rain. There are two showers, one opposite each lavatory (see reflection in mirror). Neither shower needs an enclosure since all surroundings are moisture-proof and water drains to planting bed. Home of Mr. and Mrs. Lamarr Mitchell, A. B. Parker, architect.

The glamour of glass

its luxurious subtleties, to enhance the beauty of a bathroom*

The invaluable, eye-fooling virtue of mirror expands the apparent width of the dressing area in the Burhan bathroom. Double-purpose chrome grille is a towel rack while it compartmentalizes the room. Window beyond is draped in Fiberglas. Schweiker and Elting, architects.

If the bath commands a fine view with protected privacy, as in the Dettner house, what more beautiful light-giving device than broad clear glass windows that let the landscape do the decorating on a grand scale? Henry Hill, architect. Note how a wall of mirror doubles the view.

PHOTOGRAPH BY MORLEY BAER

Shower stall here is no gloomy hole in the wall. It's flooded with light, luminously diffused through its outside wall of corrugated frosted glass. Glass wall is held in a metal frame. Home of Ralph Stean, designer.

Daylight glows through a three-panel wall of obscure glass, giving glamorous light and privacy to this bathroom in the Leavingwood house. Suspended cupboards are supported by panel studs. Mirror hangs from window on metal rods. Twitchell and Rudolph, architects.

While it diffuses light and blurs see-through vision, glass block can also give a slick-surfaced bathroom the decorative contrast of texture. A screen of waffle-like blocks, partitions two parts of this bathroom in the Paul Trousdale house. Allen Siple, architect.

In genial climates a bathroom at ground level need not obliterate the outdoors completely. In the Austin Peterson house, walls of obscure glass screen the tub, create a luxurious natural mural—a silhouette of outside shrubbery. Cliff May, designer.

Light, filtered through frosted or obscure glass, can create extravagant, breath-taking effects. Simplest objects set against such glass become dramatic, like the mirror in Blake H. Watson home. Mirror also gets excellent light. James Roth, designer.

The revival of the Roman Bath

JULIUS SHULMAN

A luxurious sunken pool that doubles as either tub or shower. Since all surfaces are completely waterproof, including window wall out of sight at left, no shower enclosure is needed. Note design of hand-rail and towel-bars. Welton Becket, architect.

The kid won't mind bathing when they have a pool like this in which to float their ships. A simple tiled rectangle, sunk in a polished floor, pool has twine-wrapped grab- and towel-bar. Hillside slope gives privacy. Architect Michael Stousland's own house.

The sunken bathing pool is staging quite a comeback, thanks to radiant heating, which makes it practicable for any climate, and to modern chemicals, which can keep it sanitary

The three baths you see here are new variations on a very old Roman theme. They're obviously not suitable for everybody. But for many families, they'll offer exactly the right combination of luxury and novel good looks. And they're entirely practical. The three shown here are in Connecticut, Oregon, and California. Radiant heating built right into the pool (see sketch on facing page) keeps them warm to the touch. And double insulating glass prevents heat loss and condensation on the window walls.

Remember, however, that these Roman baths cost a tidy sum to build. They take up more space than the standard porcelain tub, and they're a lot more trouble to keep clean. (Maintenance is about like that for a swimming pool—periodic scrub-downs with a chlorine or copper sulphate solution.) And the glass walls demand landscaping for privacy outside. But if you can take these in good stride, you'll get a lot of pleasure from a Roman bath.

More about these baths on page 116

All the glamour of a tropic pool—the sunshine, growing flowers and view—with none of its inconveniences, are yours in a bath like this one in the D. C. Burkes home in Portland, Ore. A charcoal black tile floor is folded down to form a spacious pool—all of it radiant-heated by buried copper coils (above). Since walls are surfaced in wine-colored structural glass, the whole thing is as waterproof as a grotto. Other end of room (left) is finished in blonde ply-wood. Pietro Belluschi was the architect.

The biggest news:

The counter-top lavatory

If you've ever lost a cherished earring down the drain of the bathroom basin, or tried to control your language while an open bottle of shaving lotion toppled from its rim, you'll be quick to appreciate the advantages of the lavatories shown on the next five pages. Here is the biggest of bathroom luxuries—plenty of level, splashable counter space where you can put things down and know they will stay put. The idea goes back to the lavish marble counter tops in the stately houses built sixty years ago when every lavatory was a thing of great elegance and expense. But today's counters are also surfaced with tile or with one of the new hard-surfaced plastic laminates, and they can be had to meet any budget.

Where space and price are of little concern, you'll find custom-made counters so expansive that the basins they surround seem almost incidental. But for the small bathroom—or the bathroom of a rented house—you can buy the new counter-top lavatory ready-made like a piece of furniture. It comes complete with basin, taps, counter, piping, sometimes drawers and cabinets, and gives you custom-design conveniences at a mass production price.

The prefabricated counter gives you "custom" luxury in six feet of space

Counter-top lavatories range all the way from complete ready-made units to specially designed custom-built installations. Here is one that splits the difference—a ready-made counter of scrubbable plastic, present to accommodate a standard recessed-type bowl. Backsplash, horizontal surface, and raised rounded edge are all molded in one continuous piece, eliminating need of metal trim. Standard six-foot length may be increased by joining additional sections to fit any space, or cut to turn a corner.

COLOR PHOTOGRAPH BY PAGAN

Here's a typical picture of current bathroom trends—big counter tops with recessed lavatory bowl, plenty of elbow room for shaving or make-up, colorful waterproof materials that are as easy to clean as they are to look at. You'll find more of these counter-top installations, custom-built and ready-made, on the next four pages

Only 42 inches of wall space are needed for this ready-made vanity-lavatory complete with basin, plastic top, cupboard, pull-out step drawer to help children reach basin, plastic-upholstered hamper seat. Choice of 12 colors.

Counter-top lavatories have become so popular that almost every manufacturer is producing the necessary recessed-type basin in a choice of colors, with metal molding to finish the edge. This one has a molded soap dish, and faucets conveniently mounted on a tilted "dashboard."

Twin basins in a master bathroom speed family dressing, prevent frayed tempers. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Stean designed this custom-built installation for their own house with generous plastic counter space. Washable wallpaper and wool carpet add extra luxury to the room.

One long ceramic-tile counter top for twin lavatories unifies bathroom design, provides plenty of free space for handsome accessories. Medicine cabinets with mirrored doors are surrounded by fixed mirrors. Custom-built design by Alfred Browning Parker for the Clifford J. Rice house.

A ready-made lavatory dressing table that turns the bathroom into a glamorous dressing room comes with basin on either left or right. Wood cabinet has water- and alcohol-resistant finish. Hard plastic top matches plastic upholstery on stool cushion. Medicine-cabinet mirror contains heating element to keep it from fogging up.

You can have a number of bathroom color schemes and change them periodically if the background and fixtures are all white and gray. White tiles were used for the custom-made counter-top lavatory in the Aydelott house designed by Jon Königshofer. Clerestory windows above supply daylight; bamboo blinds control glare.

Practicality is no longer tied to the sterile, clinical look. This ready-made steel-based lavatory with plastic top comes in four color combinations with drawers at left or right of basin or on both sides. All have removable cosmetic tray and tissue disposal; larger sizes have partitioned medicine drawer with child-proof lock. Just as practical are patterned tile walls, tile floor, terry-cloth cover on chair cushion.

PHOTOGRAPH BY MORLEY BAER

This small bath, like thousands of others in most respects, gets real distinction from two simple things: a wall of glass opening onto a little fenced-in garden beyond. In fair weather, with door open, it will be cool and airy. For hot weather, an outside shower head would be perfect. Even in cold weather, properly landscaped, it will make a fine view. Henry Hill, architect.

A new variety...

The Garden Bath

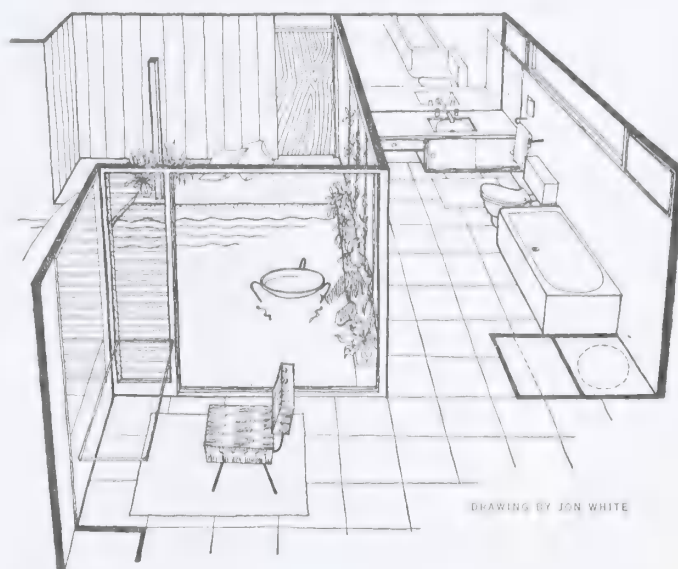

You can have something of the sheer pleasure of bathing at seashore or mountain lake in bathrooms like these—and in privacy and year-round comfort, too.

An L-shaped bath and dressing room are wrapped around a lily pool in this Florida house by Twitchell & Rudolph with really luxurious effect. The dressing room (above) is separated from the pool-filled courtyard by floor-to-ceiling glass; glass jalousies give ventilation. Bathroom wall (right) is also glass, frosted for privacy.

It took Americans a long time to convince themselves that bathing was not immoral. Even so revered a figure as Benjamin Franklin had to tread carefully when first he began recommending the regular bath. Little by little, prejudice against it disappeared. Bathing became a national fetish—"cleanliness next to godliness" a national slogan. But, although the hygienic aspects of bathing were long ago established, we're only beginning to admit that it should be fun as well. Probably because of the great increase in outdoor swimming, we're demanding some of the same pleasures—sunshine, air, flowers—in our bathrooms. Fortunately, with modern glass and heating, an indoor-outdoor garden is as simple in the bath as in the living room. Privacy, even on small lots, is merely a matter of well-placed walls or fencing. Thus, garden baths like these are easy to come by, and practical anywhere in the U.S.A.

The scrub-up bath has immediate access to the outdoors so that after garden- ing or riding you can shed mud and perspiration and change your clothes with- out tracking any of the grime into the house. In this easy-to-clean tile bath, sliding door separates toilet and shower area from footbath and dressing space. Note on plan at right convenient bench and wardrobe—ideal also for the kids to park wet coats and galoshes in foul weather.

This cabaña version of the scrub-up bath brings shower, toilet, and dressing facilities within a few steps of the pool. Flanking the hallway to the main part of the house are two closets where owner and guests can hang their street clothes. Towels and swimming gear are stored under the coun- ter-top lavatory at the right. Kenneth E. Anderson was the designer.

For gardeners and sportsmen

The Scrub-up Bath

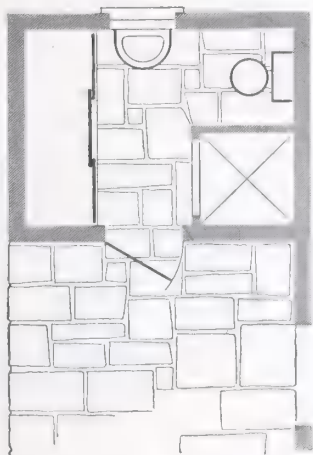

If anyone in your family goes in for gardening, riding, badminton, or tennis, you can readily appreciate the value of the scrub-up bath. It is an auxiliary bathroom that combines all the functions of mud room, powder room, and locker room. It is strategically located so you can come in from outdoor activities, take a shower, swap your work or play clothes for clean ones and proceed into the house, leaving the grime and perspiration behind. So, aside from being wonderfully convenient, it saves wear and tear on your house.

The scrub-up bath works equally well in winter. For when cold weather curtails outdoor activities, it serves just as a mud room. As you can see in the three examples here, the rooms are designed to take rough treatment, have stone, brick, or tile floors and splash-proof walls and counter tops. Your youngsters can easily park their slush-covered overshoes and foul-weather gear, instead of leaving the usual muddy trail across your good carpet indoors.

You don't have to build a new house to enjoy the benefits of the scrub-up bath. It does not require a great deal of space. Maybe you can convert an old pantry or sewing room; or, as in the sketch below, you can add it onto the house at some strategic point without major structural changes. More details about these baths on page 125.

Many a house has a side porch like this one that is suited for a scrub-up bath. All you have to do, using existing floor, house wall, and porch roof, is to enclose the other three walls, install lavatory, shower stall, and toilet in one compact square. Then you have a handy place to shake off dirt, shower, don fresh clothes, and hang your working duds in the wardrobe opposite the shower.

High style comes to the bathroom

Take advantage of your smooth, unbroken counter surface to set off a matched or varied collection of fine, one-of-a-kind overlay bottles or porcelain apothecary jars. An old candy-store jar displays colorful guest soaps. Far from creating clutter, such containers keep it down, if you use them instead of commercial bottles to hold constantly needed toiletries. By Mary Shepherd

Sleek new bathroom fixtures and counters that hide ugly pipes and functional clutter give you good-looking, carefree cleanability. But they also furnish the background for a bathroom as stylish and personable as the living room. For, because of them, the bathroom is now a basically well-designed, unified room which needs only a dash of imaginative pattern or a few just-right accessories to become as distinctive as a signature. In this sense the modern bath is like a well-cut, basic dress—handsome in itself, but strikingly chic when you've added the finishing touch of perfect accessories.

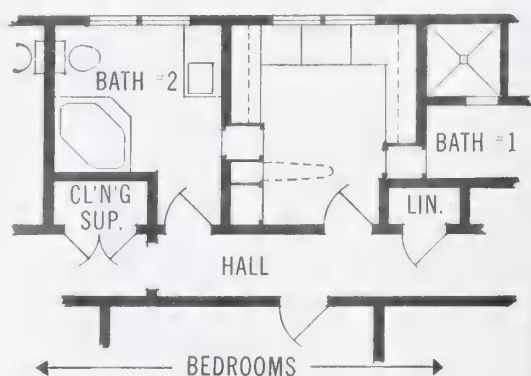

You can't have style without imagination, so pass up the banal if you are looking for accents to give the room verve. Carry out a motif if you will, but don't be satisfied with tired old clichés in pattern or material. Look for fresh, provocative designs, or free, interesting versions of old motifs. (See our high-style collections of fish and shell motifs.) Even functional objects like lotion bottles, soap dishes, and powder jars can provide the unique accents you're after, if you choose them as you would fine bibelots in unusual glass, ceramic, metal. And don't be afraid to put the unlikely to new uses. A shell can be a soap dish, a candy jar can store bathsalts.

The case for the laundry in the bathroom

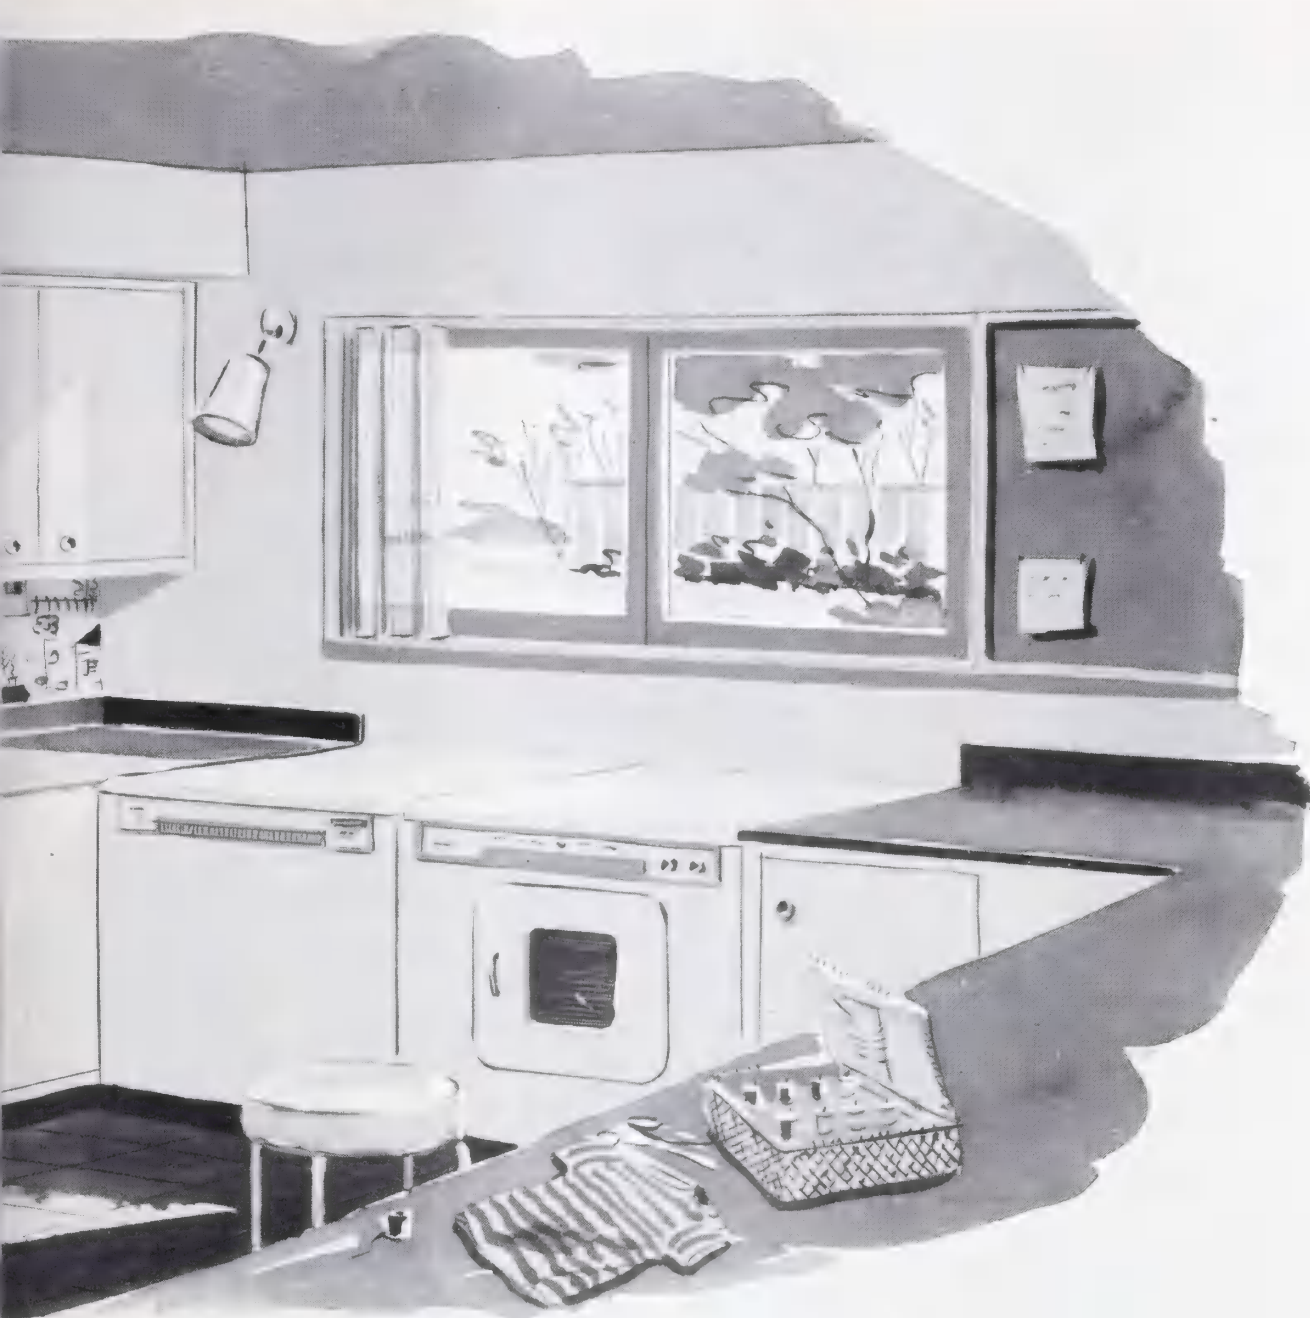

By Charlotte Conway

No law requires a laundry to be located in any one spot in the house. There is no longer need for it to be hidden away in the basement, now that we have good-looking, neatly and automatically operating home laundry equipment. Neither is the kitchen always the most logical laundry area, especially in households where the flutter of cooking is constant. And with automatic drying devices it is not essential to place a laundry near an outdoor drying area.

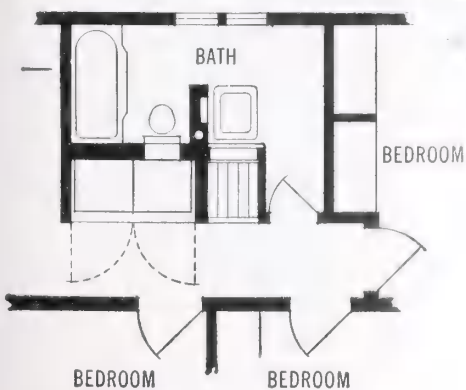

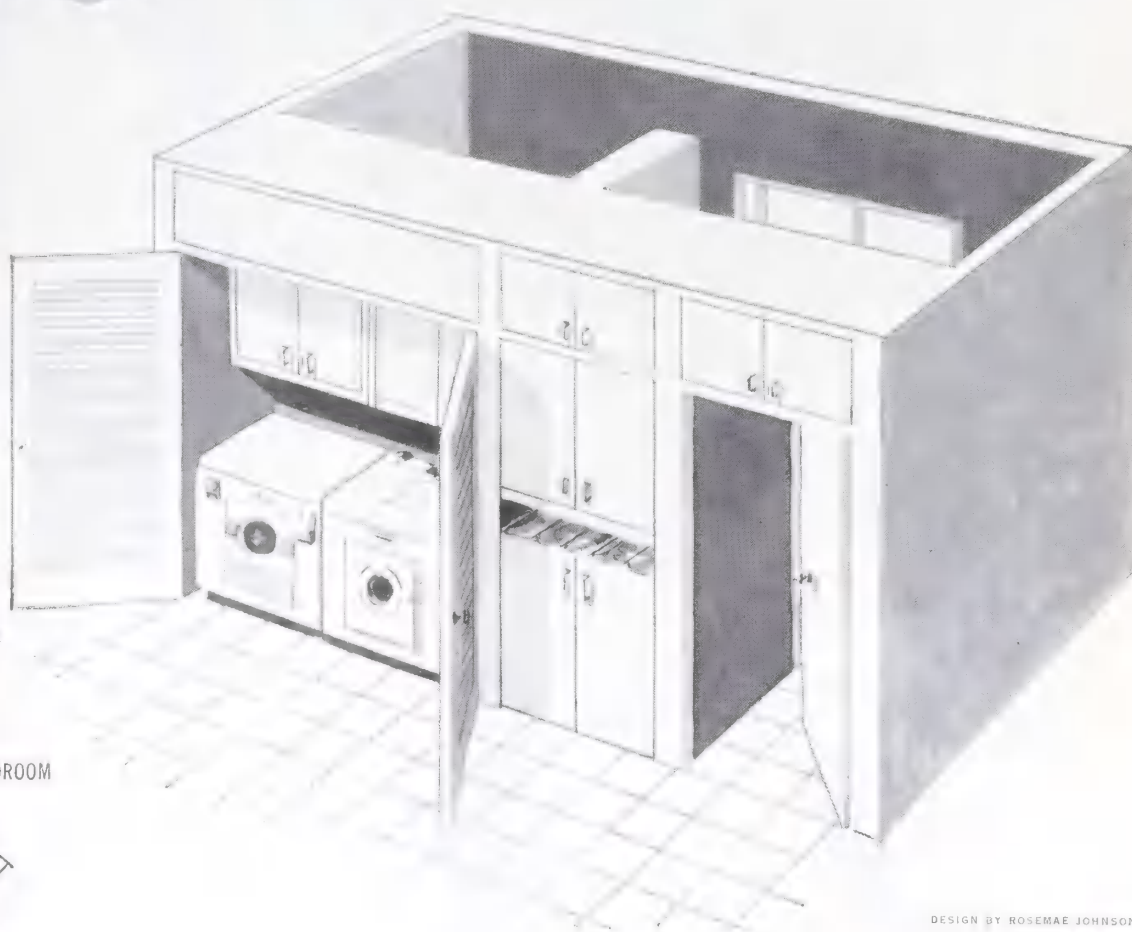

Where, then, will the laundry serve its owners best in convenience, time, and labor saving?

Where can it be installed with the greatest economy of electric wiring, water supply and waste pipes, and proximity to the water heater?

A combination bathroom and laundry may be the best solution in many a household. To see how feasible this is, study the four variations of the bathroom-laundry on these four pages. One sketch shows the laundry right in the bathroom. Another shows a back-to-back arrangement (right) with laundry in bedroom hall. Two more suggest placing the laundry separate from, but adjacent to, the bathroom. (Continued on page 74)

At first glance the bathroom-laundry idea may seem radical, but it's based on the kind of approach the efficiency expert applies to the arrangement of a factory or of a business office. In most houses, old or new, there is laundry work which no machine has yet been designed to perform—that is, the collection of soiled clothes and the putting away of clean ones. Most soiled clothes originate in bedrooms, always located near bathrooms, or in bathrooms themselves. Why not incorporate the laundry with the bathroom? It is near the source of soiled clothes accumulation and the ultimate storage places of clean clothes—bedroom closets, bureau drawers, and linen cupboards. It should save many trips back and forth and the time it takes to make them. It takes advantage of plumbing and electrical outlets already on the scene. As for the drying process, this can be made a matter of turning a switch.

Dish towels (not so numerous, now that we have electric dishwashers) and table linens (more likely to be casual mats or plastics except on infrequent occasions) have become the least of our laundry load, so it may now be more logical to tote them to the bathroom than to carry the heavier load to a distant part of the house.

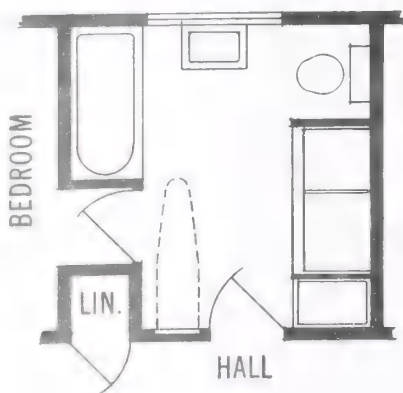

We urge you—and all architects and manufacturers—to give serious thought to this new approach to laundry placement. To succeed, it needs good planning, good household management, good equipment. (Continued on page 132)

Bathroom and laundry back-to-back make for an economy of plumbing lines, permit accessibility of hamper and linen shelves from both sides. Blackstone washer, dryer, and ironer take up space only 6' long x 25" wide. With a sewing machine in the laundry, you can mend as you go along. Grille-front hamper, mounted on casters rolls easily on Kentile floor.

A combination bath-laundry can be achieved very nicely in a room 10' long x 10' wide. Laundry itself requires a space 28" deep x 66" long. Enclosed behind shutters, it holds Westinghouse washer and dryer below, linen shelves above. This solution, designed for the Crane Co., would be excellent where economy of space and of plumbing installation are important. Closets in an existing house might be converted in this way.

Now you can make a Big Splash

By Marion Gough

Literally, you can now splash through your ablutions as uninhibited as you please, careless of any damp consequences. And the same materials that shrug off every bathroom hazard from steam to cough mixture now let you make as big a decorative splash in the bathroom as anywhere else in the house. Tile, flooring, wall covering, shower and window curtaining are becoming increasingly sophisticated in color, design, and texture. And so, thank heaven, bathroom décor is no longer an incongruous matter of swans and water lilies, but a carry-over of the aesthetically pleasing, adult, good design you enjoy in the living room.

Old stand-bys like glass, porcelain enamel, and ceramic tile show up in new, interesting colors and finishes. New plastics make high-style smartness invulnerable to moist atmospheres. All can be kept hygienically, easily clean.

Plastic laminates, impervious to water, stains, and hard knocks, are naturals for bathroom walls. In endless patterns in satiny or glossy finish, they come in wall-size sheets as large as 48" x 96", bonded to plywood or hardboard.

To distinguish a tiny bathroom, use strong color and space-saving devices. Plastic tile, lightweight and easy to apply yourself, comes in many colors with toilet seats to match. Here it surrounds a spectacular space-saver—a receptor bath, 39" x 38" x 12" combining shower basin and tub. Plastic-top lavatory cabinet is ready-built, hides pipes, furnishes storage space. Dressing will be a pleasure...

... if your dressing room is as carefully thought out as these.

See how the right kind of storage is provided for each item in the wardrobe and all of it handily organized with reference to bath and bedroom

Having every piece of clothing you own logically organized in one place gives you much more than a smug feeling of neatness. Over a period of months it will save you hours of time, hours pyramided from the minutes lost hunting for stray accessories, or dashing back and forth from bureau to closet to bath. It goes without saying that an organized wardrobe saves the disposition. What gets you off to a worse start in the morning or before a party than a frantic search for the one thing you most want to wear? Above all, adequate storage surely—if less obviously—saves your clothes, since things which are properly hung or folded in the right space keep their shape and freshness considerably longer than things which are stuffed into crowded quarters.

The most effective aid to organized storage is the device that makes it possible for you to see everything at once. There are many versions—the sliding door that gives access to a whole tier of open shelves, the open-front tray that reveals its entire contents instead of only the top layer, the pull-out rack that brings all your jackets or trousers into immediate view.

Study the dressing rooms on this and the next two pages and see how many other devices they contain for helping you to dress without needless motions.

In well-appointed homes in Europe and South America the bidet is standard bathroom equipment. As Americans discover its advantages, more are being installed alongside the toilet like this one in the home of the Cliff Mays.

PHOTOGRAPH BY MAYNARD PARKER

Why not a Bidet?

Any American who has traveled in Europe or South America has come to accept the bidet as a standard bathroom fixture. Once we travelers have got over our initial naïveté about how to use the bidet, and have learned that it is a logical twin to the toilet, we have found it a remarkably good aid to the daily routines of personal cleanliness. We find ourselves a little amazed, perhaps even chagrined, that bathrooms abroad should have gone us one better in matters of personal cleanliness.

But as more Americans travel abroad and learn from first-hand experience the advantage of using a bidet, more of these fixtures are being installed in new homes. And doctors, who feel strongly about the basic importance of genito-urinary cleanliness, are recommending the bidet, and the washing practices that the bidet makes possible. (Continued on page 147)

How to make one bath do the work of two

By James M. Fitch

In these days of high building costs, you have to scrutinize every single item that goes into a house for possible economies. And seldom, if ever, do you find any one item which can be just left out to give you a big economy. The fact of the matter is that most things which go into a house today are essentials. You can't leave them out without adversely affecting the comfort, convenience, or appearance of the house. The result is that you pare things down rather than cut them out.

One apparently obvious place to try to pare costs is the bathroom. On a square-foot basis it is, next to the kitchen, the most expensive area in the house. But it is also one of the most essential. In fact, ideally, every member of the family ought to have a bathroom of his own. This is out of the question in most households. And, if you analyze your family's schedule carefully, you're likely to find it isn't even really necessary. For the bathroom shortage shows up only at what traffic engineers would call "peak load periods"—especially in the morning when every member of the family is trying to get off to school, work, or play. For most of the 24 hours, this expensively equipped area is largely idle.

From a strict dollars-and-cents point of view, therefore, it is not so much a question of having more bathrooms as getting more use out of the ones you already have. And the way to do this is to locate each fixture so that, as far as possible, it can be used by itself, in privacy. In short, compartmentalize it.

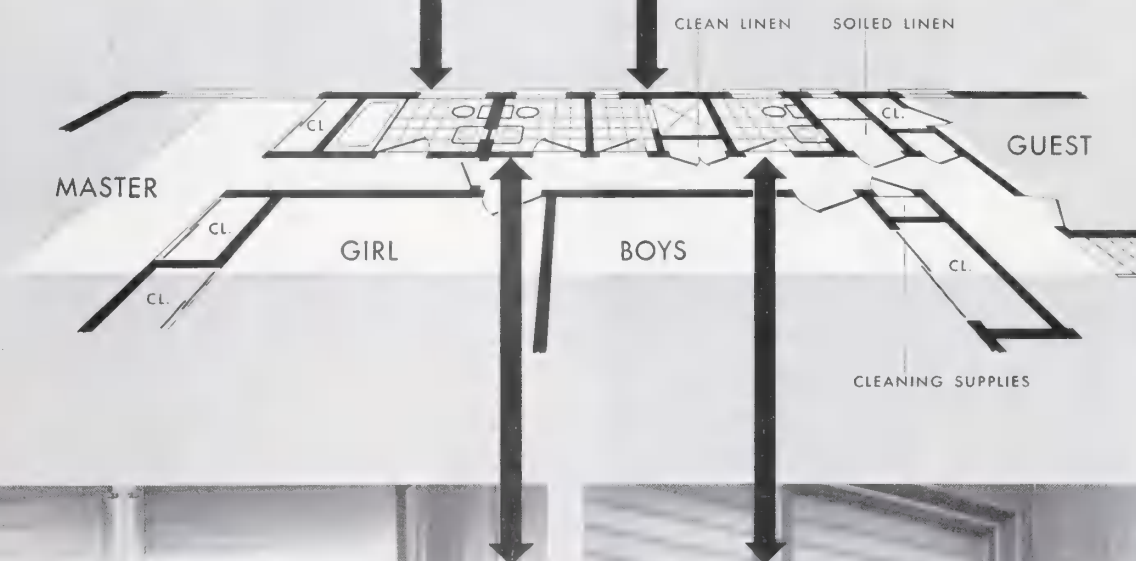

How far you carry this compartmentalization will, of course, depend upon the size and composition of your family. You'll be astonished how much it helps just to separate the water closet from the tub or shower, in the English fashion. Put a lavatory in each compartment and you've more than doubled its capacity. Or you may be forced into a much more elaborate scheme (right). These are two extremes, and some of the possibilities in between are shown on pages 88 and 89.

Generally speaking, you'll find that analyzing your family's bathing and dressing habits, and placing the equipment in separate compartmentalized units, will increase their convenience at the same time it reduces the number of fixtures required.

Two-and-a-half do the work of four

The bedroom wing of the Howard Myers residence houses two adults, two adolescent boys, and an adolescent girl—not to mention overnight guests, adult or adolescent. The problem faced by Chloethiel W. Smith, the architect, was how to handle this mixed and active group with maximum convenience, minimum fixtures. Her solution is shown opposite.

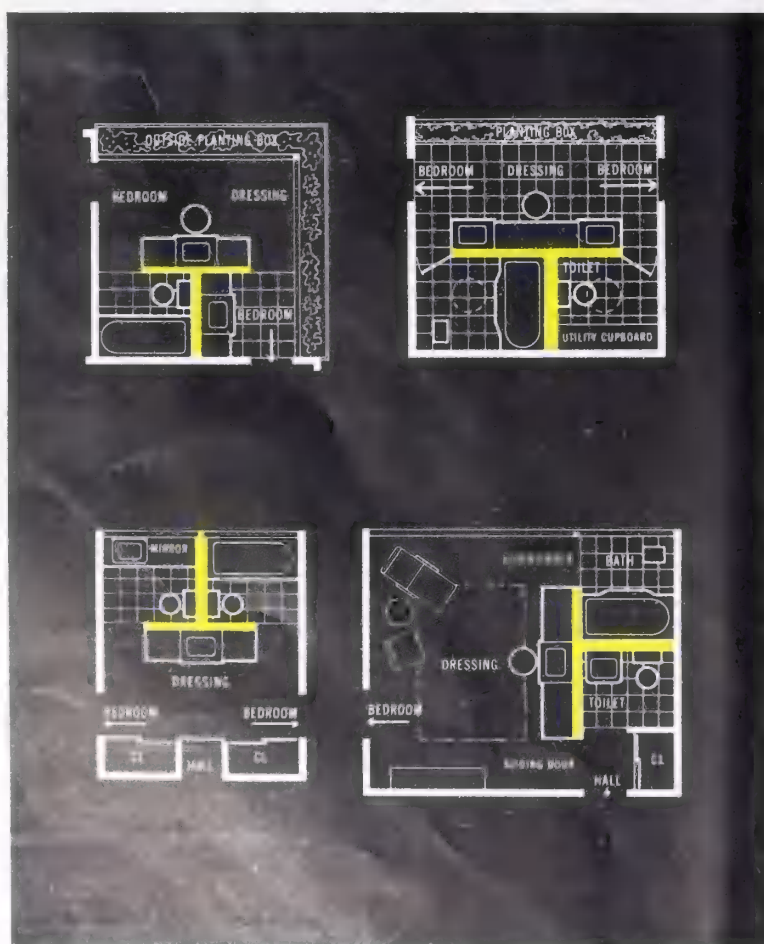

Along the north side of the bedroom hall, she has developed a series of four compartments. One is a complete bath, with tub and shower, serving the master bedroom. Two have lavatory and toilet complete with medicine cabinet, towel bars, and the like. The fourth has only a shower stall. This arrangement concentrates all the plumbing lines in a minimum space, places most fixtures back-to-back and permits simultaneous use by the whole family. Note also, as a corollary of good planning, provisions for storage of clean and soiled linen and cleaning equipment.

A luxurious bathroom demonstrates an economical use of fixtures

Even where space is no problem, there's still merit to compartmentalizing your fixtures, as you can see in this model bathroom. Designed for the Crane Company by Architect Edward L. Barnes, it places tub and toilet for convenience and privacy in two small compartments. With tub compartment tiled and waterproof, other portions can be furnished and decorated like the rest of the house—cork floors, textured wallpaper, and the like. Bath scales, chaise longue and reading lamp complete the comfort picture.

Four variations on one basic scheme

The plan of this model bath can be varied so that it serves one or two bedrooms (top row) or one or two bedrooms and hall (bottom). In all variations, the same basic compartmentalization of fixtures makes it possible for at least two people to use the bath in comfort and privacy. In terms of initial costs, this is also an economical way to group fixtures, since it reduces hot and cold water pipes, soil stacks, etc.

A fresh approach to the serving of Vegetables

To vary the guise of traditional mealtime vegetables, serve them as salads. Cooked to perfection and chilled ahead of time.

vegetables come to the table at their crisp best, and you've licked the problem of overcooked limpness. This is the third in a series of salad articles we have called "Start Being a Gourmet"

A beautifully cooked vegetable, served just at the point of cooked perfection, is a gourmet's delight—and a most difficult thing to achieve when you are having a dinner party. For there is always that last round of drinks and then your timing is tossed out the window so that the vegetable comes to the table sagging in its sauce. And even for a simple, family meal it's not always easy to synchronize the family and the vegetable. My new system is to cook the vegetables ahead of time and serve them cold as an accompaniment to the meat dish. It's just a cold replacement for the traditional hot vegetable. It simplifies your dinner preparation and dissipates your worries. For you have prepared the vegetable with love and care, and removed it from the flame at just the right moment of perfection. All you have to do is to marinate it in salad dressing, and your dinner vegetable is practically ready to serve.

I think, too, that men like meat and a salad, instead of a clutter of too many things to eat. It is so simple to have a meat and a husky salad—a Caesar salad, or celery root salad, or any of a variety of salads that are not quite a main dish affair, yet too hearty to serve as a separate course after (Continued on page 127)

What you should know about

Summer Air Conditioning

What is it? When do you need it? What does it really cost? To bring you some common-sense answers to a much-confused subject, we've made a survey of residential air conditioning as it stands in the summer of 1952. Here are the facts.

What is meant by summer air conditioning?

The term has been so loosely used that it must be redefined. Using the strict, scientific definition of the industry itself, full summer air conditioning means the air has been cooled, dried, filtered, and circulated. Consequently, according to this definition, no machine can be called a summer air-conditioner unless it provides 1) refrigeration; 2) dehumidification; 3) filtering; and 4) fan.

When is summer air conditioning essential?

Generally speaking, you'll need full summer air conditioning when shade and ventilation are no longer enough to guarantee comfort. This will occur 1) when the air is so moist that, as it blows across your skin, it can no longer evaporate perspiration; or 2) when the air is so hot as it blows across you that it adds more heat to your body than it removes by evaporation. The first condition is typical of our Southeast, the second of our Southwest. Under such extremes, breeze and shade alone are no longer adequate, though they give some relief. Now you need air that has actually been dried and cooled. And in order to accomplish this, you have to have air-conditioning machinery.

Does it conflict with climate control?

Not at all. They're complementary. You will want to use climate control devices for minimizing hot weather discomfort—shade trees, sprinkled lawns, wide overhanging roofs, shaded glass, attic fans. For much of the country, much of the time, these measures alone will give you comfort. If they are not adequate, full summer air conditioning can be added.

What summer air conditioning costs.

	Houses surveyed had average floor area of . . .
DALLAS, TEXAS	1612 sq. ft.
DAYTON, OHIO	1300 sq. ft.
KANSAS CITY, MO.	1400 sq. ft.
LINCOLN, NEB.	1724 sq. ft.
LOUISVILLE, KY.	1350 sq. ft.
MOBILE, ALA.	2065 sq. ft.
NEW CANAAN, CONN.	1400 sq. ft.
NEW ORLEANS, LA.	1500 sq. ft.
RIDGEWOOD, N. J.	1550 sq. ft.
ST. LOUIS, MO.	2660 sq. ft.
WICHITA FALLS, TEXAS	2301 sq. ft.
WASHINGTON, D. C.	2250 sq. ft.

And remember this: A climate-wise house is cheaper to air condition. A tree-shaded roof, for instance, will reduce the sun load on your house and hence reduce both the size of your air conditioner and the amount of time it has to run.

Can you afford it?

Well, look at it this way. It's been a long time since Americans asked themselves if they could "afford" winter comfort. They've come to take it for granted and as a result central heating, insulation, weatherstripping have become "standard equipment" on the average house. The same thing should apply to summer comfort. In fact, for the South Atlantic and Gulf Coasts, the lower Mississippi Valley and the Southwest, the problem of keeping cool in hot weather is much more important from a health-and-comfort angle than heating.

Thus, every device which gives your home increased summer comfort should be considered basic equipment. It might be essential climate control devices or full summer air conditioning equipment. In both cases, you are dealing with essentials, not luxuries.

What does it actually cost?

For reasons which need not concern us here, it takes more energy to cool a room than it does to heat it. And the equipment required to cool and dry air is much more complicated than that needed to warm or moisten it. Consequently, summer air conditioning has been more expensive both to install and to operate than winter (Continued on page 140)

These are actual figures, based on systems installed in more than 200 new homes in twelve cities.

The cost of installing summer air conditioning in the houses averaged . . .	Amortized on a 15-year mortgage at 4½% interest, this amounted to a monthly cost of . . .	Monthly operating costs—electricity, gas, water, etc.—averaged . . .	Thus, total yearly cost of owning and operating summer air conditioning averaged . . .

You can duplicate this garden for $1,000

By Dr. Joseph E. Howland

Here is proof that the so-called high cost of gardens is just a myth. Here for $1,000 is a real bargain—a bargain because every dollar really counts for something in terms of comfort, privacy, and outdoor living space.

Take that same $1,000 and spend it on a mass of foundation shrubs, a patch of flower beds that require constant attention, and a swath of lawn that nobody uses and you do have a high-cost garden. Your money then has all gone just for a stage setting—for show instead of livability—obviously an outdated way to garden.

Today's garden is all living space—living space bought at one-third the cost of indoor space. This makes the modern garden one of the best dollar stretchers you have. Don't listen to people who say gardens cost too much. This new kind of garden is a real bargain. More photographs on page 149.

design. They look best in big gardens with long sweeps of lawn to set them off. Use them on small lots and they look out of place, and there is none of the feeling of peace and ease that you have a right to expect from a modern garden where all elements integrate into a harmonious composition.

Custom-designed pools look better and use the space better because they take full advantage of view, shade, and privacy.

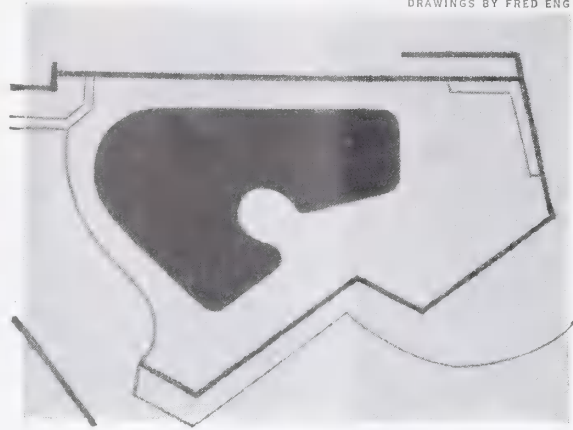

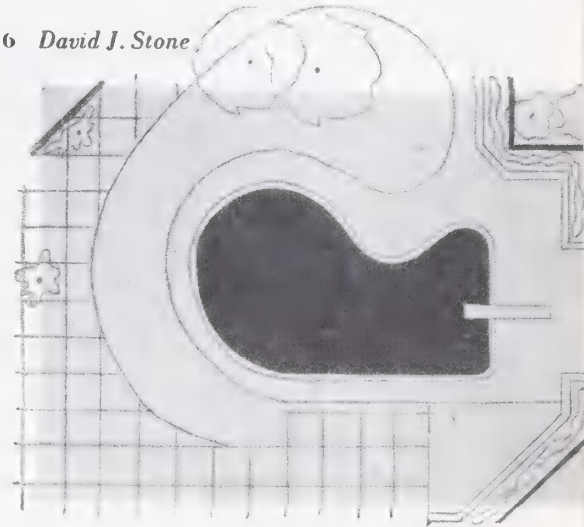

You manipulate terraces, walks, and plantings any way you like, then shape the pool to fit the space that remains.

This is exactly how we arrived at the shapes for the nine pools shown on these two pages. We did not start out with some abstract art form in mind. We arrived at the shape as the one best way to integrate pool and garden under the existing site conditions. You should choose your pool shape the same way.

Landscape Architect has the same water area as the standard 20' by 40' size, but much more of it is safe and usable for small children.

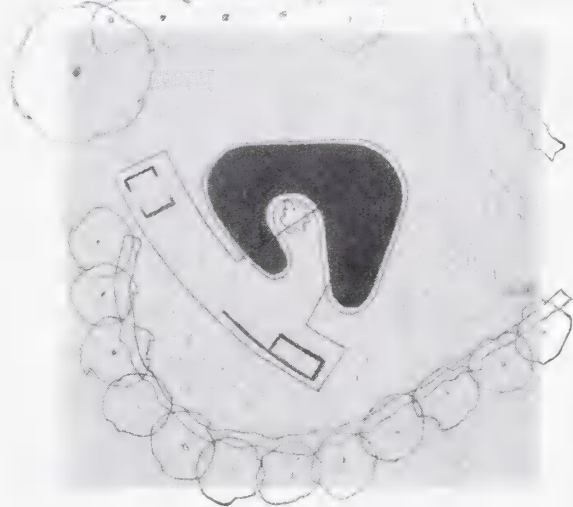

Instead of the romantic oval consider the more practical, space-saving, circular pool. You can't do much swimming, but you'll have a good dipping pool. You don't have to use the whole circle, of course. In No. 8, the pool house takes a bite out of the pool. In No. 1, no other shape would have used the restricted site so well—or looked nearly as appropriate in the garden composition.

Maybe the space limits indicate that you should combine the round and rectangle shapes. Number 2 and 7 are examples. This is a perfectly good idea aesthetically. Don't be afraid to let the pool take any shape that it must to utilize the space best.

Sometimes you can use a conventional rectangle or oval terrace of such strong design lines that it rather than the pool becomes dominant. But be sure that the composition really calls for the rectangle or oval pool.

The classic pool shape seldom has a place in today's garden. This pool must have an expansive, classic setting to look right. But don't go to the other extreme—the mock “natural” pool. The design idea is sound, but the mechanics of coping, gutters, ladders, etc., make initial cost and upkeep prohibitive. Only those who can dam up a stream should attempt it.

Now you may think a custom-design costs more than a ready-made pool. It really doesn't, when you consider the saving of usable space and the gain in aesthetic effect. Even steel pools can be custom-designed for such a low premium that you shouldn't accept the handicap involved in forcing your garden to fit a preconceived pool shape.

The summer bachelor

By Victor Bergeron

Known to some as "Trader Vic" and author of the forthcoming book, "The Kitchen Kibitzer"

It happens to all of us. The house is abnormally quiet, the blinds are drawn and you can write your name in the dust on the piano. A faint aroma rises from the garbage pail beneath the sink, mingling its effusion with the rankness of old pipe scrapings and stale cigar butts. The plants which you forgot to water are a bilious yellow. With no one to pick up after you, the joint looks like a flophouse, with hats on lamps, ties on door knobs, wet towels on the bathroom floor, and shoes, socks, and newspapers strewn over the bedroom.

You are a summer bachelor and what seemed like a hell of a good idea at first has now begun to pall. You hate to go home to an empty house and you're lonesome in a crowd. Your beautiful pre-vacation plans which comprised taking in a "burlycue," have somehow never materialized. You had also thought of having a few of the gang over for a stag, beer bust, or bull session, which still has possibilities if you can manage to get the homestead policed up.

Sundays are the worst of all, and a Sunday morning all alone gives me the heebie-jeebies, so let's start with the morning department. Call up a friend, some bachelor by choice or vacation, and if he says he'll be right over start mixing a Maui Fizz. If you haven't any cream cheese on hand ask the guy to pick some up on his way over. I'll tell you why later.

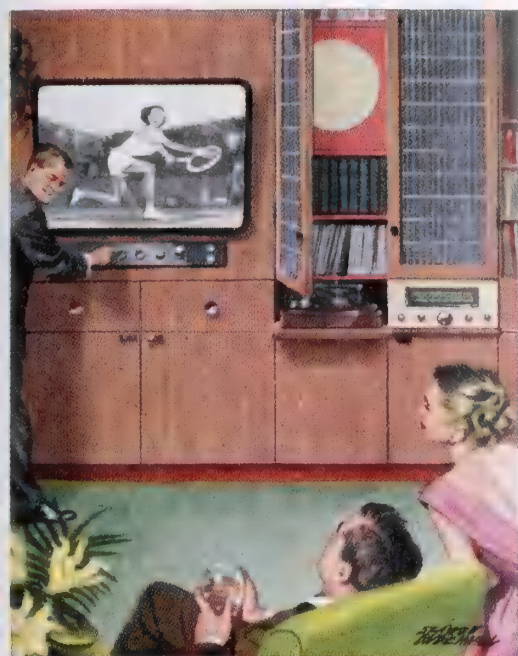

Dr. Paul Samson first concocted the Maui Fizz when he was doing service at the Hoff General Hospital in Santa Barbara. Paul is a big man, both in stature and in reputation as a chest specialist, and this drink is worthy of him. You'll need rum and an electric mixer. (Continued on page 120)

This powder room, adjacent to bath, needs no lavatory. Instead, full space is given over to a broad dressing table with tilted theatrical-type mirror for make-up. By keeping all surfaces plain and lines simple, an area no larger than most coat closets achieves a surprising sense of space. Cliff May, designer.

Antique accessories add an elegance to this powder room, rarely seen these days. Situated between a front hall at left and full bathroom at right, dressing table has no lavatories. But its mirrored niche is well-lit by recessed panel in ceiling. Note bow-front drawers in dressing table. Emil Schmidlin, architect.

An old-fashioned lavatory bowl, of the oval shape so popular fifty years ago, is here smartly countersunk in a marble slab. Inside shutters, at small windows flanking the fixed mirror, substitute for curtains.

The Powder Room is back

For families who do a lot of entertaining, a powder room makes sense.

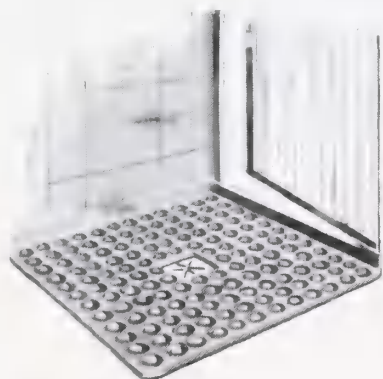

It can be a complete unit in itself, with its own lavatory and toilet. Or it can be an ante-room to a bathroom serving bedrooms beyond Plexiglas doors, molded like pleating, offer both glamour and the super-tough material used to enclose plane cockpits. Fiat's Cascade Bath Enclosure slides on a tub-affixed track.

Wall panels of this Fiat prefabricated shower-stall are of laminated plastic, chosen for its insulating properties, rugged durability. Plate-glass door is optional.

The 140 vacuum cups molded into this 24-inch square shower mat assure you foot comfort and safety. A 3-inch opening is furnished for water drainage. Pretty's De-Luxe Shower Mat is made of heavy, pliable rubber in white and pastels.

Case's One-Piece Water Closet can nestle under a window. Its design gives positive prevention of flushing over-flow and contamination of water supply.

By Julie Polshek

You can sling this midget charcoal grill over your arm for a wienie-roast on the beach; use it on the porch table to broil dinner's meat course. The fire box has a removable grate and draft vents to control the heat. The 9-inch grid and aluminized steel body are hinged together and the legs fold under. The youngsters would dote on a Bar-B-Cutie of their own. A mere $1.98 is involved for this treat. Gertz, Jamaica, New York.

You can use Metco's Auto Den as a table, a play pen for the tots, a balcony for luggage. The height adjustments of its hangers and chains station it to suit your need. The platform itself telescopes to give the wanted length adjustment. The strong steel structure gives all car models full coverage of the back-seat area at play-pen level. It's easily set up; stows in car's trunk. Hanger is rubber-sleeved. $9.95, Metco Inc., Ferndale, Mich.

Skewers as long as these 16½ inches are hard to come by and much in demand, say outdoor chefs we queried. The matter of keeping food cubes put during the turning is also capably attended to by the Washburn Shishkabab Skewers. They achieve this by means of a twist in their oval rod-structure. The foursome is made of solid stainless steel; several California recipes accompany them. $1.89, from Macy's, New York.

Susan Sue's lower tier transports eight serving portions; accompaniments such as sauces, cookies, relishes, jellies travel in the four upper trays. The dishes clip into the carrier at their flanged ends and have a well for butter, mustard, etc. They stack for storage. The attractive Superlon plastic assembly (2-color) is to be had in chartreuse-dark green, green-gray, coral-gray. (Lower tier 17" diameter.) $4.95, Jordan Marsh, Boston.

Take a good look at this good looking kitchen

Obviously, it is functional, fashionable, inviting to work in. But now look a little more closely. You'll see that the most important thing about this housewife's heaven is steel.

Steel appliances. Steel lighting fixtures. Venetian blinds, ventilating fan.

Steel cabinets and steel wall tile. Steel just about everywhere you look.

That should give you some ideas about your kitchen. All these wonderful things of steel are modestly priced because they are made of America's great bargain metal.

They will stay good looking longer, perform better, serve you for more years because they are steel—the metal that protects the looks and prolongs the life of any product.

These are all good reasons for modernizing your kitchen with steel . . . good reasons for making steel your standard whatever you buy.

Metal sculpture, executed in Weirzin—electrolytic zinc-coated steel that resists heat, moisture, rust—demonstrates the exceptional workability of this easily fabricated metal.

An easy twist latches the dome of the Lusto-Ware Locking Cover Set into its tray's recess. Joined thus, they carry easily and safely and give the content air-tight protection. The super-size storage area (a 13-inch tray, a 6-inch high dome) accommodates a giant cake, sandwiches or rolls galore, several pies. Dome of the sturdy Styron plastic set is crystal; red, yellow, or green tray. $2.98. Gimbels, New York, N. Y.

Pennsylvania Dutch designs these copper forms imprint eye-catching decorations on foods they boil or bake. The quaint motifs (including heart, snowflake, tulip, etc.) give the molds great dish-appeal, too. Hot-weather dishes, however, allow them little time to idle on the kitchen wall. $9.75 for the set, Epicure's, 133 East Putnam, Greenwich, Connecticut.

The Newton Insect Trap lures and exterminates its prey with an ordinary 100-watt bulb. Sounds far-fetched, but it works like a charm. The circling critters head into the metal wings which catapult them into the plastic bowl; they succumb almost instantly to bulb's heat. The improved illumination effected by the bowl's diffusing powers is a wide issue, but pertinent. $3.98 less bulb. Brown & Gold, 187 La Brea, Los Angeles.

You need a tough, long-wearing surface for concrete or masonry. Zynolite's rubber-based Pa-Finish fills the role. It withstands climatic ravages, moisture, alkalis, acids, scrubbing. Drying time is 4 hours. Ideal for tennis courts, walks, playrooms. Non-fading. Colors: red, beige, azure blue, moss-green; $7.75, gal.; $5.50, qt.; thinner-solvent, 90¢ qt. Zynolite Co., 1646 South Vermont, Los Angeles, Calif.

You can seal canning jars, release any type and size of screw-on lid, uncap bottles, with Hidden Jar Opener. When the serrated finger is at the left, it tightens lids; pushed to the right, it opens them. A deft device at the back pries off bottle caps without distorting them. Read how the Lowell Johnsons, after suffering a severe fire loss, decided that...

FIRESAFETY IN THE HOME BEGINS WITH Concrete - IT CAN'T BURN!

During a 6-month period in 1947, several houses near Knoxville, Iowa, went up in flames. One of the houses that burned was the 7-room home of Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Johnson. Sorrowed by their loss of costly property and treasured possessions—and the losses of other families in the community—the Johnsons decided to rebuild and to make their new house as firesafe as possible.

They built the attractive and comfortable house shown in the views above. It features firesafe concrete construction—a concrete foundation with concrete footings, concrete masonry walls, concrete subfloors on precast concrete joists and an asbestos cement shingle roof. A basement provides space for a recreation room for the children as well as a work room, sewing room and storage room. The Johnsons not only have stopped worrying about fires—they find that they live better the year around in a concrete house.

Firesafety is only one reason why concrete is today's best construction value for homes of any style, size or floor plan. Concrete also offers maximum protection against storms, decay, termites and vermin. It is moderate in first cost, requires much less repair and maintenance and serves for a lifetime. The net result is true low-annual-cost shelter.

HOW TO GET A FIRESAFE CONCRETE HOUSE ...and what will it cost?

Phone a local concrete masonry manufacturer for names of architects and builders experienced in concrete house design and construction. Have the architect of your choice show you how any style or size house can be built economically with concrete walls, concrete subfloors and a firesafe roof.

Many a moderate-size bathroom has space enough for a condensed dressing-table-wardrobe arrangement like this one designed by Charles Goodman Associates. Sliding doors let you look at the whole tier of pull-out trays at one time, while tray fronts only half as deep as the trays make the entire contents more quickly visible.

Your bathroom needn't be cluttered with nylons if you have a built-in stocking drier. To the right of the double tier of sliding trays above, a narrow door, perforated near the bottom, conceals drying cupboard shown at right. Low wattage lamp in floor of cupboard provides enough heat to dry nylons quickly.

for transporting liquids safely.

An assortment of plain plastic refrigerator bags of thin, transparent polyethylene film turns out to be endlessly useful—to hold damp things, powder, shoes, lingerie, anything. Add a handful of elastic bands for closures.

A few cakes of good toilet soap—not generally furnished in hotels abroad—and a plastic soap box.

A bottle of liquid detergent, like Joy or Glim, for inevitable wash basin laundry. Decant it into a plastic bottle.

Bath water softener for pleasanter bathing in hard water. Milk-maid Foam Bath is a sweet-smelling and effective example. Include a plastic bag for packing.

Cleansing tissues and toilet tissue, which are either hard to come by or expensive abroad.

Cigarettes—for the same reasons as above, and because they make welcome little thank-you gifts and tips.

Lipsticks—for gifts and tips.

Nail polish—ditto.

A squeeze-spray plastic bottle of toilet water or air sweetener—for scenting too-alien atmospheres.

A couple of pocket-size tins of milk of magnesia tablets—just in case the traveler dines unwisely or too well.

Malted milk tablets for quick energy between meals. Put them in a plastic bag.

Soluble coffee (and a plastic spoon)—for die-hards who can only drink "American" coffee, and for any travelers in coffee-rationed countries.

6-12 insect repellent—odorless, colorless insurance against mosquitoes, fleas, et al.

A small looseleaf notebook, handbag or pocket-size, with extra fillers.

A ball-point pen which opens and closes at the push of a button, as handy as a pencil.

Slim, pocket-size phrase books in foreign languages. A new gadget. The Trans-Laider, automatically finds the phrase for the occasion.

A book of names and addresses of reputable shops. "Shop With Confidence in Europe," by Clara Thornhill Hammond, published by The Marchbanks Press, $2.50.

A quick-look translator of foreign money into dollars, like Fielding's Currency Guide for Europe, $4.50.

A foreign-money wallet, designed to hold variously sized notes.

A roll of cellophane tape, use the world over, and a few lo pieces of string.

What, no pollen

If the annual flight from hay fever has forced you into a travel rut, consider the Caribbean this year. The pollens which make you miserable are practically nonexistent here, the pleasant trade winds blow away all other irritants besides, and your trip to and from by air or by sea, gives you hometown to home town relief. Official reports indicate that Puerto Rico is completely free of ragweed, and that the concentration of grass pollen is so low as to trouble only the most super-sensitive. Similar data indicates relief awaits you in Jamaica, especially in the Town Isle-Ochos Rios area along the north shore. In Venezuela and Colombia, on the north coast of South America, hay fever is entirely unknown. And the same happy state of affairs, due to the climate and a total absence of offending plants is yours in many other Caribbean spots besides. Your travel agent can prescribe any number of attractive summer rates, and can either check the pollen count for you or advise you how to check it for yourself.

Summer art

You'll find that 57th Street has followed Broadway into New England when you visit Cape Cod this summer. For the new Mayo Hill Galleries at Wellfleet are to add what summer stock is to the theatre: a refreshing opportunity to get acquainted with the younger artist and his work. The galleries themselves, designed by Nathaniel Saltonstall, are suitably contemporary in style, of concrete block and cedar siding, with a glass panel that rolls back the entire length of a cantilevered balcony. Outside, gravelled paths create intriguing abstractions, and a trellis-shaded terrace, flood-lit at night, holds displays of sculpture. Exhibits will change every two weeks, presenting a broad cross section of contemporary art, and include a young collector's section, devoted to the work of the younger contemporary painter, and featuring encouragingly modest price tags.

Kitchen design by George Nelson, A. I. A.

"CLAY TILE...PRACTICAL...CONVENIENT...BEAUTIFUL! A STIMULUS TO DYNAMIC NEW DESIGN"

George Nelson

Architect George Nelson used Clay Tile in designing this idea-provoking kitchen. Spacious clay tile work surfaces, easily cleaned and glowing with color . . . suspended over the warm red tones of a clay tile floor that laughs at dirt. A handy bank of waist-high refrigerator doors and an oven are recessed in a mellow background of glazed wall tile, the most soil-resistant and enduringly beautiful of all wall surfaces. A clay tile, heat-resistant counter top enhances the convenient, independent burner unit with practical beauty. Picture these same colorful clay tile counter tops in your kitchen, lightening your cleaning chores . . . lasting for a lifetime. Imagine clay tile in back of your range or around your sink, fighting grease and dirt . . .

resisting heat, moisture and staining. Think of the hours you'd save not having to wax or scrub the clay tile floor—a damp mop is all you'll ever need! Ask your local clay tile contractor to show you samples of the decorator colors available . . . inquire about the true economy of clay tile in practical applications around your kitchen and other areas in your home.

To get a colorful brochure of clay tile ideas used in this kitchen plus a copy of "Tile . . . For a More Beautiful Home," showing many other practical ideas in full color, send 10¢ to the Tile Council of America, Dept. H.B., Room 3401, 10 East 40th Street, New York 16, N. Usual facilities consist of water, tables, and stoves, but at Silver Falls Park near Salem, and Willowa Park in northwestern Oregon, you'll also find specially designated trailer niches equipped with water and electricity and electric stoves, and a utility building for laundering, bathing.

For would-be mountain climbers, a taste of the real thing without its hazards at the Mountain School in Heiligenblut, in the Glockner region of Austria. Two-day climbing courses with ascent of Glockner every other day to September 6; three-day tours covering the entire area every fourth day; a three-day ice-climbing course. Transportation: Colonial Air Lines; accommodations, the Castle Harbour; cost, $176.25. For details, the William P. Wolfe Organization, 500 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

For woodsmen, expert and otherwise, a new booklet, "When You Are in the Woods." free from the State University College of Forestry, Syracuse 10, New York. Author Fay Welch has beamed it particularly for the Adirondacks and Catskills, but its practical advice on such elementals as how to build a fire, make sure of safe water, use woods tools, predict the weather, will make you a better camper in any woods.

Of pickles, pies, and prizes

To the customary specialties of a New England fall—the turning foliage, the apple reddening in the orchard, cider fresh from the press, and a big copper harvest moon—New Hampshire's Wolfeboro Lakes Region adds a specialty all its own. For, hereabouts, early fall brings a whole series of old-time county fairs, a different one at a different town each week through September and into mid-October, each true to a cherished homespun tradition, bunting a-flutter, lively midway, the good ladies beaming pridefully over their best pies and pickles, the judges conspicuously badged and judging.

This pleasant area of lakes and rolling foothills has been a thriving summer resort for over 200 years, the oldest in fact in the country, but it is only now that the outsider is deliberately being invited to share in what the native considers its best season. If you prefer to accept on your own, ask the Chamber of Commerce at Wolfeboro for dates and data on accommodations and the like. You'll find each town of the Wolfeboro Region decorated in corn stalks, putting on hayrides, country dances, church suppers for your special benefit. Or, ask your travel agent about the Festival of Fairs all-expense package tour program, from four to six days, and from around $65 to $90 for two. This is how you can do the Festival the really easy way, with home-town connections by air, rail, or bus if you like, side trips into the foliage-glamorized White Mountains and on Lake Winnepesaukee, and a complete round of Festival events, including your Day at the Fair, pre-arranged, with transportation and admissions included in your package price.

Basics for barbecuing

If you've got the barbecue bug, which so many people get these summer holiday months, be sure you have all the trimmings. We don't mean the food (of course you'll have that), but the tools that make cooking and eating out-of-doors the almost universal pleasure it is. They're functional, yes, and their choice can indicate at a guest's glance whether you are a rank amateur or something in the way of an expert barbecuer. They'll also help or hinder you in turning out mouth-watering meals with a minimum of fuss and bother. Remember these tools will be used, and probably used hard, so select the ones that are strong and sturdy and won't have to be babied.

On the Rotor Sales Corp. barbecue, an electrically operated spit does your meat to a turn in front of a vertical fire bed, instead of over it. The method seals in juices for extra flavor goodness. Stand, mounted on casters, brings food to eye level, where it is easy to watch, and well shielded from drafts.

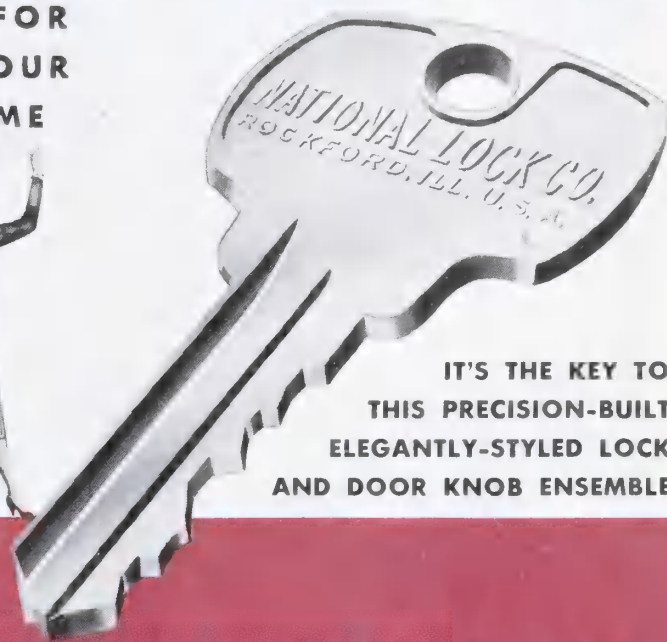

Forks, spatulas, cleavers are adjuncts to good barbecuing. Lamson & Goodnow Mfg. Co. make a set with stainless steel blades, rounded at corners, and with rosewood handles. 22" length is safeguard against burns.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Leading Candle Craftsmen for Nearly 100 Years

The rest of the day will seem brighter with a couple of these under your belt.

Maui Fizz (for two)

3 oz. Puerto Rican rum
2 oz. lemon juice
4 teaspoons bar sugar
1 whole egg
1 slice of pineapple

Blend with finely chopped ice in an electric blender. Strain into two 10-oz. glasses and fill with charged water.

For breakfast you can't beat scrambled eggs, crisp bacon, fried potatoes, toast and jam and plenty of hot coffee. And here's where the cream cheese comes in.

Scrambled Eggs with Cream Cheese

R. B. (King) Keator gave me this recipe and I quote: "You can take a skillet, put in a pat of butter and a package of Borden's cream cheese. Then break in three or four eggs; scramble the whole mess. You sort of melt the cream cheese down with the butter and, if it's Borden's, it's got to be good, and it does give the eggs a very delicious flavor." You don't need a crystal ball to figure out King's business connections.

Potato Omelet

A potato omelet is another good late breakfast or brunch dish. Take some thinly sliced raw potatoes and fry them slowly in a heavy skillet in a tablespoon of oil and a little butter. Put the lid on the pan until they look moist. Remove lid and fry them dry, turning occasionally with a spatula. When your potatoes are nearly cooked, take a handful of chopped green onions and swish them around with the potatoes and continue cooking. Then, for every large potato use about six eggs. Beat them well and fold them into the fried potatoes. Season with salt and pepper and let them cook over a very slow fire. When they have set but are not firm in the middle, fold them over and make a nice mound on the outside edge of the pan, away from the handle. Let it cook for a couple of minutes to brown on the bottom and set, then slip the mound onto a heated platter. Surround with well-browned little pig sausages and some apple slices, fried in butter and sprinkled with a little brown sugar and cinnamon, and you have a real blues chaser or I just don't know what tastes good.

French Toast

French toast is a favorite of mine. I'd rather have it for breakfast than all the pancakes and waffles in the world, if it's made right. My mother's recipe was simple but economical. You know how quickly French bread dries out. Well, mother would take thick slices of dry French bread, dip them in a thin batter of, say, 3 eggs to a cup of milk, mixed with 3 tablespoons of sugar and a teaspoon of vanilla, and then when they were thoroughly saturated she fried them in butter to a golden brown and served them dusted with powdered sugar. We called this pain perdu which means Lost Bread, which is what it would have been if she didn't use it for French Toast.

Some time ago, while I was spending a few days at Charlie Farrell's Racquet Club in Palm Springs, the chef served me some French Toast the likes of which I'd never tasted before. It was wonderful. I figured that he fried saturated bread thoroughly in plenty of butter, then sprinkled it liberally with a sugar and cinnamon mixture and popped it under the broiler to caramelize the sugar. I've tried it since, making the regular French Toast and after it's cooked, sprinkled it with a heavy coating of cinnamon and sugar on one side, plopped it over in the skillet in plenty of butter and let it caramelize right in the pan.

A few weeks ago I was going over the shelves of a corner bakery in search of something interesting when I noticed a stack of sweet breads with raisins and citron in them. The loaves were about the size of round French bread, and the baker was selling them at half price because they were a couple of days old. I bought a couple for the next morning and made French Toast that was terrific, knocking hell out of my diet but affording me great enjoyment. Italian bakers make a similar loaf but the texture is rather heavy. Look for a sweet bread that's light in texture from plenty of eggs so it absorbs a lot of batter without getting soggy. Milk bread is best next to French bread and plain raisin bread offers a change. Serve French Toast with whatever you'd serve with pancakes or waffles—ham, bacon, or Canadian bacon, or country sausages, and jam, marmalade, or syrup.

Corned Beef Hash

Corned beef hash with a poached egg is another good Sunday Brunch dish and can be quite satisfactorily made from canned corned beef. Peel and finely dice one large potato and one large onion and fry them in butter, covering for a while to steam and cook through. When done, stir in diced canned corned beef and let it cook until browned on the bottom and completely blended and heated through, or fill individual casseroles with the mixture and bake. Poach an egg for each serving. Incidentally, eggs poached in milk far outclass those poached in water. Try it next time. (Arm yourself with a few of those egg-poaching tins and you'll have no struggle getting the poached egg out of the pan.)

A poached egg has other uses besides staring owlishly from a double raft of toast. Ham cut in circles and fried, put on a circle of toast and topped with a poached egg can wear a mantle of cheese sauce and bear a marked resemblance to Eggs Benedict. I like cheese sauce better than Hollandaise for breakfast and toast isn't as tough on the dentures as an English Muffin. A poached egg will also sit pretty on a casserole of cream spinach (not for breakfast, for Pete's sake) or a well-browned circle of hashed browned potatoes instead of toast.

The uses of a good omelet recipe are even more varied. There are two kinds. For one kind you beat up the yolks and whites together with a little water, milk, or cream. For the other, you beat the yolks and whites separately, folding the stiffly beaten egg whites into the yolks. The latter is usually slipped into the oven to rise and brown delicately on top, but it's apt to be a little dry. Between the folds of an omelet can be tucked all manner of goodies—sautéed mushrooms, sautéed sliced chicken livers, crab, oysters, separately or in combinations with cream, tomato, or cheese sauces of a variety of flavors and seasonings.

Imagination and a good cook book for inspiration can produce some happy results. An omelet can be turned into a dessert or luncheon dish with the addition of cooked or fresh fruit and a sprinkling of sugar and set ablaze with warmed rum.

SKETCH BY SARIS

What do you want music for?

By Richard Williams

The late Irving Thalberg tried to persuade Arnold Schoenberg to compose the incidental music for the film, The Good Earth. "Just think of it," the producer told the composer, "what marvelous possibilities! A storm, a famine, a migration, an earthquake—and during the earthquake O'Lan gives birth to a child. What a chance for music!" "With so much going on," said Schoenberg, "what do you want music for?"

With so much going on in your life, what do you want music for? Of course you want it. Without it you deprive yourself of one of the most reliable and comprehensive pleasures given to human beings. To me life without music seems as dusty as a city without a park. Music is a pleasure which once acquired stays with you forever. You never "unlearn" it, as you might a foreign language. A foolish child can begin to love music and a wise old man can continue to love it in about the same way. Investment in music brings long lasting dividends in emotional satisfaction. But above all, music is useful in many different ways and it can be expected to fill several different functions in your life.

You may become a passionate music lover, a real zealot, whose chief recreation lies in a complete absorption in music and who is willing to have music shake him to the roots of his soul. But you can also use music more casually. It may be used 1) as a background for sociability, 2) as an aid to work, or 3) for certain therapeutic effects. None of these three uses requires your full attention. All of them are a relegation of music to a secondary role. The classic music lover will look down his nose at so casual a treatment of his mistress.

Since I am a music lover myself, I must confess I understand this scruple. Music demands all I have to give: When I listen to music, I cannot do anything else, and when I am doing something else, I cannot listen to music. Still, there is more than one way of skinning a melody. And surely all uses of music are legitimate if the results are helpful. We must not be stiff or dogmatic.

Music's employment as an aid to work has been recognized by industry. Music is used not so much to speed production as to alleviate boredom. Boredom is a serious industrial ailment. A great deal of research on the best way to use music in plants has been done. It has been found, for example, that alternating silence with music is preferable to continuous music. "It is generally conceded that 2½ hours of music are sufficient in the 8-hour working day." (From "Music in Industry," an interesting report published by the Industrial Recreation Association, Chicago.) It has also been found that variation in the tempo and mood of the music played is better liked than music of the same mood. For instance, here is a half-hour lunch program—a varied program of light music.

PRIVATE work, work in the seclusion of a room or study, also may benefit by music. If you use music to help your work, keep in mind not to overdo it, let silence intersperse sound, and vary your program selections. My son, who goes to college, tells me that the boys turn the phonograph on very low while they study. I must say again that personally this would drive me crazy, but I am not a good judge. Perhaps the boys turn on the music because, as nature abhors a vacuum, so does a young American abhor silence. Is it the great American disease, this fear of silence? I observe that people have the radio turned on to such a low volume that nothing but a blur comes out of it; yet that meaningless blur seems to fill a void for so many.

Women turn on music when they do their housework; several radio programs offering music for that specific purpose are on the air and are inelegantly known as "brook waltzes." I know an architect who uses music as he ponders over the blueprints. Painters love to keep music going while they stand before the easel. And we have the evidence of at least one author who listens while he works. Compton Mackenzie, the English novelist, writes: "Bernard Shaw said that music was a drug. He was referring, of course, to people who merely listened to it. Well, perhaps it is, but I have found it an extremely benign drug, and I have written hundreds of thousands of words to the accompaniment of music, not to stimulate emotion but to occupy what I may call the wastelands of the mind while one is putting down words on the page. Instead of a bit of one's attention wandering away to worry about an unanswered letter or an unpaid bill, it is detained by music while the rest of one's attention is devoted to the task in hand." (From a broadcast in the BBC's Pacific Service.)

MUSIC which has the power to stimulate emotion to the heat of tears has at the same time the power, long recognized, to soothe the savage breast. As a palliative it is probably more effective than a glass of warm milk or a cup of tea. As a curative it may be effective in certain nervous conditions. Here we stand on the threshold (Continued on page 125)

new knowledge: Music is undoubtedly a psychotherapeutic agent but precisely how it can be used, when, where, and for what conditions is yet open to medical debate. Many experiments have been made—a famous one in Walter Reed Hospital—but many more will have to be made before the effects can be defined. So important is this subject that a nonprofit Music Research Foundation Inc. has been established. Olin Downes, writing in The New York Times, reported on the subject:

"The fundamental power of music to affect people physically, mentally, and emotionally has been evident through as many centuries as those in which music has had a story. This is the central fact to be acted upon. The very elementary forms of music—the marches and ballads and work-songs in myriad varieties which induce to moods and to nervous reactions which lighten toil or soothe or excite the sensibilities—are proof of the power of the tonal art in these physical and psychological processes. In the fields of the conscious and subconscious its workings have been apparent. The biblical story of the effect of David's playing upon Saul is symbolic of a truth which is historic. We know that Farnelli was not only the confidant but the unofficial doctor of Philip of Spain through his singing.

"The question is what particular form and method the communication of this sensory experience shall take to heal and integrate body and soul through the intelligent use of this curative force.

"There are too many examples of the effectiveness of this species of therapy for us to doubt its potencies. These have been especially manifested in our hospitals for the wounded and mentally disorganized victims of the last war. Again and again, where all other methods were apparently fruitless, the use of music has aided in the restoration of mental and moral resources and opened new avenues of self-discovery and affirmation."

One need not suffer from exacerbated nerves or mental ills to take advantage of music's power to soothe and comfort. Frequent use of music for this purpose is being developed by record manufacturers, who are producing such albums as Peace of Mind, Music for Relaxation, Music for Meditation, Music for Reading, etc., etc. To me the appearance of these albums is a significant sign of the present-day need for music.

THERE is one further and important use of music which we have not mentioned: Making music yourself, whether in song or on an instrument. To this subject we shall devote the next article.

tion rather than cooking. I'm a peasant about it. With a bottle of chilled Leibfraumilch or beer, some cheese—rat or blue—perhaps some sausages, sardines, pickled trout, imported antipasto, or canned red salmon and a hunk of fresh French bread. I'm as happy as a clam in high water. All I need is someone to talk to while I stuff my face and drink. A first rate delicatessen will give you all kinds of ideas for noonday snacks.

Dinner is different. The evening meal should be limited only by one's pocketbook and the ability to cook, and there are a thousand and one cookbooks to enlighten you on that score. Don't let the idea of cooking dinner throw you, however. Steak, potatoes, and a salad are the easiest to prepare—at least for a beginner.

You can bake the potatoes or fry them. Pick out good-size river potatoes, the kind that get soft and mealy when they're baked. Scrub them well and bake them in a hot oven about an hour. You can tell when they're done by pinching them. If the sides give, and the potato feels soft inside, it's done. It's hard to beat a good, fluffy baked potato with lots of butter and salt and pepper, but cheese and green onions put them right up there on cloud eight.

Baked Potato With Cheese Sauce

Scoop some soft cheddar cheese into a little cream and butter to melt over hot water (better use a double boiler). Season to taste with mustard, salt and pepper, and a dash of A-1 sauce. When smooth and blended, add some chopped green onions. The sauce should be rather thin. Open the potatoes by making a cross into the top with a knife and squeeze the sides so the fluffy, white steaming insides bulge out, and pour the cheese sauce over the whole potato. You can eat the skins and all and it's terrific. Make plenty of sauce to pass.

For a gourmet touch that will set you up as a cook of experience and finesse, spread the cooked steaks with a blend of a couple of tablespoons of soft butter (about half a cube) to a quarter of a pound of good domestic blue or imported Roquefort cheese, seasoned with a dash of Worcestershire sauce. Slip the steaks back under the broiler for just a moment until the sauce bubbles and serve immediately. Another way to fix steaks, or chops, is to dip them in soya sauce before broiling them.

Here's a salad dressing which can be made in a mason jar:

Wine Vinegar Dressing

- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon A-1 sauce
- 1 cup red tarragon flavored wine vinegar
- 2 cups salad oil

Find yourself a clean jar with screw cap that won't leak. Mix all the ingredients except oil in the jar, tighten the cap and shake like hell. Remove the cap, dribble the oil in slowly, beating the mixture with a fork while you do this. Taste it to see if it needs any additional seasoning and then set it back in the refrigerator to chill. Shake well before using.

Another time you might try your hand at Mulligan Stew or Corned Beef and Cabbage.

Mulligan Stew

It's a hell of a dish and I recommend it when the gang convenes and your bankroll is a little flat on one side. You can even make up a mess of it for yourself. The stuff will keep three or four days in the refrigerator and it's always good to feed the dog. All you need is a couple of pounds of chuck, cut up for stew, a No. 2 can of tomatoes, some onions and any vegetables that suit your fancy. You don't brown the meat. Just pour boiling water over it in a heavy pot or Dutch oven, add part of the vegetables, including some celery and parsley, and let it simmer slowly for several hours. The rest of the vegetables are added the last half hour so they don't cook up too much. Season the meat about half an hour after it has started to cook. If you want to, you can thicken the gravy, adding a thin mixture of flour and water and heating till the gravy bubbles.

Corned Beef and Cabbage

As far as I know there were no Irishmen on my family tree, but my little French mother used to do a terrific job on corned beef and cabbage, and I see no reason why anyone who can read and follow instructions can't do just as well.

In the first place, if you like fat corned beef, get brisket. If you like it lean, get bottom round. Put it in a big pot and soak it in water to cover overnight. Next day throw away the water, put in more water and cook it about an hour and throw that water away. Then add some more water and simmer it slowly. No need to hurry because what you want to do is get some of the salt out. Your corned beef isn't going to be worth a damn unless you add two or three onions to the last water, a clove of garlic, and a couple of stalks of celery. A piece of bay leaf won't hurt it either. Let it simmer slowly about three hours. You can tell when it's done by sticking an ice pick in it. If it's hard to pull out let the meat simmer some more. When it pulls out easily, the meat is done.

Clean the cabbage and cut up in sections. Cook it very quickly right in the water with the corned beef and don't cook it until it's floppy but a little on the crisp side and still a little green around the edges. For potatoes to go with this, boil them with the jackets on—the flavor is better. A terrific mustard to go with this can be made with some Colman's dry mustard, and mix it with beer. Approach cautiously, though, or it will take the top of your head off.

Chicken Fricassee is something to dream about when it's done right, but too often it is watery, tough, or stringy with all of the flavor in the broth, and good only for soup. A real fat hen of the colored feather variety is your bird for this dish, and the trick is to cook the meat in the gravy.

Chicken Fricassee

Try out fat from the hen in a Dutch oven and in it sauté one clove of garlic, sliced, then remove. Add a chopped medium-size onion, sauté until yellow and limp, and set this aside. Add cut-up meaty pieces of the hen and sauté to seal the juices; remove meat and make gravy from the fat in the pan. Add about three tablespoons of flour for every two tablespoons of fat, stir and let cook. Then pour in, while stirring, a couple of cups of cold water. Keep stirring and let it cook until it boils and thickens. Return chicken and onions to gravy, season with salt, pepper, a bit of thyme and marjoram, and a dash of nutmeg. Cover and simmer over a very low fire until tender, or about three hours, stirring occasionally and adding additional liquid as necessary. When done, remove neck and back pieces and serve only the meaty pieces of chicken.

A FRESH APPROACH TO THE SERVING OF VEGETABLES

meat, potatoes, and vegetables. Steak or chops seem more enjoyable if you have just a zesty salad in addition to the meat. It enhances the meat flavor and seems to back up as a good taste complement. I'm giving the recipes for a number of these salads, some of cooked, some of raw vegetables, but all worthy stand-ins for the well-known hot vegetable.

For a cooked and chilled vegetable dish select your vegetable with care. Avoid "dinky" vegetables, like peas or lima beans. Select dramatic vegetables. Nothing is more breath-takingly beautiful than a platter heaped with delightfully green asparagus, cooked to firm perfection, well chilled, and beautifully arranged. Artichokes, broccoli, and celery are all glamorous and are sure to start conversation when they make their dramatic entrance at the dinner table. If you use string beans, keep them whole.

When you get involved with the vegetables that have to be cooked and diced, such as potatoes or celery root, then another serving method must be conjured up. For eye appeal is especially important in salads. And these salads are important. They play the second lead in your dinner, since the meat is usually the star performer.

You must think of color as well as texture—loads of chopped parsley and chives and slivered celery with potatoes, water cress with celery root. The serving procedure takes some planning, too.

You might present the salad in two bowls, one with the vegetables, the other with the lettuces. But whatever you do, do it with a flair.

I think it is fun to have the salad condiments in small bowls, the dressing in a bottle, and the whole thing brought out with a certain amount of flourish, so that either you or your husband can make a production of the mixing. Guests like to look at all the fuzz-buzz and the intriguing things going into the salad, and you can make quite a ritual of this.

There are hot salads, also, and for cooler evenings they are fun. Hot potato salad, served with cube or minute steaks, is excellent if you pour the hot meat drippings over the diced potatoes and then add the dressing, chopped parsley, and chives and serve. The cowboy salad mentioned later is particularly good with steaks or barbecued frankfurters wrapped in bacon.

One generally thinks of lentils and split peas as soup items only, but try them cooked just to dry perfection and they're a delicious accompaniment to meat. The peas are especially good with ham and lamb, and lentils are good with frankfurters, salami, tongue, ham, or any spicy meat.

Tomatoes are a glory in themselves. To me, they are one of the most delicious fruits we have and they deserve their place in the sun as an important salad item. A big bowl of small tomatoes, both yellow and red, or a huge tray of sliced tomatoes with chopped parsley, carrots, and celery and chives makes a delicious main course back-upper.

When serving cole slaw, make it glamorous by saving some of the leaves from the outside of the cabbage, lining the bowl with them and then putting the slivered leaves inside. And be color-conscious. Use both red and white cabbage and a few Brussels sprouts slivered and thrown in. Finely minced ginger is a tantalizing taste addition.

Water chestnuts are another crispy textured vegetable, a delightful addition to most vegetable salads. As they are an oriental product, they are rather bland and must be marinated in salad dressing before you use them.

Asparagus Salad (Serves 8)

- 6 pounds of the largest asparagus you can find
- 1 inch of water in kettle
- 1 teaspoon M.S.G. (monosodium glutamate)
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1 shallot sliced, or green onion

Wash asparagus with care, cutting it a length to fit your salad plates. In selecting asparagus, the green asparagus is really sweeter, but to my mind the white is equally delicious. Peel asparagus carefully where it starts to get tough. (You can tell by giving it the fingernail test.) If you haven't a rack, tie a string around the asparagus and stand the bunch upright in the water, which you have flavored with the monosodium glutamate, sugar, and shallot. Cover, bring it to a quick boil and, after it is boiling, turn heat to low for ten minutes. Turn off heat. Warning: Keep cover on and let steam for fifteen minutes. Then uncover, arrange on a flat dish, laying each stalk down with care. Cover with

"It took 2 Houses to teach us the Value of Plywood Subflooring"

"Everyone profits by experience. That certainly was true when Chris and I built our first house. We helped plan it. Even helped select the materials.

"Some things worked out fine. Some didn't. We splurged on floor coverings—bought the best. But we economized—or thought we did—on things like subflooring. Mistake! After we moved in, we found our floors began to develop little humps and hollows. And they squeaked like a haunted house.

"It's going to be different in our new house. Our architect told us about plywood. It's far and away the best for subfloors, he said. Makes floors look better, last longer. The big panels lay flat and stay flat. That's because plywood won't cup, shrink, swell, warp or squeak. It keeps out drafts. Makes floors warmer, too.

"Our builder agreed—said you can't beat plywood subfloors for strength and firmness. It even means extra protection against wind-storm and earthquake. And happy news! We found when you add up all the costs, plywood is as economical as it is practical. Our plywood subfloor was laid in less than half the time needed for other materials."

wax paper, then with foil, and store in refrigerator until ready for use. I have kept asparagus this way for two days and it is still as flavorful as on the day it was cooked.

When ready to serve, dress some Romaine hearts and French endive, make a bed for the asparagus. Arrange the asparagus with care in a large mound, scatter parsley over it, and serve with a copious amount of dressing. Use any of the dressings suggested in my article on salads, "Start Being a Gourmet," in HOUSE BEAUTIFUL, June, 1952.

Broccoli and string beans are prepared the same way, in a small amount of flavored water, and cooked just to the point of firm doneness.

I cook celery in water flavored with a Rose Mill chicken concentrate, and let it cool in the broth. The cooking time for whole celery varies, for it depends upon the size of the stalk. Serve celery cut in half with tarragon-flavored dressing and loads of freshly ground pepper.

Celery Root Salad (Serves 8)

3 celery root (Celeriac)
Water cress
Parsley
Chives

Cook celery root whole. Do not peel. This takes about 40 minutes in a covered container with about an inch of water. Do this a day or two before you are going to use the roots. Store in a covered container in refrigerator. You can also peel the roots, dice them, and then store in a covered container. This keeps for two or three days. Chopped chives and parsley, as well as water cress sprigs, are a must for this salad. Any of your favorite dressings can be used, but the spicier the better. Serve with mixed greens. This is good with any meat, fish or fowl.

Chilled Lentils

When you cook peas or lentils, use the small one-pound package. Cover with a can of water and a can of consommé, and, if you have a ham bone, throw that in with:

1 onion
2 carrots
2 celery stalks
1 teaspoon M.S.G.
Freshly ground pepper

I add a bay leaf to the peas in cooking. Peas take 30 minutes; lentils take 40. If they need more liquid to prevent burning, add a little as needed. They must be tender, but not mushy, and they overcook very rapidly so watch them the last 10 minutes. These two items keep for a week in covered containers in the refrigerator.

When ready to serve, have chopped parsley, chives and celery for the lentils. For the peas, parsley, chives, and carrots.

An enriched mixed green salad can stand in for a vegetable as an accompaniment to meat. It has to be a little more substantial than the salads served as a separate course with cheese. The most popular and one of the most delicious and unusual is:

Caesar Salad

6 slices of French sourdough bread
2 eggs
1/16 pound butter
1 large clove garlic, peeled
1/4 cup chopped chives
1/4 cup chopped parsley
2 heaping tablespoons grated imported Parmesan cheese
2 heads Romaine lettuce
Escarole (white center leaves)

Since this rich salad requires a bit of "doing," you might as well make a production of it and do your mixing with a flair.

On the buffet table place a bowl with two coddled eggs in the shell. (To coddle eggs, first let them get to room temperature, then put them in rapidly boiling water for one minute—no more, no less. Take them out and allow to cool before using them.)

Croutons are next on the preparation list. Cut six slices of long sourdough French Bread a quarter of an inch thick, then cut into dice or cubelets. Into a small frying pan put butter, heat, add peeled garlic, cut in half. Add bread cubelets and fry until golden brown. You must stir them constantly, and don't have too much butter, for the croutons must be crispy. If you need more butter, add a little at a time. Drain the croutons on a paper towel. This takes about five minutes. Keep them in a covered container until ready for use, and be sure to remove the garlic before putting them in the serving bowl. They must be cool and crisp before storage.

You will also need a small bowl for parsley and chives, which you can chop ahead of time and store in a covered container. Also have ready a bowl of grated cheese.

Two heads of well-washed Romaine lettuce are usually called for in this salad, but I think the salad is improved if you add some of the white center of escarole. Be sure to use all the hearts of the Romaine, leaving the small leaves whole. The rest should be broken in about two-inch lengths. Do not break it until ready to serve. Be sure the lettuce is well washed, dried, and icy cold. I wash the lettuce the day before, wrap it in a wet tea towel in a nylon bag, and store in the refrigerator.

When you are ready to serve, bring in your fragrant salad bowl filled with the icy lettuce and begin your salad production. Pour in the parsley and chives, cheese, and the two eggs. Mix the salad well by tossing with a wooden spoon and fork. This takes time as the eggs must coat each leaf.

When this is well mixed, add the dressing and mix well. Add croutons last. You will not need as much dressing as for the usual green salad, for the coddled eggs coat the leaves. The last step—when the salad is well "fatigued" toss in the croutons.

Caesar Salad Dressing

1 clove garlic
1 shallot or green onion
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon monosodium glutamate
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon Java cracked pepper (Spice Islands)
2/3 cup red wine vinegar
1 1/2 cups olive oil
5 or 6 anchovy filets

Most people do not like a strong flavor of anchovies. But I have found the following dressing has just enough of the subtle anchovy flavor to please everyone.

Imported anchovies in olive oil seem to be the sweetest, and five or six small filets are all you need for this amount of dressing. Into your electric blender, put the garlic, sugar, green onion or shallot and all the dry seasonings and the red wine vinegar; whizz so all is well blended, add the anchovies and whizz until they are of liquid consistency. Then pour into the Pyrex pitcher to add olive oil. If a little of the olive oil from the anchovies drips into the vinegar, that's all right, too. Add olive oil slowly, while stirring rapidly.

Roquefort Cheese Dressing

Lettuce with a Roquefort cheese dressing is another stepped-up mixed green salad that is good with steak Bordelaise, or with ground chuck broiled in the oven.

Entrance from Cody, Wyoming. Rates with many as the most scenic 10 miles in the world. Cody itself is a good overnight stop in case you wish to savour what lies ahead with a good night's sleep behind you. Named for Colonel William F. Cody, none other than Buffalo Bill, the town honors him with a museum and monument. And nightly at seven sharp through August, there's a Main Street parade and a typical Buffalo Bill Wild West show. Two miles out from town the highway enters Shoshone Canyon, continues to Buffalo Bill Dam, and Shoshone Lake beyond. From here the highway follows the winding river through Shoshone, our oldest National Forest. And all along it are small log cabin communities and dude ranches where you may spend a night—among them, Pehaska Teepee, once the hunting lodge of—you guessed it—Buffalo Bill.

. You'll be able to drive in most foreign countries with no more than showing your home state license plates and registration documents. France, Monaco, Sweden, and, though out of bounds just now, Czechoslovakia, have already signed with us a reciprocal treaty to that effect; the AAA is drawing up the necessary forms, and other countries will probably soon ratify.

. Veterans of the Fifth Army can revisit the battlegrounds of North Africa and Italy and show their families just what they've been talking about. Ask the Reunion Committee, Fifth Army Pilgrimage, 38 East 57th Street, New York, or the American Export Line about the 44-day Fifth Army Pilgrimage—from New York, September 12.

. Off-season air fares to Europe will give you an even better buy than the low tourist fares in effect since last May. Examples: TWA's Sky Tourist rates, beginning November 1, will line up like this—New York to Paris, $445 round trip; Los Angeles to London, $616; Chicago to London, $481; two-week packages, England and France, all-expense including sight-seeing, $585.

Laundries vary widely in their accessory fittings, according to the needs and habits of the family involved, and to the space available. Here are reminders of the facilities, in addition to the laundry appliances themselves, which make for added convenience and ease in doing the laundry.

A cupboard for washing supplies is a must; soaps, detergents, starches, bleaches, and the like should be provided for. Counters for sorting clothes before laundering and folding them afterward make the task infinitely easier. Hooks or racks for hanging freshly ironed dresses and blouses, until they are taken to their respective closets, are mighty convenient. Hoops for wool socks and sweater stretchers also help a lot. Some people like an electric plate in the laundry for making starch and dye solutions. A shelf for books with soil and stain removal instructions and a file for the tags which come on many clothes with specific washing directions is a worry-saver and first aid in an emergency.

For his own house, Robert Elkington, architect, made no effort to conceal washer and dryer in his bathroom. They stand free, like conventional bathroom fixtures, and like them are white and clean-looking. Unusual floor-to-ceiling glass doors open onto balcony, high above property so privacy is automatic.

CHANGING YOUR ADDRESS?

Be sure to let us know so that we can keep HOUSE BEAUTIFUL going to you.

"New" living room... with permanently beautiful Weldwood paneling on walls and squares of Striated Weldtex on ceilings.

They built a New home inside an Old house

...with the aid of Weldwood® Plywood

The George Montgomerys loved their old farmstead in Harrison County, Missouri. It had been their home for 25 happy years. And for more than a half century, it had been the home of other Montgomerys before them.

But... the George Montgomerys sometimes wondered whether the bad features of the old homestead outweighed the good ones... whether there was a permanent, pleasant and economical solution to its drawbacks: cracked plaster, protruding chimneys, skimpy closets (and the lack of them). Would it be better to build a new home with the inner beauty and conveniences they so much wanted?

The Montgomerys decided to build... not a new house... but a new home INSIDE their old house.

How was this remodeling miracle accomplished?

The Montgomerys quite frankly give much of the credit to Weldwood Plywood and the Weldwood supplier who was "so cooperative... giving us so many good ideas... and helping us select just the right paneling for our particular decorative and functional purposes."

It was decided that Weldwood paneling was the perfect solution for the walls because it is so beautifully decorative, permanent, crackless.

The living room, bedroom and family room

walls were covered with rich-looking Weldwood birch panels and squares of distinctive Striated Weldtex® on the ceilings.

Panels in the living room are of Weldwood Plankweld®, the edge-grooved, pre-finished panel that is proving such a favorite with discriminating home owners from one end of the country to the other. (They're so easily and quickly installed by the man of the family himself.)

The Montgomerys also gained much needed storage space by building cabinets, closets and bookshelves into the recesses on both sides of the protruding chimneys.

Weldwood paneling helps to give this multi-purpose "family-room" permanent beauty... for Weldwood Plywood is guaranteed for the life of a building.

Weldwood paneling on walls and repeated colors keep bedroom in harmony with other rooms on the first floor.

The Montgomerys (and their friends) are delighted with the beauty and livability that Weldwood Plywood gives to their "new" home. They were amazed at how easily Weldwood Plywood was installed over the old, cracked plaster walls. And they are more than happy about the way their Weldwood paneling blends with their lovely new fabrics and drapes... how it complements their new furniture.

"From every point of view," said Mrs. Montgomery, "our entire family... which includes our teen-age children, of course... are enthusiastic about what Weldwood Plywood has done for our home. And since Weldwood beauty is said to increase with age, I guess that my major interior decorating problems are also settled... for life!"

* * *

With Weldwood Plywood, the Montgomerys have built a new home inside a charming old house... a home with more room, lasting warmth, beauty and economy.

You can do the same. See your lumber dealer today or mail attached coupon for complete information about Weldwood Plywood products for your home.

Don't throw away that "old" furnace

It's 3 to 1 that the REPUBLIC Radiant Gas Heater will transform your old furnace or boiler into an efficient, dependable, automatic gas heating system

Here's Why—

Efficiency Unsurpassed because the Republic Radiant Combustion Chamber is tailor-made to your heating plant; fitted "on-the-job" to get the best possible performance.

Dependability and Long Life demonstrated by thousands of installations in service 20 years or more.

Utmost Comfort with the Republic System of Gradient-Heat Control which automatically adjusts the flame—not only on and off but UP and DOWN to match the weather.

There's many a winter's comfort left in that old furnace of yours. Three times out of four just such "old" furnaces and boilers prove "ideal" for converting to care-free gas heat with a Republic Radiant Gas Heater.

Republic's exclusive Combustion Chamber not only produces the same radiant-type heat for which your coal furnace was designed, but is actually custom-built for your particular installation.

Only if your furnace is beyond repair do you need complete new equipment to enjoy the advantages of automatic gas heat—and in that case your Authorized Autogas Dealer can tell you all about the Republic Gradient-Heat Furnace. We offer both—and still say the odds are 3 to 1 you can avoid the higher cost of new equipment. Ask your nearest Autogas Dealer to figure the many advantages.

air conditioning. It still is—though probably not as much as you think.

HOUSE BEAUTIFUL made a cost survey of air conditioning installations in a number of cities, results of which are shown in table on page 93. Costs vary widely, and we've listed some of the factors affecting them. But as you can see, to install full summer air conditioning in a new home in Dallas will cost you about 88¢ for each square foot of floor area cooled. Operating costs will average out to about 8¢ per sq. ft. per year. Or, if you want the whole cost, amortized over 15 years at 4½ per cent interest, it will cost you about 13½¢ per sq. ft. per year to own and operate full summer air conditioning.

What you should remember about installation costs.

The cost of installing summer air conditioning varies with a number of things: The prices given here are for new construction only. They do not include any allowance for separate duct systems, since houses heated by forced warm air would require ducts anyway. With any other type of heating, installation costs would be higher, since whole cost of duct work would be chargeable to cooling. Installation of summer cooling in existing houses is almost certain to run higher than in new construction.

In some parts of the country you must build a cooling tower for water used in air conditioning either because water is scarce, too warm as it comes out of pipe, or because water rates are very expensive, or because such use of water is prohibited by law. Cooling towers cost money. Though they reduce water bills, you must amortize cost of the tower and the pump needed to circulate water through it.

For those whose budgets would allow full summer air conditioning or for those whose summers are either not long or not intense enough to justify it, the industry has evolved some interesting variations. One is the so-called "window" or "room conditioner"—a complete unit of small capacity which fits into any ordinary window, can cool any ordinary-size room and requires no connection other than electricity. These units are self-contained, portable, and inexpensive, retailing for from $20 to $350, depending upon size and make. See table below.

Another money-saving innovation is the so-called split-zone system. Here you install only half the cooling capacity required for the whole house and arrange the duct system so that it delivers cool air to only one half at a time. With such an arrangement, you can cool your living area in the daytime sleeping rooms at night. Naturally, it's not as efficient an argument as a full system, but it is a great deal less.

There are a couple of other ways you can sometimes get summer comfort without complete summer conditioning equipment. If you live in the very hot, very dry South, you can cool the air merely by blowing it through a water tray or a constantly dampened floor. This brings the temperature down without refrigeration. But, because the dry air picks up a lot of moisture in the process, it also brings the humidity up. Hence these evaporative filters work only in the North and only within certain limits.

If you live in the warm but very humid air of the Gulf and Atlantic states, you can get a lot of hot weather relief merely by drying the air. This dehumidification increases the ability to evaporate perspiration from your skin. Hence it cools without its temperature being changed. Several dehumidifiers are on the market for this purpose—Chrysler Airtemp, Frigidair, Ebco, etc. But remember, they're only effective if the air temperature itself is not too high; when the air gets above the low 70s, you probably need full summer air conditioning.

What you should remember about operating costs.

These also vary widely, depending upon a number of factors: The kind of climate you have affects the cost. Obviously, summer air conditioning costs more in Houston than in Cincinnati because it gets hotter there and stays hot longer. This means that the capacity of the conditioner must be greater, which increases installation costs; and since it must run longer operating costs go up.

If you live in the dry Southwest, you run your cooling only during the day, since nights are always cool. In the Midwest, on the other hand, it gets hot and stays hot, and your air conditioning runs 24 hours a day. Also, it is easier and hence cheaper to condition the hot dry air of Arizona than the hot moist air of Kansas City.

Like your kitchen refrigerator, air conditioners are powered by either electricity or gas and electricity together. Since utility rates vary widely across the country, operation costs will vary too. Generally speaking, gas rates are lowest in the Southwest, electricity in the Northwest and TVA area. Water rates also vary widely. In many areas you have to recirculate your water through a cooling tower.

A gourmet's week in London

By William B. Powell

Believe it or not, you can dine to the Queen's taste in London. Despite all you may have heard about the pallidity of British food, I made this pleasant discovery for myself not too long ago during a week's visit. I must admit I wasn't anticipating such gastronomical enjoyment. For although I invariably find London a thrilling place, the food in its restaurants—even before the war—has always seemed less than exciting.

Though far from being a gourmet, I like to dine well. So when I knew I was going to London I wrote to several friends asking them to steer me to the best restaurants of the moment. I stipulated "of the moment" because restaurants have a way of changing their standards.

I found too many restaurants recommended to make it possible to try them all in a week. But I finally got my list down to 14—different place for lunch and dinner every day of my stay—and did all right for myself.

Let me suggest the wisdom of ordering those things for which England is famous and which are easy to get under present conditions. Whenever a maitre d'hotel would whisper smugly that he could arrange to let me have a steak, I'd thank him but say I preferred sole or Scotch salmon or grouse—all things that can be superb in England and that cost a fortune when you order them as flown over to The Colony or "21."

My week of dining à l'anglais really began on board the BOAC Stratocruiser, which flew me over non-stop in 11 hours. The plane called The Monarch served an awfully good dinner. Being used to the haute cuisine of Air France, I was prepared for a let-down. We might as well acknowledge that Air France is supreme in catering, just as Paris is in her restaurants. But that dinner served on The Monarch was as good as all but the most finicky could want, with cocktails, a wide variety of canapes,

CALIFORNIA SPRING GARDEN SHOW

Canvas offers a fine material for creating workable, dramatic sunshades in your garden. One of the easiest materials for the home handyman to use. Here it has been laced to a redwood frame. Osmundson & Staley, landscape architects.

Wire screening imbedded in translucent plastic or glass effectively cuts the amount of sunlight reaching terrace below. Its shadow pattern is pleasant, and may be dramatic at certain times of day. Peters & Wilson, landscape nurserymen.

you use the same water over and over, and costs are negligible. But you have to buy electricity to operate the cooling tower pump.

How much summer air conditioning costs you to operate depends a lot on how well designed your house is. If it's well shaded by trees, surrounded by grass, with insulated walls and ventilated attic, it will cost a lot less to cool because it's cooler to begin with. A poorly insulated house on a naked lot can take 50 per cent more cooling than a well-designed house of the same size on a cool shady lot.

Costs are affected by the number of persons in your household. All you have to throw off excess heat which the air conditioner has to remove. A big party can swamp a system which handles the family easily.

What size and type should you buy?

These are questions which can only be answered generally. The cooling capacity of summer air conditioning is generally expressed in tons. Thus, a 1-ton unit gives you the same amount of cooling you'd get from melting a ton of ice. How many tons you'd need to cool your house will depend upon its size, location, orientation, construction, etc. And it takes an engineer to compute this. But, generally speaking, a half-ton window unit will cool the average room; three to five tons will cool the average house, under average conditions.

The heart of the summer air conditioner is, of course, the machine which removes heat and moisture from indoor air and dumps it outdoors. There are two types on the market, both of them based on the same principles as your kitchen refrigerator. One is the compressor type, powered by electricity; the other, the so-called absorption type, powered by gas.

To keep things as simple as possible, this article has dealt only with summer air conditioning. The other side of the coin is, of course, winter air conditioning. This means warming, humidifying, filtering, and circulating the air. Since the two are cheapest when used together, most manufacturers produce both. On page 141 is a list of the principal makes available.

WHY NOT A BIDET?

in their patients of both sexes. The user sits astride the bowl, facing hot and cold water faucets which regulate water temperature and a third control for a pop-up drain. Water enters the bidet via a controlled stream from the depths of the bowl. (Additional water is supplied by way of a flushing rim which serves to clean the bowl thoroughly.)

In Europe, the majority of women, and indeed many men, have the daily morning habit of the partial bath using the bidet. Many are most careful to use it after each act of urination, defecation, or intercourse. Following operations or injuries to the pelvic area, or where irritations of the skin exist, physicians may advise the use of the bidet for its thermal effect and for the soothing action created by water under pressure striking the body. The individual, who because of ill health is denied the use of the bath or the shower, finds this method of localized bathing of great value. It helps elderly people bathe without exertion.

Our failure to accept the bidet probably stems from our pride in the daily bath or shower. But the bidet lets us pay special attention to the private hygiene of the pelvic area oftener than once a day.

Since a great deal of ill health arises, or is fostered, by neglect of ablutions around the hips and pelvis, the frequent application of soap and water to this area is to be recommended. Our practice of limiting ourselves to the use of toilet tissue following defecation is not entirely hygienic. The addition of soap and water has obvious advantages and the bidet is a natural aid in this procedure.

Then came turtle soup with sherry. The fish course was cold Gaspé salmon, followed by delicious filet mignon, with tiny brown potatoes and peas cooked with mint. An excellent Burgundy was served with the meat course.

For dessert there were fresh strawberries with double cream and little pastries. A cheese tray with a large assortment to choose from was passed (in English fashion) along with radishes, celery, cress, and spring onions. Champagne was served from magnums, and liqueurs were passed with the coffee. Not a bad start for my week of British austerity!

In the two years since I had been in London before, the greatest change in restaurant life seemed to be the number of private eating clubs that had sprung up, the abundance of al fresco dining spots, and the preponderance of restaurants with continental cuisine. Of course Soho has always been full of French, Italian, and Greek restaurants, but when you dined in them formerly it was on more or less of a slumming expedition, whereas now "the best people" patronize Soho boites in the grand manner.

For instance, the Greek restaurant, White Tower, in Percy Street, is one of the more popular addresses in top diplomatic circles. Far from a "dump," the White Tower turns out a cuisine that is more French than Greek. And the same holds true of two other Hellenic restaurants in the same neighborhood, the Acropolis and the Little Acropolis. At the latter I had a chicken pilaff that was delicious though garlicky. Italian pasta dishes are served well at these three Greek addresses.

One good reason why London's little continental restaurants are doing so well is that those skillful Latin chefs have a way with even the most limited list of ingredients.

Sea Food Places

England being an island, it's natural that fish abounds and it's equally natural that London should have an unusual number of sea food restaurants. Probably Prunier's is the name that visitors think of first, especially if they've known Prunier's in Paris. I didn't go there during my week's spree, but I hear it's going along as before and that means very well.

There are many other fish restaurants that have infinitely more character and atmosphere, and the one I'm most enthusiastic about is Wheeler's, 19 Old Compton Street. This little Soho spot is a three-story building with low ceilings and narrow stairways. Full of old furniture, pewter, and prints, with vases of flowers everywhere, Wheeler's is one of London's coziest restaurants. Surprisingly inexpensive, too. Only sea food is served, and it's all of the best quality. Their Sole Veronique (with white grapes and a white wine sauce) is the best I've ever had and costs a mere six shillings and sixpence—about 85¢. Only cold dishes are served on the ground floor, hot ones on the two upper floors. In cool weather an open fire adds cheer for guests dining on the second floor.

A similar sort of place but right in the heart of Mayfair is Cunningham's on Curzon Street. Very small and full of fine old oak pieces, brass, and English paintings, Cunningham's specializes in oysters, lobsters, smoked salmon, and potted shrimp. And I wonder why we can't have potted shrimp in America? Cunningham's martinis deserve four stars—cold, dry, and of a decent size. Most London martinis are so absurdly small you have to order a double in order to achieve an American average.

Still another fish place of the same type is Wilton's, just off St. James's Square and near the St. James's Theatre. It was at Wilton's that I had the surprise of surprises—a surly harridan of a waitress in polite London. She stubbornly delighted in saying No to everything we requested, like the insulting waiter in a comedy act. As it was Saturday the menu was quite limited—many sea-food restaurants in London serve only cold dishes over the week end, so our witch had every opportunity to deny many of the things we ordered. I'll have to admit that the lobster salad, served with paper thin brown bread sandwiches, was delicious and the Chablis (there's only one kind and you takes it or leaves it) was equally good. Wilton's is a convenient place to pop in for a bite when going to the St. James's Theatre—and perhaps you'll find the other waitresses more polite, though not putting on an act like my prize.

Perhaps the best known sea-food restaurant of all is Scott's in Piccadilly Circus. It's as good as ever and the oyster bar a lifesaver for those early, hurried, pre-theater meals one has to cope with in London. A good and sufficiently filling meal at this bar is dressed crab, followed by a Welsh rarebit. Scott's rarebits are small—really more like a savory, not a main course. White wine and champagne is served by the glass, and if you're going to one of the many theaters on Shaftesbury Avenue, you'll probably be on time if you dine at Scott's.

Private Clubs

London has always been a great town for clubs—at least for men's clubs. Added to these bulwarks for Britishers, during the war lots of after-hour "bottle clubs" sprang up. And right now there's a great vogue for eating clubs. The latter are for members only, but if you haven't friends to introduce you, ask the concierge of your hotel to telephone the secretary of the club and explain that you're an American passing through London. Chances are you'll be admitted.

One of the most attractive of this type of club is The Ambassador on Hamilton Place. Being right on Hyde Park, The Ambassador gives a sort of Bois de Boulogne impression. The food is good, especially if you stick to English specialties.

The day I lunched there I had hors d'oeuvres first and was reminded again about an item in English hors d'oeuvres you rarely find in any other country. This is the custom of including one dish of corn—just American canned corn dressed up with chopped peppers and seasoning. Strange that in the States, the land of corn, we seldom use it in hors d'oeuvres or salad.

Another London Club is 21 Room, housed in a huge former private residence in Chesterfield Gardens. "21," named after the famous New York restaurant, boasts several features that Jack and Charlie's can't claim. For one thing, a ballroom, and for another, an ornate oyster bar. During the "R" months the oyster bar does a brisk business. As the Kriendler brothers are associated with the New York's "21," so in London the two brothers Meadows operate both "21" and the nearby Larue. At the latter, Harry Meadows holds forth and has his hands full. Ever since Princess Margaret started patronizing Larue, it is a huge success. Small and attractive, this very French boite offers really top food

Using flowing lines instead of right-angle corners vastly increases the apparent size of the small garden at no extra cost to you. Stone wall steps up here as it recedes for same reason. Pockets for plants in the stone wall help break up massiveness of masonry that even the use of thin slab stone can't avoid. Wall is laid dry, so requires no frost footing. It will need only occasional spring repairs to eliminate frost damage.

HOW YOU CAN

Develop Your Creative Talents

Creative embroidery allows you to express your hidden talents and at the same time produce useful, charming things for your home

Here Miss Mariska Karasz (standing), HOUSE BEAUTIFUL's Guest Needlework Editor, teaches a class of "untalented" people. They were selected because they had had no previous needlework experience, no art training, no previous evidence of creative ability. Almost immediately they mastered the basic techniques, began to turn out creditable designs.

In the January 1952 issue, HOUSE BEAUTIFUL embarked on a series of articles setting down the principles of creative embroidery. These articles are being written by Miss Mariska Karasz, Guest Needlework Editor, whose own work is sold through an art gallery. Exhibitions of her work tour the museums of the country. And there is always a greater demand for her lovely creative work than there is a supply.

Now Miss Karasz can be your teacher...guiding you through the basic stitches, the fundamentals of design, helping you turn your hidden creative talents into striking accessories for your home.

And HOUSE BEAUTIFUL wants to help you as much as possible to take advantage of the future articles in this series. Just in case you failed to save the first three articles—the ones that show the basic stitches and how they can be combined—we've reprinted them. These three articles set down the fundamentals without which it will be difficult to take full advantage of future lessons. All three are available—while the supply lasts—for 45¢. Actually they constitute a primer of creative embroidery to which you will refer often as you find your creative talents blossoming into beautiful, useful things for your home. A FRESH APPROACH TO THE SERVING OF VEGETABLES

This is the recipe for Roquefort cheese dressing:

3 tablespoons Roquefort cheese (bleu cheese)
¼ cup Crosse & Blackwell's malt vinegar
½ cup olive oil
1 teaspoon M.S.G.
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon mustard
¼ teaspoon freshly ground pepper

Put cheese in mixing bowl, add dry ingredients, stir in vinegar until it is a smooth paste. Then add olive oil slowly. Store in covered container with a clove of garlic until ready to use. Remove garlic, shake well, and dress salad.

Another salad that is rather different is the Cowboy Salad. The story goes that the cowboys coming in for dinner couldn't cope with all the dishes, so they simplified things by piling Spanish beans on top of the salad, which started a trend in the West.

The greens must be husky, no tender lettuces from the garden, but rather Romaine, or escarole.

The dressing should be on the tart side, for it wants to add a zing to the beans which should be hot and flavorful. This salad is good to serve with cold cuts, any kind of beef, cheese, and the like. Hot dogs are also good with this salad for lunch. What could be simpler than throwing three cans of beans into a casserole, heating them, and serving with a salad and cold cuts?

I often add chopped shallots to the beans, a clove of garlic if the Spanish beans are mild, and the last few minutes stir in ¼ of a teaspoon of oregano. Remove the garlic at this time for no one wants to bite into a clove of garlic.

Cowboy Salad (Serves 8)

3 cans Chili Beans, Mexican style
2 heads Romaine lettuce
¼ cup chopped parsley
¼ cup chopped chives

Salad Dressing

¼ cup Widow's Mite vinegar
¼ cup olive oil
½ teaspoon M.S.G.
½ teaspoon salt
1/16 teaspoon freshly ground pepper

Mix as usual, shake well, pour on greens, toss and serve first. Then serve the casserole of beans.

Put the beans into a casserole, adding seasonings if you desire and bake for a half hour. They can be quite spicy for the tart salad dressing and lettuce seem "cut" the flavor of the beans somewhat.

Have salad dressing made, and your lettuce washed and chilled. Chop the parsley and chives and put in a covered container. When ready to serve, put lettuce, broiled into fairly small pieces, into your wooden bowl, add parsley and chives, add salad dressing and toss well with wooden spoon and fork. Serve meat first, salad next, the casserole of hot beans and hot French bread.

Hot Potato Salad (Serves 8)

8 medium potatoes, cooked with jackets
¼ cup chopped parsley
¼ cup chopped chives
1 tablespoon fresh chopped dill or 1 teaspoon dried dill ½ teaspoon crushed caraway seeds
¼ cup chopped celery

In cooking potatoes for potato salad, allow one medium potato for each person. Cook them in a frying pan with half an inch of water with their jackets on. If you wish to serve cold potato salad, cook them in the morning, cool, store them in a covered container. When you wish to serve hot potato salad, cook them the same way, allowing 45 minutes for the cookery. Peel, dice, and put in hot casserole.

Salad Dressing

¼ cup Widow's Mite vinegar
¼ cup olive oil
¼ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
½ teaspoon M.S.G.
½ teaspoon salt

Mix dry ingredients with the vinegar, add oil, shake well and serve on potato salad, hot or cold.

After fixing the potatoes, add meat drippings and mix, adding chopped chives, parsley and celery dill and caraway seeds. Add dressing and serve at once.

Sour cream dressing may be used on cold potato salad. Use the same idea of the chopped chives, celery and parsley, omitting caraway and dill as these flavors are already in the sour cream dressing. (Recipe on page 167 of the June issue.)

For a Sunday night buffet, serve salad like a Smorgasbord. Have a salad bowl filled with a mixed green salad. Surround it with bowls of cole slaw, kidney beans, tomatoes, sliced onions, potato salad. A platter of cold sliced meats goes with this.

at what London considers terribly high tariff. But with the pound at around $3, Larue's prices are less than New York's restaurants of similar caliber.

To give you an idea: A dinner of melon, sole, French beans and a half bottle of Liebfraumilch was $4.20 with tip. In pleasant weather it's nice to dine on Larue's second floor terrace and watch the Mayfair swells as they patronize the little foreign film movie theater across the street.

There are lots of other dining clubs in London and you may run across people who will give you cards to The Empress, The Wardroom, or 96 Piccadilly. I can only vouch for the ones I've mentioned.

Old Standbys

When knowing Londoners go to hotel restaurants such as The Savoy, Claridge's, or The Berkeley, they usually do not order from the menu, but ask for something special. That, they claim, is the way to dine well in a hotel. They may have something there, because I tried it twice during my week, both times with success. In Claridge's informal little corner restaurant, La Causerie, instead of taking the items on the menu, or the elaborate Swedish smorgasbord set out on a huge double-decker lazy Susan, I ordered Scotch broth, broiled sole, and braised celery, none of which was listed.

It seemed to me that Claridge's, though still London's most elegant hotel, had lost some of its fin de siècle charm since it has been re-decorated and streamlined. I prefer the atmosphere of the Connaught, which still maintains its rather North German Lloyd atmosphere. And they've been smart enough to keep the same tone in the new cocktail lounge. The public rooms remind you of the fine old hotels that went in for good solid comfort rather than for the dernier cri in decoration.

Though one feels as though substantial fare such as roast beef or mutton should be ordered in surroundings such as these, the Connaught menu is all in French, and Gallic specialties such as cassiolette de quenelles and onion soup are featured. Here, as in most London restaurants, you can get a carafe of red or white wine at a fair price. Champagne at around $1 a glass. You see much more champagne being ordered in London restaurants, even at lunch time, than in New York because it costs less than spirits.

In my list of standbys goes Hatchett's, a restaurant that I hadn't thought of for years. Friends who heard me say I must have some grouse were so enthusiastic, not only about the bird itself and its trimmings, but about the burgundy, and in fact everything that went with the dinner, that I couldn't resist trying it. And I must say this old landmark next to The Berkeley merits its reputation.

The Savoy Grill still draws theatricals and literati after the theater and here, remembering how good it had always been in the past, although it wasn't on the menu, I ordered haddock and broad beans cooked in cream sauce—and with great success.

My grapevines on the Ivy, London's Sardi's, brought varying reports. Some claim it has fallen off; others declare it is still first rate. I'm afraid my old standby Boulestin, that charming restaurant in Covent Garden, has many crosses against it at the moment. Here's hoping it will receive the needed shot-in-the-arm to bring it back to its former top place in the affections of many Londoners-out.

In the short time I had to loiter in on old favorites and try some new places too, I passed up Simon's. I felt this Strand landmark without its wagon bearing a great baron of beef would be like dining at Antoine's without a creole dish. Friends told me that as a matter of fact beef is likely to appear daily at lunch, but the trick is to arrive by noon because the supply lasts only about 45 minutes.

To be sure the cuisine of London isn't up to Paris or as copious as New York, but you can fare quite right. Indeed, if you follow the places I've suggested and go in conference with the maitre d'hotel, preferably before arrival at the restaurant, your gastronomical memories of London will be as rich as all your other recollections of the great and impressive city. You certainly will not go hungry.

ium was developed solely by s of continuous research and ng had demonstrated its worth.

ium is a proved product!

at will a conditioner do?

mere surface application of soil conditioner will not break hard, crusted soil. It will not te good soil structure. That still o be done mechanically and by d—it cannot be done while ed comfortably on the lawn or e garden.

is no "magic" liquid or powder that will up soil like this merely by applying it to face. But Krilium will keep soil broken up, that has been properly done by hand or achine.

ve effective, a conditioner must plied to soil which has been en down into proper particle (With Krilium, the conditioner be worked into the soil at the e time it is being broken up.
y one dual-purpose operation is tured.)

Badly eroded lawn which was "repaired" by treating with Krilium to 1/2-inch depth. For root crops, treatment must be carried to the root depth, if it is to have beneficial effects.

When Krilium is thus properly applied to "problem" soils, it results in improved soil workability, increased aeration, greater water-holding ability, faster germination, increased emergence, faster early growth, increased root formation, improved drainage, decreased erosion, decreased crusting and, ultimately, improved crop response.

Extent of benefits

The extent of these benefits is determined by (1) the degree of proper application and (2) the nature of the soil itself. Most pronounced effects occur in hard-packed, crusty clay soils. In finer silt soils, the effect is less noticeable. In sandy soils, little appreciable improvement will be noted.

Dry vs. wet application?

This question cannot be answered without first answering two other questions that are far more important—

- (1) How deep must a soil conditioner be applied to be effective?
- (2) How much soil conditioner is needed to do the job?

How deep?

In building a new lawn, or repairing an existing one (see above), penetration to a fraction of an inch may be sufficient to hold the soil surface in place during germination of the seed. However, this is simply erosion control—for real benefit to grass roots, treatment of 1/2 inch and more is recommended.

Root crops, such as carrots, beets, turnips, radishes, should be treated to root depth to receive any worthwhile benefit—from 3 to 6 inches.

How much?

The exact amount of Krilium needed to properly condition soil to any given depth has been accurately determined by Monsanto. The home gardener is not required to do his own mixing or guessing, is not liable to over-dilute or under-dilute... Positive results are assured with the worst type of clay soils by following application rates given with product instructions and on the package label.

Why dry application is more effective

Although Monsanto produces a wet-application formulation of Krilium for erosion control, it is satisfactory only where light surface treatment is required. Continuous field tests have shown that dry applications are more effective for home-garden use, because:

Conditioning can be carried to any effective depth... The user can see the light-colored dry powder as it is worked in—can see the extent of penetration—can, therefore, be certain of adequate treatment... There are no dilution hazards.

Typical garden root crops—turnips, beets, carrots, radishes and the like—should be treated to root depth so that the full benefits of soil conditioning are applied in the "grow zone."

How about cost of treatment?

Regardless of conflicting claims, there is but one correct way to figure cost—on the basis of depth treated!... For instance—with equal amounts of the Krilium home-gardening formulation, it is possible to treat 6 times as many square feet to a 1-inch depth as can be treated to a 6-inch depth, or 12 times as many to a 1/2-inch depth! Simple arithmetic demonstrates this to be most economical for home-garden use.

Monsanto's own supply source

The Merloam formulation of Krilium is the only one on the market today that does not contain acrylonitrile... Instead, it is based on a modified vinyl acetate maleic acid compound in continuous and plentiful supply—selected by Monsanto after original field tests proved it from 30% to 300% more effective than acrylonitrile, depending on type of soil treated.

ROCKFORD, ILLINOIS

THE EFFICIENT LUXURY OF MODERN DINING—In Lincoln, you find the most dramatic fabrics and fittings on wheels—but every detail is magnificently efficient. There is an amazing view—thanks to 3,721 square inches of glass. The down-sweep hood permits a view of the road directly ahead. And beneath it is the new Lincoln overhead valve V-8, premium product of the world's most experienced builders of V-8 engines.

LINCOLN

means modern living on the move

WONDERFUL STORAGE WALL CONVENIENCE—Lincoln is as different from yesterday's motorcar as a modern storage wall is from a cramped Victorian closet. Consider the space in the luggage compartment beneath that long rear deck—almost 30 cubic feet. Then—see the astonishing room inside the car, the extra head room, leg room and hip room. This is modern living on the move!

Standard equipment, accessories, and trim illustrated are subject to change without notice. White side-wall tires and sea-tint glass optional at extra cost.

There's a new way of life in America today.

It is freedom from clutter. It is sensible but exciting design. It is the home that is breathtakingly beautiful because it is functional. All this is modern living—the casual luxury which Lincoln now puts on wheels.

You see it in the new design...from down-sweep hood to those distinctive new tail lamps. You feel it as soon as you try the plush interiors. And you know it, the moment you swing this superb thoroughbred out on any road.

The power is there in its completely new V-8 engine—more power than you may ever need. There is also a new kind of almost automatic driving that comes from many things. From the new dual range HYDRA-MATIC Transmission. From the new ball-joint front wheel suspension which responds to the lightest touch. Above all, from a completely new concept of engineering the fine car—as proved by the fact that Lincoln was again the top fine car winner in the Mobilgas Economy Run.

Inspect the new Lincoln Cosmopolitan and Capri at your dealer's. Then take one out and discover the one fine car deliberately designed for modern living.

Mrs. Bert and the antique nobody wanted

Even if it happens only once in one collector's career, it can happen. In this man-bites-dog story, it's the dealer who gets rooked

By Jean Tigar

Antique dealers often tell you, "I love this business because you meet so many different people—you have so many interesting experiences." I've discovered this also works the other way around.

One of my most diverting memories (though I'm sure she doesn't consider it one of her most diverting memories), concerns Mrs. Bert, a dealer from whom I had been buying and with whom I had been swapping for a long time. Mrs. Bert was charming, reasonably fair, and very patient, no matter how many times you stopped in and didn't buy. In a way, it seems a shame to remember such a woman in connection with the only time you outfoxed a dealer. My only excuse is that it was unplanned and unintentional.

I had picked up, in a Salvation Army store, what appeared to me a most important-looking sampler. It was different from any sampler I'd ever seen before, having been worked in thin, brightly colored wools on stout paper that had regularly spaced holes, like the cards you used to pull yarn in and out of in kindergarten. What made the thing unique was that it was lettered in ancient Hebrew script.

I paid $3.50 for it, frame and all, and I figured I had a find. A while later, I became curious as to what it said and I took it to a collector who had learned in such things.

It turned out to be a memo commemorating someone's death. I lost interest in it when I found it didn't say "God Bless Our Holy Land" or "Give Us This Day Our Daily Bread." I shoved it in the car. The morning after I became inspired by an article that pointed out the folly of having things around you that you wished you hadn't bought. I started on a collection of old slippers at the time, and I figured if I could swap the sampler for a large white boot Mrs. Bert had, I'd be doing all right.

According to a procedure I had learned, I worked out to accomplish this swap. I left the sampler in the car and strolled into Mrs. Bert's as though I were acting on a casual impulse. I browsed around, finally got to the white china boot, asked how much it was and raised my eyebrows (I always raise my eyebrows even when I feel a thing is cheap—it never hurts). I then launched into a discourse on lacquer wall space, bringing in the

REVOLVING "ANGEL CHIMES"

From Sweden comes this enchanting decorative innovation. Heat rising from the burning candles causes the Herald Angels to revolve lightly striking the bells with their wands.
The resulting chime-like sound is charming as church bells afar. *This is the original, one and only "Angel Chimes". It differs from other candelabra of its type in that (1) it is made of heavy gauge, highly polished brass instead of copper. (2) It has a tray base to catch possible drippings. (3) It has holders for four candles instead of the usual three.
(4) It is imported from Sweden where it is precision made. 13" high. 8 candles included free with each. Buy two—one for each end of the mantel, dining table, etc. Or if you desire only one for yourself the extra will serve as a perfect gift. 2 for $5.00 postpaid, 1 for $2.75 postpaid.*

"ANGEL CHIMES" CANDLES

Made in Sweden expressly for the "Angel Chimes", these fine candles are hand dipped, smokeless and dripless. 4 1/2" long—may be had in red or white.

MRS. BERT AND THE ANTIQUE NOBODY WANTS

that I was forever buying pictures and things to fit spaces where they would never go after I got them home. From there, it was just a step to explain about the unusual sampler and wonder aloud if she'd be interested in swapping something for it.

Mrs. Bert said she didn't know since samplers weren't selling well and weren't worth much. I did not let this discourage me, knowing full well that when you reverse positions with a dealer, nothing you have is ever selling well or worth much.

"Let me show it to you," I said. "I've had it in the car for days, meaning to drop by so you could have a look at it."

When I brought it in, Mrs. Bert thought it quite curious. She had never seen one like it, she said, and she didn't think she was interested, but she wondered what it said. Since she didn't ask me what it said, I became quite busy with a milk-glass syrup pitcher I liked even better than the china boot.

The sampler was resting on the floor against a table and Mrs. Bert had stepped back to take a more satisfying look, when the door rang. It was Mrs. Price, a woman I recognized as a fellow bidder at auctions. Mrs. Price had recently become antique-conscious. I had learned from the girls who knew her that cost was no object if she liked a thing. I gathered from her enthusiastic reception Mrs. Price was receiving that Mrs. Bert knew her weakness as well as I did.

Mrs. Bert now turned her attention completely away from me, was beginning to wonder whether she should make my exit with or without my white elephant and come back another day, when Mrs. Price fell upon the sampler.

"How beautiful, how original! Where did you ever find such a thing, Bert?" she asked.

"Yes, isn't it stunning?" Mrs. Bert replied, not daring to look at me.

"Let's have a look at it in the light if it isn't too heavy to carry over there," Mrs. Price said.

"Bert" helped her customer look at the sampler and deposit it on the chair in the next room where the sun would reveal it in detail. Then she returned to me. I was still standing with the syrup pitcher in one hand and the large white boot in the other, mentally weighing one against the other, wishing I could get Mrs. Bert to accept the sampler as a down payment on them both, and too fascinated by the sudden turn of events to move.

"Were those what you thought of swapping the sampler for?" Mrs. Bert whispered sweetly.

"Well, kind of," I said, hoping I didn't look like the cat that swallowed the canary.

"All right, it's a deal," she said hoarsely, leading the way to the hall and somehow managing to refrain from patting me on the head and shoving me out the door the way you do a small boy when he's finally finished his lunch and you're dying to get back to your typewriter as fast as you can.

WHAT happened after I left I do not know. But apparently Mrs. Price decided she could live without the sampler. Some months later, I again visited Mrs. Bert to see if she would be interested in swapping something for a pin made out of human hair which I had picked up and which my husband couldn't bear the sight of. I had it tucked away in my handbag and was on my way to the basement where Mrs. Bert kept the things that weren't very antique but were, for all that, sometimes useful.

On the way downstairs, I spied the sampler on the landing wall. I hurried by it, deciding not to mention it and after weighing the matter pro and con, neither did I mention the pin. I made up my mind to keep the pin and just wear it in the afternoons.

DRAWING BY SARIS

Making music yourself

By Richard Williams

The Sunday Painter and the Vacation Violinist fell into disrepute. They had become out-of-fashion, superannuated as the baking bread read at home. They were victims of the March of Proficiency. Fine pictures could be seen easily or could be enjoyed in a reasonably good reproduction. Music could be heard easily. The virtuosos were wandering up and down the land, and one needed only the price of a concert ticket to hear music played much better than that which could be strummed at home.

As a matter of fact, one needed only to stretch out one's hand and turn a knob to admit music into the room. What was the use, then, of making the trouble—and trouble was, no matter how simplified—to learn an instrument? Why bother with an uncertain groping through Chopin Polonaise when one could see that Polonaise dashed off by a first-rate artist, if not personally, in a good "reproduction" of record or a radio? Not only that, the low estate of the dilettante in a time of which we are speaking some twenty years ago—represented a reaction, a turning away from the excessive dilettantism of the previous generation.

Fifty years ago the well-educated young lady needed to be able to play an instrument in order to be well educated. Such ability was part of female charm; it was man-appealing equipment to be used by candlelight. The young lady played badly, and she played "organdy" pieces of music. All this gentility left a sweetish taste. We began to scoff at it. We still scoff. It is easy to make fun of the clumsy-fingered pianist. "Amateurish" is a damning adjective.

It is a curious fact that there are more musical instruments in American homes than there are people to play them. They serve as furniture, not as instruments. An investigation made by Indiana University in 1948 for the American Music Conference showed that nearly forty per cent of American homes have some kind of musical instrument. But one out of every five of these instruments was not being used at the time that the survey was made. Moreover, only about a quarter of the instruments were "modern" instruments; that is, less than ten years old. One half of all the instruments were more than twenty years old, relics of all of them, if we except a few fine grand pianos and a few old violins. Only fifteen per cent of young American adults (aged twenty to twenty-nine) played an instrument.

In short, the do-it-yourself way of life had given way to let-others-do-it-for-you-and-do-it-better. It is only recently that the pendulum began, however slowly, to swing the other way. No manifestation

HOW TO LEAVE HOME

PHOTOGRAPHS BY FRITZ HENLE

Reminder to the far-away-hills-are-green contingent: Mexico is not at all far away, but its hills are green most of the year; it is as exotic and diversified a vacation land as you ever encountered. You can reach it with the greatest of ease by plane, train or car. It's high on the list of places where you get the most for your money, and you can be anything from an archeologist to a playboy and still get the impression that it was made to order for your interest. It's loaded with souvenirs worthy of suitcase space—silver, fabrics, basketry, embroidery, woodwork.

On the surface—which is what most visitors to most countries see most of—Mexico is prehistoric. Mayan, Indian, Spanish-Colonial, Victorian, Modern, depending on where you are at any given moment.

If, however, you happen to be in Mexico City this October 16, and would like to get an inside view of some Mexican homes, plan to be out at the Obregon Monument at ten in the morning, a ticket to the San Angel Tour firmly in hand. San Angel is a wonderful little village tucked into the environs so inconspicuously you might otherwise not see it at all. But, four times a year—mid-October, mid-December, mid-March, and late June—the San Angel Woman's Club offers you a rare opportunity to view at close range a side of life which most foreign countries seldom expose to the outsider.

AND COMPANY

To know how to live an enlightened and purposeful life in America's industrialized society is the greatest challenge of our times. One way to meet this challenge, says Lewis Mumford in his keen and penetrating appraisal of our civilization, is by the renewal of family life. On the next 38 pages HOUSE BEAUTIFUL presents a family that is on this road to more meaningful living.

AN IDEA THAT BECAME A WAY OF LIFE

In this highly mechanized era when so many people "live lives of quiet desperation," this story of the Rodney Walkers of Los Angeles is a compelling inspiration for everyone who seeks a richer, more purposeful way of life

By Robert W. Carrick

If, in your innermost heart, you can say, "I am leading a full, rich, meaningful life," you need read no further. But, if you cannot admit this, there is real inspiration and hope in this detailed report on exactly how one enlightened family achieved a full life. For the Walkers have thought deeply about the problems of living today. They have observed the frustrations, mindlessness, and dehumanizations of our times. They have deplored the pressures that buffet most people through all their lives, bringing them to the end of their days without having really tasted the joys of living. The Walkers believed the escape from this meaningless existence lay in the development of an inner life. Through both intuition and reason they concluded that love was the wellspring that fed this inner experience. So they added to their family because this increased their opportunity and capacity to give and receive the warmth of human affection. They organized their home and their daily life so there would be happiness, serenity and the means to fully cultivate the personality of every member of the family. Without ever having read Lewis Mumford's The Conduct of Life, they arrived at the same conclusion as this great contemporary philosopher: that in the renewal of family living, is the renewal of life itself.

Our approach to a more

The Rodney Walkers have a fresh, inspiring slant on family living.

meaningful life

By Dorothea Walker

Rodney and I went to Hawaii on our tenth anniversary. This was our first real vacation since wedding-trip days, and we were drawn by no other thought than rest and play—a brief escape from headlong rush.

As it turned out, what we had from Hawaii was not escape from living but an awakening to a better kind of living than we had known.

We saw the people of Hawaii (I don't mean the tourists at Waikiki) living in the most beautiful spot in the world and knowing it every minute—relaxed in parks with their families, swimming on their beaches, dancing the story of their green islands. A dignified old man with flowers on his hat sang as he rode by on his horse. A woman cutting flowered branches for a PTA party had time to smile at us and say, "What a pity that I destroy beauty with my cutting."

Wasn't this awareness in day-by-day living perhaps the one value above all others that gave life meaning? We wondered. We turned appraising eyes on our own life.

We were not discontented people. We were enjoying our life with each other and with our five-year-old Bruce. We managed to find some time to work in our vegetable garden, to walk, to eat outdoors, to sit before the fireplace on our deck at night.

But were enough of our energies conserved for the enjoyment of these simple things? Were the pressures of competitive life carrying us away from real values? Were we forgetting to think each day of what we wanted from life and what we wanted to give to it?

We spoke of Thoreau and his determination to front only the essential facts of life, not, when he came to die, discover that he had not lived. We remembered the Oriental command to "Look to this day for it is life" which over the centuries so many had heard and too few lived by.

Now we faced the question: Did we have the power to do better? In a sense, each of us lives as he must, and any basic departure from our established way of life requires an effort of will (Continued on next page)

Meet the Walker family

Dorothea (38) warm, genuine, very sensitive to human nature. Her mind is clear, deep, inquisitive. She is a good organizer—by choice as well as necessity. She likes music but is happiest when providing the happy childhood she thinks so essential.

Rodney (41) successful designer-builder. A "doer" with lots of energy. Emotional and very warm within the family. With his office at home he takes an unusually active part in rearing the children, enriching their experience with understanding companionship.

Bruce (9) an individualist. He has an eager, searching mind pouncing daily on new interests. Very affectionate and perceptive in emotional matters, but a guileless tease. Fond of music, plays violin and piano. He's agile, has heart and soul in scouting.

Lisa (3) out-going and even tempered. She is especially popular with other children, likes outdoor play and hikes with neighborhood youngsters. She is generous and has a great love for animals and takes care diligently of all their menagerie.

Ellen (8) more introspective and thoughtful than her twin sister Lisa. She is very talented in art and draws a great deal. Loves cooking and sewing, is quick to learn them. She's naturally helpful and conscientious about her smaller brothers.

Mark (4) kind, generous. Of all the family he has most concern for others, making sure everyone shares fun. It is he who tries to square things when someone gets in trouble. Gay and singing all the time, yet sensitive. He is Craig's constant companion.

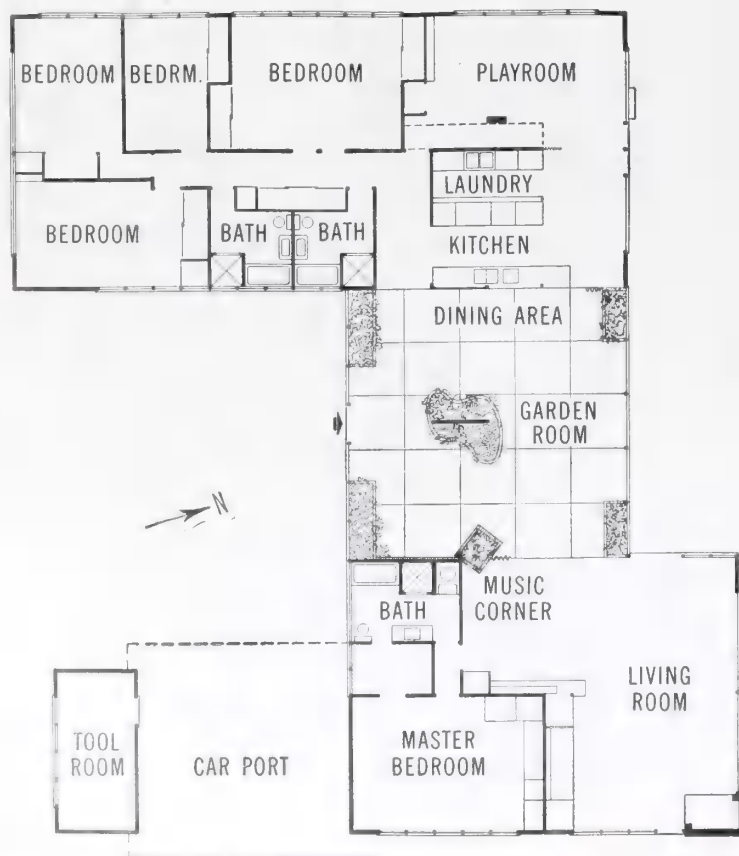

Craig (3) good-natured little gnome. He delights the family with his constant clowning. Naturally has a broad sense of humor. He is independent and resourceful for his age. All the children dote on him and he is very responsive to their devotion.

Besides a breath-taking view, the hillside site has the advantage of being far from stores and movies. Children's activities are home-centered, independent of outside diversions.

much greater than that which, it seems, we have to give.

But again we took heart from Thoreau and his assurance that, if we would advance confidently in the direction of our ideal, we would meet with success undreamed of in our common hours.

We called up our courage; and we began to discuss ways and means of directing our life toward a more complete realization of the values we thought most important.

We saw that these values had, up to this point, been most fully experienced through family living with our one child. Through Bruce's excitement at a moth breaking from its cocoon, Rodney and I had rediscovered the wonder of life renewing itself. Through his first enthusiasm for music we had found that you can hum a symphony. Through our love for him the warmth we had first shared only between ourselves had taken on a broader meaning. Through watching his development we had a sense of accomplishment which gave depth to our experience.

Extending our family living, then, we felt would be a direct road to fulfillment. "More children" was to be the first big step. But in our wildest dreams we did not see ourselves with a total of five after a year. However, five is what we had—three "adopted ones," two "born-to-us" ones. (How we acquired our adopted children, two of them from Finland, is another story and an exciting experience in itself.)

Suppose that happened to you! Suppose you found yourself with four additional children a year from now! After you'd got the spring back in your knees and your vision cleared, could you look at your life again without a shiver?

We couldn't. Even after we steadied up from the first impact, things seemed so terribly and suddenly changed that we were frightened. Dozens of times (Continued on page 92)

Being a designer-builder, Rodney produced a house that looks like a lot more than the $44,500 it cost. By super-simplifying design and structure and thoughtful choice of materials, they achieved a remarkable combination of beauty and practicality. Housekeeping and maintenance are reduced to a minimum, so parents have more time to join in projects with the children.

during the first few months we exchanged hopeless glances, "Well, it seemed like a good idea anyway." "Crackpots" we called ourselves—crackpots who had gone off the deep end into a sea of high-flown ideas.

Noise, noise, noise and confusion twice confounded! Our living room, in the middle of the house, drew all activity, and it became a sort of roaring vortex. The children, usually in a frenzy of good spirits, ran through screaming and chasing each other. No foot went down without skidding on a toy or grinding a crayon into the pale green carpet.

My work was never done. I staggered through until 6 p.m., which took on a special significance because it was then we began the comparative quiet of the television hour followed by bedtime.

A great shock was our discovery that Rodney and I, who had gone about so much together, (Continued on page 155)

The house looks even bigger than it is because all the living space, unbroken by walls or doors, stretches from the living room across the garden room (above) and past the kitchen to the playroom beyond—a total of 90 feet (it looks like 150 feet). Despite its apparent height, the peak of the garden-room ceiling is sixteen feet from the floor.

The serenity that envelopes this family is generated in part by the mental stability of parents who lead a self-directed life based on real self-knowledge. But some of it comes also from the beauty of the place in which they live. The garden room is typical of the dramatic yet lovely simplicity of the house.

Nature is part of their home

By Dr. Joseph E. Howland

The Walkers were sure that one necessity for their new way of life was the peace that comes from living close to Nature. This was to be no nostalgic back-to-nature notion, but an experience to lay the groundwork for understanding and for beauty. For themselves and their children they wanted to feel the bigness of the sky and the wonder of growing things close at hand.

They bought land with a majestic view, high in the hills overlooking the San Fernando Valley. They connected this rich sample of Nature to their daily living by a big wall of glass. The trees and rocks and the woodland plants just outside the glass and the valley and mountains beyond make a thrilling backdrop that changes as the light varies in the sky.

Inside the house, the big open garden room is the real center of living. Here tropical plants are planted in deep beds of soil, and epiphytes hold with their tendrils to a vertical column of bark. Plants become decorative accessories.

The Walkers find from experience (this is their second house built around a garden room) that family and guests always gravitate to this most nature-conscious part of the house. People seem to relax more fully here. (Continued on page 202)

"... there is nothing higher and stronger and more good for life in the future than some good memory, especially a memory of childhood, of home."

Dostoevsky

The memory of a happy childhood

Sunday is the day of exceptions at the Walkers'. Ordinarily, the children aren't allowed in their parents' bedroom till they're dressed. But come Sunday, they all pile in or on the big bed in pajamas. Here is eloquent evidence of what Mumford meant by the renewal of family life.

Equipment in the playroom is designed to encourage fun and imagination in growing youngsters. The rope-ladder and "fireman's" sliding pole satisfy the climbing urge, while hideout is a den or fort.

Most of the neighborhood youngsters gravitate to the Walkers' versatile playroom. It is virtually damage-proof and is furnished with Formica-top table, ample black-board space, handy toy storage, and a drinking fountain.

Kazunori Nakamura, the college-student-helper who "lives in" at the Walkers', wears one of his Japanese ceremonial robes as he explains some of the customs of his people. Kazi's presence eases housekeeping burdens and makes older children aware of culture of the Orient.

The twins find responsibility like bathing and dressing their "kid" brothers can be great fun. It also engenders a feeling of mutual love.

Christmas is everybody's business at the Walkers', but the idea of family projects is not confined to major holidays. Rodney and Dorothea believe that it's not what you do for your children, but what you do with them that counts. So both parents and children profit by sharing day-to-day experiences.

Above: The Walker children have been taught to make their own fun. So on Halloween they don't wait for parents to make or buy their costumes; they create their own. They use the grown-ups' coffee table for mask-making because it's surfaced with durable Micarta.

Right: The TV set in their play-room is strictly for them. They're allowed to watch Westerns and a few approved programs for just one hour each evening. (Photographer moved the children "too close" to the set in order to get them in picture.)

Right: The collie on Bruce's bed is symbolic of a household which is organized so that children are not constantly harassed by "don't's." Left: There is an abundance of laughter in the Walkers' daily life—even hairdos evoke a chuckle. Ellen and Lisa usually wear corduroy shorts and sturdy boots, and don party dresses just for special occasions.

Instead of having a big garden, the Walkers left this section of the property, called "The Park," for the youngsters' unorganized play area. Everyone of them but Craig has mastered the thirty-foot swing ropes that hang from lofty oak trees.

Because the Walkers turned their yard into a big playground . . .

Home is more fun than any place

Tenderness and compassion are the keynotes in the care the Walker children lavish on their pets. Lisa is the most skilled in handling them. It is she who prepares the daily food for three dogs, two cats, their ten kittens, one Shetland pony, and a goat.

The west end of the property is well equipped with playground apparatus. Black top paving provides ideal place for wheel toys. Pool is only 18" deep, but kids dog-paddle within its free-form limits. With this set-up there's always something to do at home.

The wonders of nature are just beginning to unfold for young Mark, who is here shown studying the anatomy of his first earthworm.

On their own initiative, Lisa and Ellen built a house for their cats in a tree outside the playroom. Dogs no longer eat cats' food.

A Sunday morning rule in the Walker household requires Father to get the breakfast. This is such a popular custom that all the kids help by getting out the necessary ingredients beforehand, then hang around and kibitz while Rodney prepares pancakes. Joint projects like this draw parents and children together, generate family unity.

OPERATION PANCAKE

Sunday breakfast is a special event because of Rodney's pancakes, but every meal is fun at the Walkers' because no one—including the five children who set and clear the table—has to worry about spilling or breaking things. Garden-room floor is mop-able cement, 15-foot table top invulnerable Formica, dishes are plastic or earthenware. Opposite, supper table is set with Towle's "Lafayette" sterling and durable Melamine plastic plates from Watertown Mfg. Co. Disposable paper mats and napkins, milk mugs, and cookie jar are from Van Keppel-Green. Straw donkey, holding napkins, courtesy of J. W. Robinson's, Beverly Hills.

The Walkers' bedroom is the kind of cloistered retreat that Lewis Mumford says every house should have if people are to escape from the daily pressures that beset them. Children and their din are at opposite end of house, yet never completely out of touch, thanks to inter-com system built into headboard of bed.

The clean, uncluttered, almost bare look of the bedroom and bath stems from Rodney and Dorothea's determination to strip their home—and, in fact, their lives—of all unessential details. Yet, by this simplification they have emphasized the natural beauty of richly grained plywood walls and the texture of hemp floor covering. One bit of ornamentation they allowed themselves was the acorn and oak-leaf symbol on bath linen and accessories.

The private life of Rodney and Dorothea

Instead of being snowed under by responsibility, Dorothea and Rodney organize their household so the five children do not interfere with their personal lives. In fact, they have come to a deeper, closer understanding of themselves by sharing the love and human warmth of their youngsters. Their bedroom is used for quiet relaxation, reading and meditation. Rodney also uses it for his office and Dorothea finds time to help him there with his work.

The Walkers have a theater party at home

They've streamlined their entertaining, thinking it more important to serve guests with solid mental fare rather than fancy food. This eases burden on Dorothea, yet in no way diminishes pleasure of the guests.

Far from being out of the swim of things because of parental responsibility, the Walkers bring entertainment into their own home. They convert their garden room into a home theater and show 16mm films—their own, their friends' or interesting rented features.

This informal way of entertaining involves a minimum of preparation. Rodney sets up screen and projector ahead of time in the garden room. Guests gather near by in the living room, enjoy a refreshing drink until the picture starts.

After the movie when the post mortems get under way, the rows of chairs break up into informal conversation groups. When the talk lags momentarily and gives way to hunger, Dorothea wheels in her tea cart and dispenses refreshments—usually coffee and an extra special dessert. Guests help her serve.

They make time for family living

The Walkers live a very simple, unhurried life. They consciously avoid the 20th-century obsession for a life of breathless activity. They realize, as Mumford says, "In our impoverished urban environments, people devote to bridge or television, to soap operas or to other forms of sodden play, much of the time that they might spend, with far greater reward, in intercourse and play with their young." So Rodney and Dorothea try to eliminate all unessential activities, and confine daily living to things that are fundamental to the growth of personality.

They also recognize that family living will flourish best when everyone's interests are centered in the home. There will come a time, of course, when the children will necessarily develop outside interests—and rightly so. But for the short formative period of early childhood they see the wisdom of making family life the whole life of each youngster. So they limit their extracurricular activities to music and scouting. (See page 110). These two wholesome pursuits have manifold advantages: They can be carried on at home—by individuals or by the family group (including the parents): they offer outlets for aesthetic expression and physical energy: they both develop creative ability, imagination, and resourcefulness.

So, by simplifying their daily life and channeling the children's activities, the Walkers make time for family projects. This sharing of common experience generates an increase in human understanding and in human warmth, thus enriching the personal lives of every member of the family.

The Walkers concentrate on music and scouting

Because it offers the opportunity for both self-expression and group activity within the home, music has an important part in the life of all the Walkers. Dorothea specializes in the cello, Rodney is fond of the violin. Lisa, Ellen, and Bruce take their violin lessons seriously.

Whenever the opportunity arises, and it frequently does in Los Angeles, the family usually attends a concert or recital or even the ballet. When Yehudi Menuhin made a local appearance, all seven music-loving Walkers were on hand to applaud loudly.

The children were particularly interested in violin virtuoso Menuhin because the instructors at Columbia Music Institute, where they are enrolled, feel that the violin is so basic to sound understanding of music they teach only that instrument.

The Walker children began taking lessons at home from the Columbia Music Institute a year ago. They soon moved up to join a string orchestra where they learn the co-ordination required of a larger group. Careful instruction makes music a pleasure, never a chore.

At a box in Philharmonic Hall the children follow long and difficult passages played by Menuhin with surprisingly good concentration. Bruce, the eldest, who plays piano and recorder as well as violin, was particularly thrilled by the experience.

After the concert, they all went backstage to meet Menuhin in person. The celebrated concert star, who himself was once a great child prodigy, asked about the Walkers' musical studies, and confessed that he began fiddling at the age of four.

You might think the Walkers are so preoccupied with family living that their own lives have become self-centered. But through their work in scouting they participate in, and contribute to, the life of their community. The scope of their existence does not stop there, however. They have what Lewis Mumford calls "a loving awareness of one's environment." He did not mean an immediate locale, but the world as a whole with all its resources of literature, painting, architecture, nature. Dorothea and Rodney have an ever-growing appreciation for these things and draw upon them to make their life as broad as it is mature.

The twins are eager-beaver Brownies, just as brother Bruce is a rabid Cub Scout. The girls do their part at fund-raising time by eating almost as many cookies as they sell to friends.

Even scouting is a family activity. Dorothea started and directs the Cub pack, Rodney helps on projects.

Dorothea is always on the alert when it comes to new projects for her pack. When Kazi mentioned that he was rated a Black Belt in judo, she seized upon the idea of having him instruct the Cubs. The youngsters caught on quickly.

The playroom with its hideout is an ideal meeting place for eight Cubs who thrive on scouting.

At Bruce's age, 9, merit badges and uniformed ceremonies achieve an importance second to none. His parents understand that and see to it that all rituals are performed with the necessary pomp and seriousness. Above, the entire den is shown at a pack inspection.

By featuring the intrinsic and inherent beauty of the building materials themselves, Rodney Walker achieved richness and warmth. But he chose materials that clean easily or that don't reveal quickly the dust and smudges of daily living. Most important, he used them to create a form that is pleasing spiritually and emotionally. At left, you see the garden-room side of the kitchen, with the cupboards closed. At top of facing page, you see the opposite direction. Note how cupboards slide open, merging kitchen with the rest of house.

Rugged materials "childproof" their house

Practicality has never been so glamorous, thanks to modern materials and sane use of old materials. Result: a carefree, soul-satisfying frame for living

The living room, at left and bottom of facing page, is the most dressed-up room in this house in the old sense of the word. But its materials are as impervious to dirt and accident as the service areas. Only the sofa and chaise use fabric that can be soiled. All other surfaces are glass, metal, plastic, or asphalt tile. Furniture tops are real wood laminated in Formica. Hemp floor covering has the advantage of letting dirt fall right through, to be swept up from asphalt tile floor with a soft broom.

Here servants are obsolete

A play-by-play account of how Dorothea Walker takes care of a household of seven, gives 10 hours a week to outside activities, yet still has time to have a real personal life of her own

By Marva Peterson Shearer

One afternoon not too long ago, the Walker twins, Ellen and Lisa, age eight, were visiting the home of a schoolmate. When her mother learned that the Walker family consisted of three boys in addition to the twin girls, she was appalled.

"What, in heaven's name," she asked, "does your mother do?"

Ellen thought for a moment. "She sits around and reads," she answered blithely.

When the report of this conversation wafted back to Dorothea Walker, this poor mother was fit to be tied. For one of her chief objectives has been to teach her daughters how to cook, clean, and take care of the younger children. And now this—this vast hiatus between the example she thought she was setting and the children's impression of her housework.

Dorothea was nettled and consulted her husband. He calmed her down. "Be glad," he said, "that the children don't regard you as a drudge. You've done a very wonderful job. You've given them an entirely new concept of housekeeping. You've showed them that you can clean and cook and look after them and still take time out for music or a quick game of ball. Most mothers let their daughters grow up with the idea that keeping house is pure drudgery.

Dorothea Walker nodded. She herself had been raised under the traditional system of routine household chores: Monday—washday, Tuesday—ironing day, Friday—general cleaning day, and so forth. It was only after a good deal of trial and error that she had discarded her mother's old-fashioned methods of housekeeping in favor of her own.

That particular approach is founded on the principle that excellent housekeeping and excellent child care are incompatible. Whenever these two factors clash, (Continued on next page)

House cleaning with a hose

Every housekeeper has dreamed of being able to use a hose instead of a mop or broom. The Walkers actually do. About twice a month the concrete floor of the garden room gets a Saturday wash-down. Excess water is channeled into the plant pockets with a squeegee.

Dorothea has chosen to relax housekeeping and favor the development of her children.

In light of this principle, she has devised a work schedule so flexible that she can drop her housework at any time in favor of the children, either for play or a problem. The character of the house Rodney designed and built for them vastly aids her.

"What I've tried to do," she explains, "is to regard housekeeping as a system (Continued on page 187)

The Children's Daily Schedule

Twins learn as they help

Dorothea never underestimates the importance of the children's help. She lets her girls do many of the simple steps in food preparation which allows her to perform other chores.

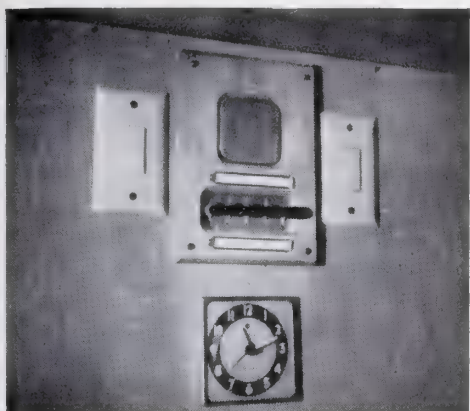

Contour sheets aid bedmaking

Each child is expected to take care of his own room. The older ones do a remarkably thorough job. Sometimes Dorothea helps during weekly change of the Sanforized contour sheets.

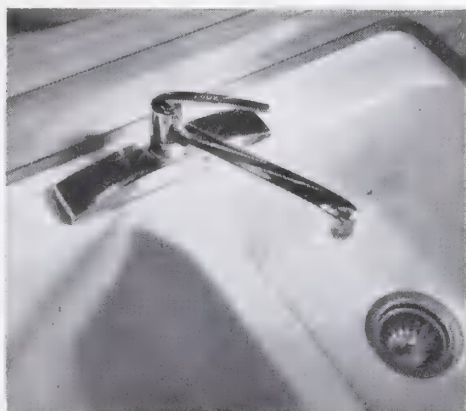

The children load the washer

In this household it seems to everyone as if the Bendix is going all the time. The family averages seventeen loads per week; when the washer isn't humming the dryer is.

Practical inter-com

An inter-com system reaching every room in the house saves steps, time, lung power, and serves as an auditory control center.

One-handle control

The self-mixing Moen faucet is a labor-saving device that combines hot and cold water with the turn of only one handle.

If hands are full

The touch-latches on all the cabinet doors operate easily under gentle pressure from knee or elbow, cost very little to install.

To keep mud out

The shelf for muddy clothes outside the playroom entrance serves as strong reminder not to track mud into the house.

Daily laundry routine

Each afternoon Dorothea sorts out a basket full of dried clothes into individual piles. Each child carries off his own clean clothes.

The signal bell

Organization plays a major role in Dorothea's housekeeping. The bell is rung each afternoon at five to call the young ones in from play. Rung any other time, it means come quickly.

How to build the house you can't afford

By Rodney Walker

Dorothea and I have built two previous houses for ourselves. We found the building period a period of growth in which we refined our ideas about the kind of home we needed. So we believe our third house, shown in this issue, solves its problems better than our other houses.

We intend to stay in this house for many years. But, much as we dislike moving, we would not hesitate to build again if changing factors in our life should demand it. There is a lot of talk about expanding houses. But a house half completed, waiting for a wing, or a complete house with the addition of a lean-to, is usually a most unsatisfactory operation economically, aesthetically and functionally.

The house we were in when our four additional children arrived had been built for life with one child. The expansion of our family from one to five children, in a single year, called for immediate action on the home front.

We saw the following possibilities: (1) Make our present house do by converting the covered roof deck to additional rooms. (2) Build a compromise house as a stop-gap. (3) Build a house which would really satisfy our needs and then try to fit it into our budget.

Of the three choices, only the last would truly represent our philosophy of living and the vital part which a house plays in that philosophy. The years during which a family is held closest to the home (when the children are small) is the time when the conveniences and the aesthetic values of a good home are the most important.

Why not try to have the right house when we needed it, rather than wait for a dream-house which we would no longer need when we could afford it?

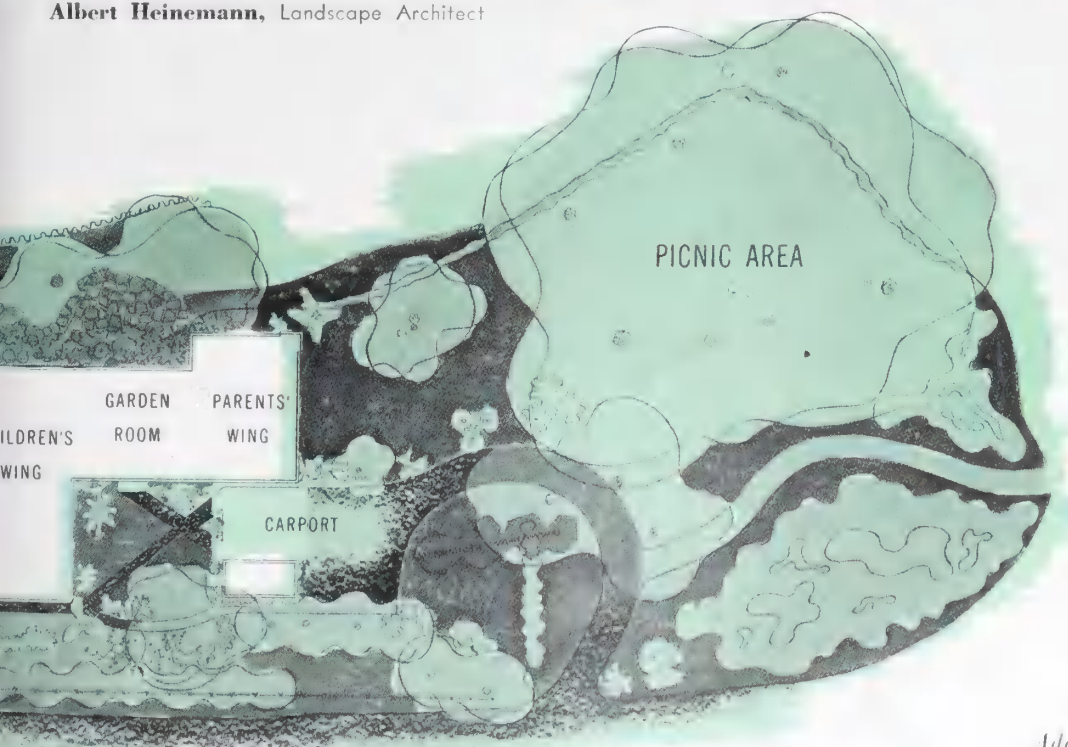

Although we were willing to allot a much larger proportion of our finances to housing than most families, it would still be a neat trick to get what we wanted—a big as well as a beautiful house. (Continued on page 138)

Trick of getting more house for your money is economical use of site. When this plot was leveled by bulldozer, top-soil was saved for grading, boulders kept for use in garden, trees preserved to minimize new planting.

Albert Heinemann, Landscape Architect

Rodney believes that modern architecture can be warm, friendly, and beautiful; that it can merge genially with its site. He does not approve of the "machine for living" approach to modern. "We wanted a house that anyone—whether architect or layman—would be sort of surprised and pleased with."

Elsewhere in this issue there are photographs of five happy children. Obviously, they are living what philosophers would call The Good Life. Can you say as much for your children, or for yourself? What secret have these children discovered? Is it one you don't know?

Of course they enjoy certain material advantages. They are clean and warm and well fed. But no great wealth is evident. Thousands who have more are certainly less "well off"; and no amount of money, no degree of luxury in the surroundings can possibly guarantee to any human being even a small part of what they are enjoying. They, on the other hand, would still have a large part of it even if they had fewer material goods.

The first thing one notices is that they are so alive and so awake. The world about them is not dim, but vivid. They are seeing and hearing, and feeling and tasting with all their senses alert. And their minds are equally active. They are not only seeing everything but they are interested in everything. The fur of the kitten is warm on their hands. The musical notes on the blackboard are an exciting challenge waiting to be translated into sound on the violins they hold lovingly in their hands. How impossible it would be for them to understand the indifference and the boredom, not only of most adults, but of a great many children materially even more fortunate than they are. For them the world is actually so full of a number of things that they are as happy as the kings in fairy tales are supposed to be.

How is it that their parents have managed to teach them this art? Or would it be more intelligent to ask how have these parents prevented them from forgetting what every normal human being is born with—namely, an awareness of the world, a curiosity about it, and a desire to explore his own capacities? For the human being is born with these things and, if he can keep them, he does not need more than a minimum of opportunities to enable him to fill a life with them.

What these parents must have done, first of all, was to set the children an example of eagerness and interest. They must be people who have themselves kept something of their natural aliveness and, therefore, people whom the children could imitate. Or, at the least, they must be people from whom the children would not imitate the wrong thing, from whose attitudes they could not be led to suppose that indifference and boredom are adult and, therefore, desirable attitudes. It is natural for a child to exclaim over an animal, a bird, or a flower. But the parent who replies, "Oh, it's only a this or a that; come away, let it alone," is teaching the child not to see or to wonder, is educating him in indifference. And, if a parent does that, then no number of "advantages" which he may tell himself he is going to offer—no schooling, no trips to concerts and museums and (Continued on page 149)

How to use and amuse your friends

If you think you can't entertain in a servantless household, try this different new way to extend your hospitality.

Invite your guests to share in the preparation as well as the party

My grandmother used to say that one of the first requisites of a good hostess was the quality of serenity. But in her day she didn't have to go out and buy the food, carry it into the kitchen, clean and prepare it herself, then cook and serve it—after putting the house in party-giving order. This, as everyone knows, is roughly the agenda of today's servantless one-woman operator. Serenity indeed!

Small wonder that she sometimes wished she could go to bed and forget the whole thing the very moment the guests were due to arrive. Small wonder that many a potential hostess ruefully concludes that entertaining is not for her, until something happens to make the mechanics of hospitality less arduous.

Yet you can play the hostess easily and with your serenity intact if you will try out a new system of entertaining. It is no casserole-in-the-oven, plate-on-the-lap sort of thing, either, but a gala sit-down dinner party with polished silver and crystal and candlelight, and one of your prize-winning flower arrangements. And you can appear as sleek and shining and composed as if you had the staff your grandmother had.

The trick is to make your guests the cooks. It works like this. You provide the setting, the cocktails and canapés, salad, wine, coffee, and all the little party amenities that sometimes get passed over when the hostess has to go it alone. The cook-guests prepare the main dishes in their own homes and carry them to the party. You confer with (Continued on page 168)

You needn't think you are not creative just because you haven't managed to pull totally new and perfect designs out of thin air. As a matter of fact few people do. Even the freshest and most original-looking design ideas can usually be traced back to something that existed before—if not as a man-made design, at least as a pattern in nature. But to see the possibilities, to realize that an existing form or fragment of form may be adapted to an entirely different end is an important way of exercising creative talent. And the more you exercise your talent, the more it grows.

Creative embroidery is a perfect means for exercising this kind of creativity because it is so flexible, so freely and easily adaptable to all kinds of materials and designs and purposes. But the great secret to becoming a creative designer, rather than a copyist, is to start with your materials and tools, not with a model to be copied. When you have learned to think in terms of fabrics, threads, and stitches, you will be ready to create your own design. Sharpen your eyes and look around you. Landscape Architect

He saves you money.

He's an expert: You avoid costly trial and error gardening. You enjoy a better price on plants and services: He is a big-volume buyer, a valuable customer who gets the best at the best price. He can enforce on-time deliveries, avoiding expensive delay, idle labor. He plans the kind of garden that will stay within the upkeep budget you set. You can hire him by the hour—or to plan whole project

Architect and landscape architect should work together to orient a new house. If you already have a house, chances are the landscape architect can improve your garden which was probably placed in the obvious—but not necessarily the right—location. He'll provide adequate access for cars and parking, and a way to get in and out of garage without fender-scraping. He'll see that service areas are large enough for your needs. He'll insure privacy for house and garden.

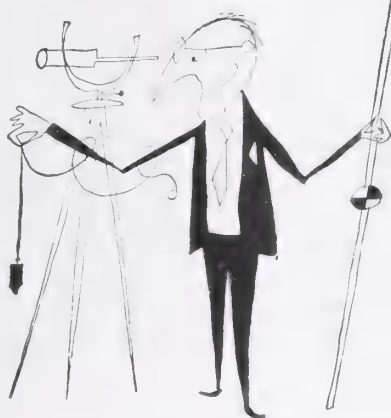

He orients house and/or garden.

He manipulates local climate.

Improving the climate 10 to 20 degrees over that of adjacent yards is within the scope of the landscape architect's work. He also solves climate problems—what to do about afternoon sun when best views are in west; how to tame cold winds; how to counteract chilly nights on the terrace.

He sets the grades.

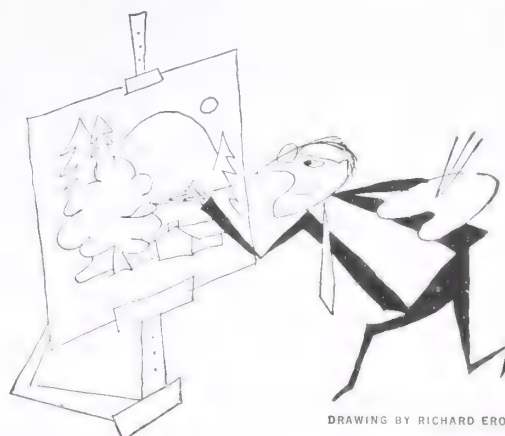

There must be an easy flow of living from house to garden if you are to get real service from both. If you are building, raising or lowering the house may save many dollars in grading later, or solve embarrassing drainage problems. Location and grade of utility lines and size of water line and meter affect garden design, upkeep.

His years of garden experience in the local area are needed to make the wisest choices in plant material for the particular garden, its exposure, soil type, and the probable quality of after-care it can expect. This choice also determines the future annual upkeep cost, and whether or not there will be distressing off-seasons in the garden.

He chooses the plants.He locates the terrace.

The landscape architect will supply you with enough terraces to provide outdoor comfort at various times of day, in different seasons. Where these terraces go is of great importance to design and function of garden and house. Many wonderful terrace sites are lost because the house is built on the spot "that seems just right in every way." Let the expert decide if it should be saved.

He'll think not only of the immediate looks (when plant material may have to be small to keep costs down) but of tomorrow. He'll remember winter-fall color possibilities, too, and what can be done at any season with appropriate garden lighting. His work will improve the looks of the house.

He provides pleasing design.

How to remodel your view

Plants become just as important as indoor accessories when you live with them just outside your windows.

When the Harold Sheetsses remodeled their house and added big windows, they realized they had to remodel the garden, too. As their garden became a real part of their daily living, they had to have something worth looking at year round

Wendell Richard Gilbert, Landscape Architect

House remodeled by

Lutah M. Riggs, Architect

Arvin B. Shaw, III, Associate

The old, boxed-in front entrance gave way to this glass room (front door is directly ahead in the picture). Obviously the old, one-sided foundation planting had to go, too, because now the plants are seen from all sides. But this sculptural approach to gardening—emphasis on individual form in plants—is also carried over into the terrace planting in the photograph below.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

View-building for picture windows brings up new problems in garden design. Now gardens aren't looked at just from outdoors but from inside the house too. Because of this there is no "front or back" to a planting, and off-seasons obviously can't be tolerated when the garden is actually part of the house and separated from it only by big sheets of glass.

This calls for abandoning several old notions about gardening. Instead of buying "foundation plantings," look for individual plants whose inherent beauty is exciting. Then position each plant with infinite care so you bring out all its beauty—be it from rugged outline or delicate tracery pattern. Keep constantly in mind that you are decorating an indoor room as well as landscaping a house. This calls for sure taste and real discrimination.

Terrace (right) originally was cut off from indoor living by an opaque wall. New transparency doubles apparent size of both indoor and outdoor rooms. Grades were carried level, doors made big enough to really open up house. Adjustable sun-filter stops heat and glare before it reaches paving or glass. Note how trees beyond were pruned to show their trunks.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAYNARD PARKER

Each plant in this new kind of gardening must make its contribution with its interesting texture or rugged, expressive form. Then all plants must be combined stylishly. Contrast this planting by Landscape Architect Gilbert with the conventional cactus garden. Note that practical garden upkeep hasn't been overlooked. All cacti are in pots, or elevated behind protecting tile to prevent damage by lawnmower. Plantings are full but not crowded.

worth the effort. The Harold Sheetsses were aware of this. They engaged their landscape architect early enough so that he dovetailed his garden remodeling with the architect's structural changes in the old house. The happy result is that the garden contributes importantly—decorating the rooms indoors, and still fulfilling the traditional role of beautifying the outside of the house. It surprises you by the beauty of its smallest parts, yet remains eye-catching from any distance indoors or out. The particular plants were chosen for their ability to keep their good looks all year in a hot, dry climate. They wouldn't be suitable for another part of the country, but each area has its own fine plants for view-building.

Pool scene at right results from superb taste in garden building. This is how gardens should be accessorized—with fine plants and appropriate, important objets d'art. Think how wonderful this garden will look even when it is covered with a blanket of snow.

Advice to Kitchen Kibitzers—

Culinary and otherwise

DRAWING BY MARILYN HAFNER

Known to some as "Trader Vic" and author of the forthcoming handbook for masculine cooks, "The Kitchen Kibitzer," from which this series of articles is taken

The
Kibitzer

If peace and tranquillity mean anything to you Kitchen Kibitzers, take it easy when you invade the domestic stronghold. That kitchen is your wife's domain and she's going to raise Cain if you horn in when it's her show. On the other hand, if it's your spotlight, go ahead and barbecue a steak or cook some chickens, make a salad and mix some drinks, but don't act like a prima donna at a command performance. The guy who, when he dons a chef's cap and apron, tries to make everything impressive and important is a first-rate pain in the neck to everyone.

A sure way to start a mild beef is to needle your first lady about the number of leftovers in the refrigerator.

I contend that a man is entitled to enough space in the refrigerator for at least half a dozen bottles of beer, and if it's not forthcoming all you have to do is poke around way back in the corners until you find some stinking, moldy stuff and you're a cinch for cold beer. How gals can accumulate so much junk in the ice box I don't know, but then take a gander at their clothes closets. Reminds me of an Idaho pack rat.

Leaving the kitchen in a mess when you cook is sheer dynamite. If you want your cooking days to be brief, brother, just leave the broiler full of grease, let things boil over and plug up those little holes in the gas burners, drop butter and flour on the floor and don't mop it up, and give the pots and pans a quick wash and shove them back in the cupboard so that they are (Continued on page 172)

Stickley American

A living style interpreting old beauty in terms of today's furniture needs

Majestic in proportion and simplicity of design, this magnificent Stickley Secretary draws its inspiration from the latter half of the Pilgrim Century. The bracket feet, the bail brasses, the decorative but convenient arrangement of the interior, and the characteristic slides that hold the drop are all authentic, modified with a subtlety and restraint that blends them perfectly into the surroundings of the modern home.

Interestingly figured and naturally beautiful, the solid cherry fruitwood needs no surface decoration to soften the plain but elegant lines. Its warm and friendly beauty will grow lovelier through the years, protected against warping or loosening by a rugged, tightly-fitted structure representative of Stickley individual craftsmanship.

What we wanted would require about 4,400 square feet of floor space, divided into at least 15 separate rooms or areas. This is a very big house for these times. And our budget was considerably below what it should have been to make this achievement easy.

In spite of the necessity for economy, we felt there could be no compromise on tough, durable surfaces and the other products which could "take it" during the growing period of five children. The extensive use of Formica, Micarta, vinyl-coated cork flooring, and hardwood plywood walls was not considered a luxury because of their easy maintenance and lasting finish.

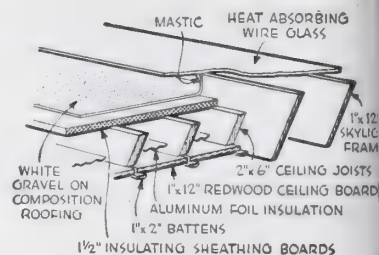

Having yourself for a client solves many building problems. You don't have to explain to yourself what you can't do. But it does not eliminate the ever-present discrepancy between the cost of the house you want and your ability to pay for it. This discrepancy is the despair of the designer-builder, but also a stimulation to his ingenuity. Making use of all the ingenuity I could muster, both as a house designer and as a contractor, this is how we built the house we couldn't afford.

I had recently developed a series of low-cost houses for duplication. So it was only natural that I decided to help solve our problem by using as many of the economy features of these houses as possible. Some of these economies were: a standard rectangular plan based on a width of 30 feet and a depth in multiples of 3 feet; simple 3-foot module framing; a fra-revelment of the structure, even using the finish frame on all wdows and doors; the use of la-bolts imbedded in the slab receiving the pre-drilled 4" x studs (screwed on with an elect-drill). (The lag-bolts automatic-position all walls, windows, a doors in the house.)

The stationary glass installatiand weather-stripped sashless sli-ing glass window and door detacost but slightly more than the glass itself. (Labor cost to instais negligible.)

The skylights are simply a rectangular frame made of 1" x 12" shelving pine, on edge, with four inches projecting above the roof.
The long one-piece heat-absorbing

Rodney stretched his building dollars by using some economy features he had already developed in a series of low-cost houses. These had a standard rectangular plan based on a width of 30 feet, a depth in multiples of 3 feet and simple 3-foot module framing. So, for his own house, Rodney took three of these houses of varying length, put them side by side and raised the roof of the center unit so that, with the roofs of the outside units, it makes a big gable over the center of the house. In fact, by utilizing the shells of the standard houses he achieved a notable saving in labor costs.

glass ("Coolite") is laid on this frame in mastic, which serves as a seal and an adhesive.

One of the most important savings is the use of dry-built construction, which eliminates the delay caused by bringing in another trade and the tons of water to plaster everything in sight. Since the labor crews are not subjected to interruption, the cabinets and walls are built up together of the same materials, and are so integrated that it is difficult to tell where one stops and the other begins. The same carpenters who start the job carry it without break to the finish. The allied trades such as plumbers, electricians, painters work along with the carpenters and finish right behind them.

Having gone this far in adapting the details of the economical standardized house to our custom design, we decided to go one step farther. Why not place three of these houses of varying lengths side by side, elevate the roof of the center unit so that in effect a portion of the two outside roofs would continue up to form a high gable over the center house? This center house of the three would become our inside garden room. The east unit would become our "grown-up" zone, and the west unit would be our service and "children's" zone. Diagrams above show how the operation looked from above and from the north side.

By using the shells of the standardized house (even down to the fireplace, transom windows, rafter-lengths, seven-foot exterior wall heights at the eave-ends, etc.), we were able to get the very most from the material used with a minimum of labor. The fireplace is an example. It replaces over ten running feet of inside and outside wall, gives a massive effect from north and east elevations, and has a fire-box which will handle up to a five and a half foot log. Yet, because no bricks have to be cut to form the simple shape, and because it is only twelve feet high over all, it costs no more to build than a small conventional fireplace.

The only real luxury we allowed ourselves (unless sheer space can be called a luxury, which it really is) is the airfloor heating. This method consists of heating a concrete slab with hot air, forced through a honey-comb space under the entire floor. In addition, there are perimeter hot-air outlets to overcome the heat-loss of large glass areas. This type of heat is desirable, especially where there are children, but not necessary. We could have used a straight perimeter heat or conventional hot water radiant heat with good results.

The impression might be left from what I have said that the aesthetic and practical values were compromised by the composite construction. I believe that the plan and pictures as shown and discussed throughout this issue indicate otherwise. For I sincerely believe that you can have high technical performance as well as architectural beauty.

In addition, I would like to point out that every structure is built of units and that having these units uniform (as with a three-foot module) is an advantage in both design and construction. The use of the 30-foot module for the width of three-unit houses (see sketch) fell in with our original idea of having a children's zone and a grown-up's zone separated, and at the same time connected, by a multi-purpose garden room.

Through the elimination of many of the common walls of the original shells, and substitutions of folding partitions for others, we were able to achieve an unusual feeling of unity and spaciousness. When all could be healthier or more fruitful. Nothing could contribute more to the growth of music and to the development of a true feeling for music. What is more important, no better remedy exists for boredom and restlessness than the decision to do it yourself, to enter an art creatively, to be active as well as passive. This is the soundest prescription on "how to use music in your life."

Nobody harbors the naïve illusion that the amateur pianist can do what the professional can do. Only in rare cases will he play even passably well. But we have all become a little too discouraged by going to Carnegie Hall. We must overcome our timidity and our natural dislike of doing things inexpertly before we can begin to entertain ourselves with the making of music. That is, of course, the function of the amateur: to entertain himself. We must have the courage to play badly.

IT IS, of course, not at all necessary to be able to play yourself in order to enjoy music, no more than it is necessary to be able to draw a house with a chimney in order to enjoy the painting "House of Arles" by Van Gogh. Though we can enjoy music without playing, we shall enjoy it ten, fifty, a hundred times more if we do play. I believe that doesn't matter greatly what kind of music you play. Here exists true democracy. I am convinced that the man or woman who plays Victor Herbert's music somehow acquires a better feeling for Schubert's music. The ability to make music leads to an intuitive appreciation that the reading of books, the learning of the structural aspects of music or passive listening cannot furnish. A passport is issued. The barrier at the front is raised. The sun comes up. I see the landscape with new eyes.

E. M. Forster, the author of Passage to India (a novel, incidentally, which I have read just recently and enjoyed enormously) is a man who loves music and puts it in his life. In a delightful essay to be found in Two Cheers for Democracy entitled "Not Lister to Music" he speaks of his "performances upon the piano."

Dining-room, living room and patio groups, for use indoors or outdoors—processed against rust.

"These grow worse yearly, never will I give them up. Forcing, they compel me to attempt wool-gathering or think myself clever here—and they are off all non-musical matter. Another thing, they teach me about construction. I see becomes of a phrase, how it is transformed or returned, some bottom upward, and get some of the relation of keys. Play-bethoven, as I generally do, familiar with his tricks, his grace, his sudden softnesses, slipping of a tragic theme one moment, his love, when tragic, for key of C minor, and his averting the key of B major. This is a physical approach to music which cannot be gained in the slough of 'appreciation.' Even when people play as I do, they should continue; help them to listen."

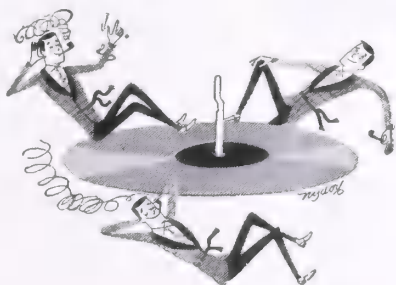

I say that you are too old to begin to learn. And if you did an instrument when you were young and gave it up, don't say it is too late to take it up. The degree of dexterity you are not so high; it is probably higher than that needed for carpentry. To be sure, a certain amount of study and practice is required. Call it the equivalent of that necessary to learn a decent game of bridge or learn the grip of the golf club before you master your stroke. In knowing your musical career or your desires, I cannot tell what instrument you should pick up. There are simple instruments which give fairly satisfactory returns. There is a particular one now for the recorder, a flute-like instrument which can be apprehended in a few days and which is fun to play, especially when accompanied by piano or in concord with other players. There is a Society devoted to the cause of the recorder, the American Recorder Society. And instruments such as clarinet and saxophone are rewarding when they offer the opportunity of playing in bands or small orchestras and add the pleasure of familiarity to the pleasure of music. The guitar can make good music, limited though the instrument is. If your ear is good and your sense of pitch refined, the violin may give you greatest enjoyment. But all in all the piano is for most the most satisfactory instrument, first because it can be played with a relatively low degree of skill and second because its literature is so wide and wealthy. The modern electric organ, cousin of the piano, has the virtue of disguising scanty keyboard technique. On such an organ you may produce beautiful sounds and colors and discourse dreamily with even less dexterity than the piano requires.

I know that many people are toying with the idea of taking piano or organ lessons (and quite a number of them actually are taking them), but I believe that many more would do so if they knew where to go for instruction. Music teachers and schools seem to hide their light under a bushel. They serve the demand already created without tempting those who are on the verge. Do they consider salesmanship undignified?

People also hesitate because they do not want to go to some old-fashioned music teacher who will make them play scales and Czerny exercises. There is a need for the classification of all music teachers, perhaps for licensing them and then making such information, including costs, readily available through such sources as music stores or department stores.

MORE adult music classes ought to be formed. Such classes ought to be given in cheerful, club-like surroundings. It should be emphasized that they are designed solely for the amateur, the man or woman who wants to learn just "for fun." Such instruction is available, such classes do exist, but they are not sufficiently publicized. Perhaps we need schools as aggressively promoted as Arthur Murray promotes his dancing classes. If you live in a town which has a good music store, its proprietor might advise you. So could the music teacher of the high school. So could the local branch of the National Federation of Music Clubs. But you'll have to make your own inquiries. Do it—you won't be sorry!

Books for GardenersA survey of recently published plant literature

Farm Wanted, by Helen Train Hilles. Julian Messner, Inc., New York, 1951. 236 pages. $3. Illus. by Roger Duvoisin.

Have you ever seen a city sophisticate up to her knees in manure and loving it? Here is a hearty, lifelike book by a writer who has applied her intelligence and wit to 15 acres for 15 years. Result? A lot of cabbage, both cultivated and printed. This book is especially for wishful city folk whose blood pounds at the mention of "a little place in the country." So, beware! Here is an opiate to still the roar of subway and traffic, a whiff of moist country earth and green things growing to erase exhaust's choking stench—a lure! For spring is always just around the corner, and real live bait abounds in Manhattan.

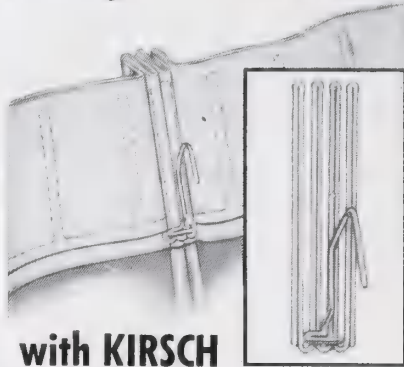

Mrs. Hilles writes with the charm and intensity of a charlatan. Her farm is a hair-raising, tumultuous, humorous three-ring circus that runs the gamut of life and death and sex. Above all, Mrs. Hilles is honest. This is not an "I did it all by myself" book. She did not mow the old bedridden farmer under or raise first-prize things, both animal and vegetable, within 30 days. There is a moving spirit throughout the book—the former owner of the Hilles Farm, a farmer who couldn't make good on the farm until city-earned dollars made him worth a fortune. With his help there's always the excitement of doing, never the unrest of what to do.

Every chapter, begun with a delightful illustration, is a story to remember—the tender care given a paralyzed calf to keep her from the butcher's chopping block, the stringbean explosion, novel experiments with the innards of hors d'oeuvres.

This book will awaken the man who dreams of "over-alled" heaven. Every day is work day. You either fight the endless chores with your own elbow grease or you pay someone for the use of theirs, as the author did. Three dollars is little enough to pay for having your eyes opened. —Kathleen Grantham

A full-color photograph on page shows arrangements the author has made primarily of roses. The text contains directions for the artistic assembly of flowers in various types of containers and vases.

Whether the roses are grown or whether they come from the florist, Edna Whitsitt's abundance of ideas for arranging them stiffly in a vase is a pleasure.

Although the illustrations are a little dated, the eye when the book is open it will soon be noticed that the brown tones often overshadow the greens, to the detriment of the foliage effects.—Carol Wood

Scenic Beauty

The Berkshires, through the lens of Arthur Palme. Palme-Groves Publishing Co., 97 Livingstone Street, Pittsfield, Mass., 1951. $3.

New Englanders are inclined to look upon the Berkshires as America's most scenic spots, rather than tumultuous, the steep slopes and valley vistas have an undeniable appeal. The beauty of the region has been pictorially recorded in the years by Arthur Palme, editor of the Berkshire Calendar. This book presents a varied selection of nearly 100 photographs.

Wild flowers are pictured, and waterfalls, winter scenes in summer, and characteristic scapes. Two gardens are shown: herb planting at the Berkshire Garden Center and the garden of Walter Pritchard Eaton. The latter has written a sketch about the photographer. —C.

Magnolias and Old Lace

Charleston Gardens, by I. W. Briggs. University of Carolina Press, Columbia, 1951. 156 pages. $7.50.

The rare delights which Briggs has experienced while visiting the gardens of Charleston he has passed on as realistically as word and picture can substitute for the sight of living plants. In gratitude for this "priceless privilege" of being able to enjoy these often beautiful plantings, he has assigned all the proceeds from the book's sale to institutions devoted to aiding the blind and deprived of sight.

His text, which is brief, is enriched with regret, for the music and color in his words. The old gardens are accompanied by enchanting photographs of old-day plantings in and around Charleston. This is a fine and beautiful book. —C. A.

sympathetic interest and perhaps something more. It is, perhaps, a reply like, "And the leaves on the tail more than the sparrow does."

The child who has received that kind of encouragement is also the one much more likely to notice other things as he grows older; perhaps, even, for instance, that Beethoven's basses are not the same as Mozart's or that Renoir applies paint in a fashion different from that of Cezanne. But, even if he never cares to go beyond a delighted interest in simple things, that may be enough to make him a happy and successful human being.

We talk about what we can teach children. Perhaps we would be wise to be a little bit more aware of what they can teach us or, rather, of how much that we have forgotten they can remind us. All too often what we do teach them is how to be unobservant and indifferent, how to avoid looking and noticing. The world does not need to become less interesting as we see more of it, but to most people it does, and they might be well advised to ask the children how they go about being so keenly interested in what lies before their eyes.

Of such, it is said, is the Kingdom of Heaven, and that may be.
But what is even more obvious is this: The kingdom of this earth is theirs. They will know how really to take possession of it if we give them only a little encouragement—perhaps, even if we just refrain from imposing upon them our own blindness and insensibility.

Spring-tension swivel sockets enable arms of Swivelier's handsome Wallite to swing forward or downward; the shades can be directed upward, downward, set at any angle. Each has its own switch. An adhesive disc that supplements wallplate's screw mounting assures a positive, non-chipping hold. All-metal unit is finely finished in green, gray, coral, yellow. $25.50; 1-arm model, $15.75. Hammacher Schlemmer, New York, N. Y.

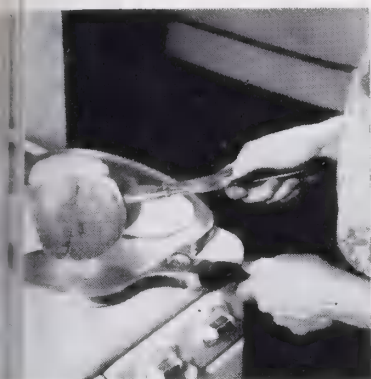

You can brew as little as 2 cups and as much as 6 cups of coffee with this newest edition of Nicro's coffee-maker. For a lone wolf or twosome, this brewing range meets both everyday and small dining party needs. Bowls and decanter cover, like larger Nicro brewers, of heavy-gauge stainless-steel; filter is cloth-less. $9.95, including plastic stand for parking upper bowl from Emery-Bird-Thayer, Kansas City, Missouri.

The 12-inch blade of Robeson's For-Men-Only Carver can span the largest roast with ease. It's made of Frozen-Heat Steel, famed for its keen, lasting edge. $20, as part of Robeson Barbecue Set (knife, fork, densified-Formica holder that matches handles); knife only, $7.50. The honing device, Robeson's Sharp-Stik assures sharpening of edge only and at the proper angle. Especially speedy, too. $1.95. All from Stern's, New York.

The Sew-E-Z Cloth Holder is worth having even if you sew only an occasional hem. Its presser foot anchors even chiffon without harm. A flick of the finger releases it when you want to move the fabric and anchor it anew. Sponge-rubber cushion on top of nicked-steel structure accessibly parks pin. The table clamp and its thumb screw are felt-covered. $1, Sew-It Products Co., Box 1434, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Automatic pancake flipping is in itself quite a feat. This spatula makes it still more remarkable by returning the pancake to the exact griddle spot it originally occupied. You simply press and release the thumb lever; the spatula's spring-action turn flips the pancake and sets it down. Suzie Flipper, a restaurant device, is sturdily made of stainless steel; Bakelite handle has finger grooves. $2. Malcolm's, 524 N. Charles, Baltimore, Maryland.

Both sides of this towel stand raise to horizontal position to create drying facilities for bathroom laundry. Each folding wing furnishes six 20-inch bars. You simply add Maid-Easy Coffee Stain Remover to water and let the coffee-maker brew the dilution. The powder's oxygenizing action dispels all trace of stain and bitter residual oil. It can be used to treat even your table linens. The restainer also removes tea's residual deposit. Hosts of restaurants and institutions use it for plastic tableware as well as beverage brews. $1.25. Damar's, 122 Treat Place, Newark, N. J.

A MORE MEANINGFUL LIFE

no longer free to share time from the children. Baby sitters we learned, are not eager to answer calls from five-children families.

At first, we did little but try to keep up with the family's physical and preserve some shreds of order for ourselves. We had no energy to use for analysis of family problems or for setup betterment programs.

Then we began to recognize two definite ways in which we could improve the situation. First, we saw our need for not more help, but for a different kind of help. Kazunori Yamamura, a student from Japan who was doing graduate work at the University of California, came to live with us. Kazi, who has become one of the best friends of each of us, was at the university in the daytime; but his responsible attitude for the children on evenings when Rodney and I wanted to go out did much to relax us; and the fact that he gave the children their breakfast and took over the kitchen at dinner shortened my working day down to the point where I could begin to cope with it, even in our then disorganized state.

A second source of help we saw would be a house really suited to our new family. We needed more space because the larger the group the greater is the need for communal activity areas and the greater is the need of each individual for a private spot of his own. We needed a different layout; there must be areas where order and quiet would always be available and there must be areas where noise and disorder would be permitted. We needed more rugged materials, easy to keep; the pastel carpeting must go; we must have more plastic surfaces and labor-saving devices.

It was during this period of analysis, while we planned and built our new home, that our thinking turned from chaos to order. We began to see that, if we were now finding it possible to think constructively about our housing needs, we could probably begin to think constructively about other basic contributions to our new family living.

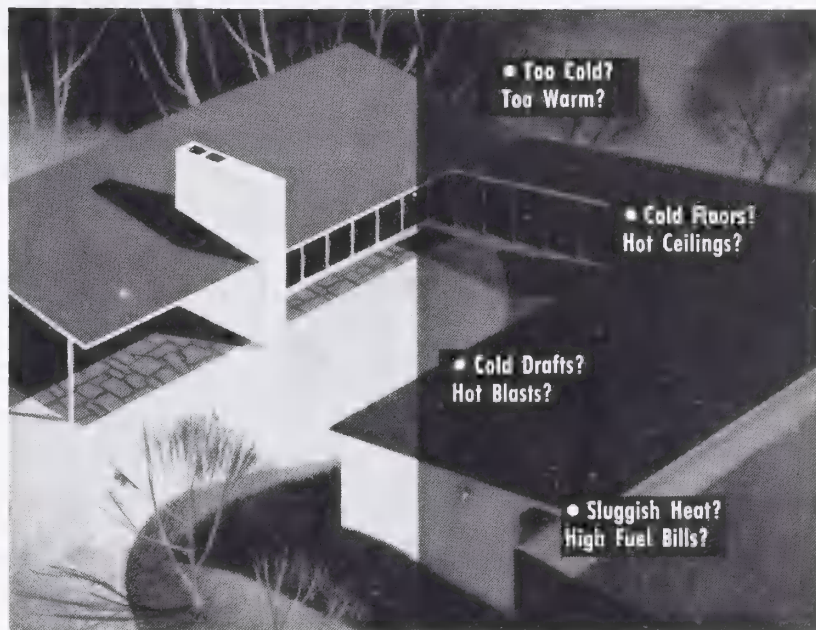

Through our conversations during this period emerged four different ways along which we thought we must advance if our

One of the wonderful things about the Walkers' household is the lack of tension—and that is because Dorothea and Rodney never expect perfection in their children. Monthly conferences with an expert psychologist help them eliminate friction between personalities. Placid scenes like this of Mark and Craig are typical.

Does Winter Mean You Live in HALF A HOUSE?

Let G-E quick heat give you complete home comfort—at less cost!

If you face any of these problems during the coming winter, chances are you will be living in only "half a house." Bring complete comfort to your entire home. Change to G-E Home Heating which owners report saves as much as fifty percent on fuel!

HOME HEATING

Quick comfort—at low cost!

Whether you use warm air, steam, or hot water—no matter what type of fuel you use—there is a General Electric furnace or boiler to solve your particular comfort problem. The secret of each unit's performance lies in G. E.'s unique quick heating features:

G-E Oil Boiler—Heat to radiators in 5 to 7 minutes from cold start. "Turn-Back Flame" burns the oil completely for big fuel savings.

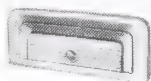

G-E Oil Furnace—Instant heat transferred by "Spiraflo" section from flame to room air assures oil-saving quick comfort.

G-E Gas Furnace—Fast heat with efficient cast-iron "pin-point" heat sections that squeeze heat fast from burning gas.

G-E Gas Boiler—Heat in a jiffy! Special "zig-zag" passages with hundreds of tiny boilers give you all the heat you pay for!

G-E Air-Wall Register—The draft-free G-E System that warms walls so they "radiate" heat—lets you place furniture where you want it.

A MORE MEANINGFUL LIFE

Built into the headboard on each side of Rodney and Dorothea's bed is a compact storage unit that holds books, radio, telephone, etc. The drop-down door of the unit makes a folding bedside table. It's surfaced with durable Formica, is handy for snacks, easy to clean.

new life was to be a success. The things we hoped to do were these:

1. We wanted a simple life, but the demands and care of seven people were complicating and confusing. We hoped that by using judgment and organization we could win for ourselves relaxation and leisure with which to enjoy our family.

2. We hoped to mesh our seven personalities into a family unit from which each of us could draw a feeling of warmth and good will.

3. We hoped to live in such a way that all seven personalities would cultivate a growing understanding of worth-while life values.

4. We hoped that, in the midst of our five children, Rodney and I could preserve our adult life.

The first thing we had to do was try to achieve more leisure and serenity in the face of the greatly increased demands on our energy; and it was here that we first began to make progress. The episode which gave us our start was a chance one.

Four months after our family was all assembled, we found ourselves for a month with no help at all (Kazi did not come until later), and during this month Rodney and I both contracted a virus. I almost ready to give up, but then took a surprising turn.

Ellen and Lisa, then six and half, brought Craig and Mark (one and two) into our room each morning washed and dressed, had their clothes changed during the day, bathed them at night. Bruce, then seven, showed talent as a dishwasher loader and persisted with the vacuum cleaner.

What surprised us most was that the children could do so much but that their efforts were sustained over so long a period, and that they enjoyed themselves so thoroughly. The secret of their satisfaction seemed to lie in the fact that they had been doing meaningful work, not drummed-up jobs assigned so they would have "chore."

The work had been on a practical, grown-up, responsible level, too. It taxed their ingenuity at times, but it had a nice element of variety. Above all, Rodney's and my appreciation during this period had been descending praise, and heartfelt thanks because we were truly grateful for what they did.

Could we keep these conditions live? We have tried, and our efforts have brought good returns. Sometimes the children grumble at jobs, of course, but at the same time they regularly assume more responsibility than is offered them.

Recently, Ellen and Lisa had an overnight guest who was impatient as the twins scrubbed up the breakfast table. I heard the visitor say that at her house she didn't have to do anything except make her bed. Ellen answered comfortably, "Well, you'd do more than make your bed if you lived in this house. We all help together here. So we'll have things nice." No one hearing her relaxed tone could think she envied the girl who didn't have to pull her weight at home.

As the children shared our housekeeping more and more, we began to appreciate the importance of simplification; and with this recognition came changing attitudes toward housework and the other mechanics of living. We did not lower our standards—our house is better kept now than it ever was before we had our family. But we did simplify; we did learn the value of planning and organization; and we did turn a cold shoulder on unnecessary work.

I stopped "picking up" all day long. One part of our house we now called the "grown-up" section. This term has no reference to chronological age, but just means that in this area none of us runs and chases or brings toys or cut-outs. Here we talk or think or read or listen to records or play the piano or play games like chess, cards or parchesi. Our "grown-up" section stays orderly because of the nature of our activity in it; so there is always an area in the house where we can find the absence of clutter necessary to serenity.

For our "children's" section (again this means all of us), we made the rule: "one clean-up a day and no nagging in between." Here almost any activity not a direct threat to life and limb is allowed, and any state of disorder is tolerated as long as it is not more than 24 hours old.

When we moved into our new house, we found that this zoning system began to give us even more help than before, because this house was designed for zoned living. The east wing and garden room became the "grown-up" zone and the west wing is the "children's" zone.

Our zoning system, giving us one area easy to keep in order and another area where no one need be concerned about order except for one pick-up time daily, has done much to simplify our housekeeping. Through such simplification and through sharing our work, we have freed a large part of our time, and much of our freed time we use in other family activities.

The second of the four things we hoped to accomplish was to build up real warmth and good feeling among our family members. Playing together in our leisure time has fostered this development.

We are never at a loss for an excuse for a family party with so many birthdays, adoption days, coming-to-America days. Hardly a week goes by without a picnic—at the beach or a park or often just outside in our own yard. More rarely we make other excursions—

The twins' room offers an example of Rodney's far-sighted planning. While they are young, the girls share one large room. But it has two doors so that when the time comes for each one to have her own private room, the erection of a simple partition will easily convert this room into two.

to a show, a carnival, ballet, a concert. Music and scouting, two of the activities which have much of our time, are shown on pages 110 through 113.

Through constant sharing of activities, our family is developing a real solidarity. Our pony was delivered late at night. The children had saved most of their allowance for a year and a half to buy him, so excitement ran high; and though Mark and Craig had gone to sleep, the older children had stayed awake in anticipation. As Tar Baby was coaxed out of the horse van, Bruce stopped his delirious capering and said, "Now if the little kids were only here, too, things would be just about perfect, wouldn't they?"

A device we use to minimize conflict within the group (especially between the children and ourselves) is that of living pretty much by schedule. Children at this age like to know what to count on and they will not resent coming from play at 5, stopping television at 7, turning off lights at 8, etc., if those things are part of an impersonal daily routine rather than personal dictums issued by adults. We do not hesitate to vary our routine for special occasions, especially on week ends, and we keep the schedule simple enough so that all of the children have no trouble carrying it in their minds.

WE DECIDED early that it was no more sensible to raise five children without expert psychological help than it would be to raise them without medical advice. Monthly conferences with a qualified child psychologist have helped much, we feel, in keeping rivalries and resentments between family members as little troublesome as they are. With so many and such varied personalities, complete absence of conflict or friction isn't to be expected, and our psychologist friend has helped us to understand this. In this understanding has been our greatest help, because when you begin to relax the tensions caused by expecting perfection, you are well on the way to enjoying your family.

Progress on our third goal (keeping our individual members learning and growing in their attitudes toward life) was furthered by several conditions in our way of life.

First, I should mention the influence of living with Nature as we do. There is real country adjoining us, and the children are free to roam, explore for forts and caves, collect lizards and rocks, etc. This has helped not only to give them the pleasures of outdoors and freedom, but to develop their alertness, imagination, and responsibility.

Our location has made a further contribution to our children's learning in that our distance from shows and stores has been an incentive to resourcefulness in concocting activities for group amusement.

OUR large animal family (pony, goat, three dogs, two cats, ten new kittens) stimulates the children's capacity for loving. The children, especially Lisa, are unbelievably faithful in the animals' care, quick to think of their comfort and feelings. Angel, our collie and the best-loved of all the animals, was jealous when the pony and the goat moved in. The children were careful to see that she got an extra hug each time they played with the new pets.

This year, the children have experienced birth and death with their pets, both leading to much talk and new understandings. A life with their animals gives the children a basis for projecting their own observations: Mark was disturbed because the goat raised such a fuss when he left her. I heard Lisa tell him, "Never mind. Pretty soon she'll learn she doesn't get her way whining like that and then she'll feel a lot better."

Our new home has contributed in many ways to individual learning in our family. It is a beautiful house, and the children are sensitive to it. Mark (age four) came in from play, looked around with satisfaction and said, "We built our house tall, didn't we, Mama, just the way we wanted it to be."

Having their own wing fostered the children's independence, freedom, and pride in ownership. Features of the house, such as the playroom hideout, stimulate their imagination. Facilities for their self-expression (the drawing board, piano, etc.) are always in use.

The size of our group has had in itself, a big part to play. The necessity for each child to help look after those younger than himself has made for more mature attitudes of unselfishness. Ellen and Lisa as a matter of course take care of their own sweaters and put them on Mark and Craig if the weather turns cold. During a family battle which would be out of date can, though, do our best to

o. We have always enjoyed this of Dostoevsky's: "You must that there is nothing higher ory, especially a memory of hood, of home. People talk to can, too, try to make the day to increase the children's wreness of the beauty of the ne and now." In this awareness lie the foundation for the inal life that will give them peron, strength, and balance ghout their lives.

A question we are asked often is whether Rodney and I manage to live any adult life together with so many children around all the time.
In the beginning we wondered about this ourselves and we put the preservation of our life together among the four things we wanted to accomplish.

Now we've stopped worrying about it. As you can see from the story on page 107, Rodney and I do have both the place and opportunity for time together at home.
We go out together frequently now, and we even manage an occasional trip away.

Our children are our greatest enthusiasm, but I would be chagrined if they kept us from each other.

Having our own life now is insurance for the children that, as they grow older, Rodney and I will continue to enjoy our own lives instead of meddling in theirs.

We still have a long way to go on each of our four goals, and we know that new problems, unthought of now, will continue to rise. But we have the encouragement of past progress to help us now, and we are stimulated by our recognition that we are only just beginning to reap the rich rewards of our new way of life.

The children's hideout borrows overhead space

The Walkers realized that children naturally like some special place they can imaginatively turn into a pirates' den or the control bridge of a space ship. So they planned this hideout in the playroom and borrowed overhead space from the laundry to enlarge it.

By Julie Polshek

he food-name "salami" has been badly victimized over the years by both misuse of the word and the nature of commonly known varieties. The Herz Salami imported by Fresco calls for this preface to prevent your erroneously categorizing its flavor and make-up here and now.

This justly famous European delicacy is pure pork, made up entirely of the hams and other choice, meaty cuts. The spicing is kept very light. The final result achieved by these means and long, slow curing and aging is a savor reminiscent of fine Virginia ham. As a matter of fact, this salami affords a delectable substitute for ham in preparing Eggs Benedict. You'll find, too, that it enhances the flavor of chicken salad and has much to offer as a canapé. One that was suggested, and brought a big hand from all concerned, consists of toothpick-secured wedges that combine buttered slices of salami, swiss cheese, turkey or chicken, and a light coat of dry mustard.

The salami is so rich and highly concentrated, that each slice should be paper-thin, however you use it. This concentrated texture is the result of a curing method, dating back over 200 years, which evaporates the natural meat-moisture. Just as you think this impairs the succulence of the salami, I hasten to add that the contrary is true.

Holland is the current source of the Herz salami; however, it's of Hungarian origin. It's being produced by a group of key workers of the old Herz family packing house who fled to Holland when Hungary was closed in by the Iron Curtain. I'm told on good authority that their product is identical to the traditional one. I know firsthand that it's of epicurean stature.

The salami-stick sizes vary from a 1-pound picnic size to a 10-pounder, and are priced at $2.19 a pound. They keep indefinitely, even without refrigeration. If you can't find Herz Salami locally, Gimbel's in New York will deliver by mail. (Add postage.)

An unusual line of sauerkraut and pickle products I recently sampled are a pertinent follow-up to what's gone before. One Stein pack is Kosher Dill Midgets. These pickles are superior to anything of the kind I've tasted, and all who tried them echoed my sentiments. The brine used somehow keeps the spicing, garlic, and vinegar's sharpness at a low pitch so the dill can dominate. The blending gives the pickles a mellow sort of tang, quite unlike usual ones. They cost 49¢ a 1-pint jar.

A concoction called Sweed Picnic DeLuxe is an interesting and tasty sauerkraut product that was new to me. It has a tangy sweetness that's similar to a sweet gherkin. A quart jar costs 43¢.

Stuffed Peppers is a zesty member of the group. The green peppers impart much of their savor to the sauerkraut they contain. Their respective flavors create an interesting merger. 55¢ a jar.

Picnic Delight Sauerkraut Mix is a combination of the stuffed peppers, dill midgets, sauerkraut, and bits of tomato. Something to please every taste. It costs 43¢.

National distribution of these newly introduced products is just getting under way. If they haven't reached your locality, they can be had by mail from Stein Food Products, 122 S. Capitol Ave., Indianapolis, Ind. (Shipping cost not included in prices given; minimum shipment six jars.)

Sipping Claret Consommé, the new Pinesbridge Farm delicacy introduced recently, is like sipping the wine itself. This is no mere lacing of a soup with a wine, as you might think. A beef-broth base, lemon juice, spices, and monosodium glutamate create supplementary flavorings, you might say. The wine is the thing that prevails. An ideal one, too, that makes the soup's savor ever-so refreshing. There's just enough gelatin present to congeal the soup for cold, jellied serving. The light sprinkling of cinnamon suggested on the label adds a perfect touch. It seems to accent the flavor of the soup's fine, dry claret.

It can be procured by mail from Charles & Co., 340 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y. Postpaid price for 3 cans (14-oz.) is $2.25.

Fortunately, a new dehydrated chop suey sent in recently bore the recommendation of a person whose opinion I value. Otherwise, my disillusioning experiences with canned versions would have relegated it to some dark corner of the cupboard. My preconceived bias proved to be entirely unwarranted. The Croyden House Chop Suey Dinner came through with flying colors. When served forth, anyone eating it would vow that it had been prepared from first to last, in your own kitchen. Its vegetables remain crisp and the flavoring of their sauce is excellent. It even provides rice as part of its make-up. No meat is present. You add what you wish on that score. Seafood, especially shrimp, supplements the dehydrated preparation to great advantage. It's a tasty way to utilize bits of leftover chicken or roast.

You can order the product from Irlee Sales Company, if you can't get it locally. Their address is 461 Pearl St., New York, N. Y. The price for 3 packages (each make 3 generous portions) is $1.50.

think of it in terms of the stitches you have learned. You will get many surprises. You will begin to see the grace and rhythm of inconspicuous patterns you had never really noticed before. You will begin to translate the forms you like into the language of stitches. You will now be exercising your creative eye.

The more you do this, the more you will appreciate the easy flexibility of free stitching. Modern embroidery is not the old-fashioned straitjacket of our grandmothers—confining you to making tiny, precise stitches on stamped patterns. Its uses are not limited to scalloping pillow cases or filling in the ground of a footstool cover. You can use it to enrich all kinds of fabrics—from the tough and sturdy to the most filmy. You can exercise your creative talents on things as diverse as a rug, a sheer curtain or a silk lampshade.

Analyze the embroidered furnishings on pages 126 to 129 and you will begin to understand the limitless opportunities for transplanting design ideas from one thing to another. I thought of the ivy leaf rug pattern after a shopping trip with a friend who was looking for ivy-leaf wallpaper. But as you can see, the design on the rug is not an exact copy of either one of the wallpaper patterns. I embroidered it in sturdy carpet wool meant for hard wear underfoot but I might have done just the opposite. I have often seen designs on ready-made rugs that could have been translated into delicate sketchy motifs to be embroidered with fine threads on sheer curtain fabrics or even on table mats.

Chicken en Papillote

1/2 lb. of chicken for each serving
1/2 lb. of mushroom caps for each serving
1/2 lb. of firm tomatoes for each serving
1/2 lb. of pepper
1/2 lb. of sodium glutamate
1/2 lb. of parchment or heavy silver foil

Cut the paper into 12" x 9"
(The size of wrapping depends on the size of the chicken.) If you use parchment, grease it and butter the inside. If you use silver foil be sure it's the correct weight.
Place chicken breast in center of paper, salt and pepper each side, and sprinkle tarragon leaves over it. Place tomato slices, then mushroom caps (as many as you can squeeze in) on it, and dot with butter. Shake a little more salt and pepper on it, and give it a dusting of S.G. Fold it tightly in its envelope so that no juices can escape. Fasten with a paper clip if you use parchment. Place in pan and bake 45-50 minutes at 350° F. These can be prepared in the refrigerator and stowed in the refrigerator until you leave for the party. They can be carried on a cookie sheet and cooked on it. Or you can pack them in a box or basket and use your hostess's cookie sheet.

Baked Rice

This goes well with the Chicken en Papillote and is cooked the same length of time in the oven.

- 2 cups raw rice
- 1 10 1/2 oz. can consommé, diluted with 1 can of water (or 3 bouillon cubes dissolved in 2 3/4 cups water)
- 1 8-oz. can mushrooms (optional)
- 1/4 cup butter or margarine
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley
- 2 teaspoons salt
- Dash of thyme or marjoram (optional)

Melt butter in iron skillet or Dutch oven, add rice and sauté until golden brown, stirring constantly. Stir in remaining ingredients, pour in a buttered casserole. Bake 45 minutes at 350° F.

I have often prepared this in the afternoon and put it in the oven 45 minutes before serving time. It won't hurt it to keep it waiting, either. It can even be cooked ahead of time and reheated later, since it should be dry. Serves 6 to 8.

Lemon Cups

This is a nice light dessert, and the number of cups you get depends on the size of cup used. For our purposes it will be served cold, but it is very good just from the oven, too.

HOW TO USE AND AMUSE YOUR FRIEND

- 1 cup sugar
- $\frac{1}{4}$ cup flour
- $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons melted butter
- Juice of two lemons
- Grated rind of one lemon
- 3 eggs, separated
- $1\frac{1}{2}$ cups milk

Mix sugar, flour and salt. Stir in melted butter, lemon juice and grated rind, well beaten egg yolks, and milk. Beat with a rotary beater until smooth and creamy. Last, fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn mixture into greased custard cups, set in pan of hot water, and bake in a moderate (350° F.) oven about 45 minutes. When baked each cup will have a layer of sponge-like cake on top, with creamy lemon custard underneath. You can add a dab of whipped cream to each one if you wish. Serves 6 to 8.

Stuffed Artichokes

Boil until tender (45 to 60 minutes) one good-size artichoke per person. When cool, remove the leaves and thistle, and place hearts on a platter. Select five of the best leaves from each artichoke and lay aside. Scrape the others, and mash the pulp together with one hard-boiled egg per person. Moisten with mayonnaise until the mixture will hold together. Season with salt, pepper, paprika, and a dash of vinegar, a drop of Worcestershire sauce, and sprinkle with M.S.G. Pile a mound of this on each heart, and press the five leaves around it. Chill well.

Sole in Silver

This is another package that is easy to prepare and to transport. It is quite light. I have often used it for a first course.

- 1 slice of filet of sole for each serving
- 1 slice of boiled ham for each serving
- 3 or 4 mushroom caps for each serving
- Salt, pepper and butter
- Thyme or marjoram

Cut silver foil in 10" x 5" pieces, or larger if necessary. Lay on each piece one slice of boiled ham (or baked, if you have some in your ice box) and one slice of sole on top of the ham. Sprinkle sparingly with salt (the ham provides almost enough) and pepper, and a few pinches of thyme or marjoram. Place mushroom caps on fish and dot each with butter. Wrap carefully so that no juices can escape. Put in refrigerator until ready to leave, pack carefully in box, or carry on aluminum cooky sheet. Bake 20 minutes at 350° F. Do not overcook.

Baked Hominy au Gratin

- 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ can hominy, drained
- 1 small can evaporated milk, mixed with $\frac{1}{2}$ cup water, (or equal amount of milk)
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons flour
- $\frac{3}{4}$ cups grated Cheddar cheese
- $\frac{1}{4}$ cup buttered bread crumbs

Make cream sauce and add a cup of cheese, salt, pepper, paprika to taste. Stir until cheese is melted. Add drained hominy, mix well. Pour into greased casserole and sprinkle bread crumbs and remaining cheese over top. Bake in a 350° F. oven until crumbs are brown. This can be made in the morning and put the oven to brown a little ahead of the sole packages. Serves 4.

Compote of Pears

- 1 large can pears
- 6 heaping tablespoons puréed apricots (puréed baby food may be used)
- 3 tablespoons cooked orange peel
- 20 preserved kumquats
- $\frac{1}{3}$ cup brandy or rum

Drain the pears, reserving syrup. Mix apricot purée with a cup of the canned pear syrup, boil gently for 10 minutes, stirring constantly. Add slivers of candied orange peel, or one of Raffeto's preserved kumquats can be used. Pour sauce over in serving bowl, add brandy, rum, and chill. Just before serving, sprinkle with almonds. For transporting, pour into Mason jars. This can also be served hot, if desired. Serves 4.

Bouillabaisse

- 2 cans green pea soup
- 2 cans turtle soup
- 1 cup white wine, and a dash of brandy

Combine soups and heat. Add wine and brandy, heat one or two minutes more, and serve. If you serve this in ovenproof bowls, you can top each serving with whipped cream and run it under the broiler just long enough to brown. The soups can be mixed and brought to a boil in Mason jars, with the wine and brandy in a separate jar, and added at the last moment. Serves 4.

Viennese Veal

- 2 pounds leg of veal, cut in small pieces
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 3 or 4 large onions
- 2 small tomatoes
- 1 tablespoon Hungarian paprika
- $\frac{1}{2}$ of a 2-oz. bottle of capers, with salt and pepper
- 1 small green pepper, chopped
- $\frac{1}{2}$ pint sour cream

Melt butter in large frying pan, add onion and cook until golden brown. Add veal, salt, pepper, and paprika, cook until brown, turning frequently to prevent burning.

up tomatoes, peppers, and two tablespoons of water. Cover and cook slowly 45 minutes, adding a tablespoon of water from time to time if necessary. Just before serving, add sour cream and capers and cook a few minutes more. For transporting, cook as directed, but pour into an earthenware cas-sole, add sour cream and capers, and reheat in a 350°F. oven 10 minutes before serving.

This is an old Viennese recipe given me in Vienna years ago and is delicious. Serves 4.

Stuffed Onions with Almonds

1 dozen small onions
 1/2 cup butter
 1/2 cup whole blanched almonds
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1/2 tablespoon brown sugar or 2 cans Chinese noodles
 1/2 lb of cayenne, nutmeg, cloves

Wash and peel onions. Partially cook them until barely tender, add melted butter, brown sugar, and seasonings and shake to coat the onions with butter. Store in covered casserole in refrigerator until ready to leave. One half hour before serving add almonds and bake covered in 325°F. to 350°F. oven.
 Bake every 15 minutes to prevent burning. Onions should remain whole but be very tender, and the almonds should be golden brown.
 Serves 4 to 6.

Serve with a bowl of crisp Chinese noodles (canned).

Poached Peaches

This dessert is best as a summer dessert with fresh fruit, but frozen berries and canned peaches may be substituted.

1 whole peeled peaches
 1 large box raspberries
 1/2 cup sugar
 1/2 cup brandy

Make a syrup of the sugar and 1/2 cup water, add peaches and fruit. Add berries and simmer gently over low flame for 10 minutes.
 Pour into bowl and when cold add brandy. Chill thoroughly. Serves 4.

Eggs in Aspic

For each serving poach one egg in a round egg poacher until the white is firmly set. Remove and cool.
 Place the bottom of small bowls or cups with a layer of mashed pâté de foie gras, or liver pâté with a little lemon juice added. Place the poached eggs on this and pour on chilled consommé (the kind that comes in cans). Add about 1 tablespoon of lemon juice to each cup, sprinkle with minced parsley, and chill until set.

Lamb Chops Baked in Sour Cream

6 lamb chops
 1 clove of garlic
 4 tablespoons shortening
 1/2 pint sour cream
 1 tablespoon vinegar
 1 tablespoon Worcestershire Sauce
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1/4 teaspoon each pepper and paprika
 3 bay leaves
 Minced parsley

Rub chops with cut clove of garlic and brown on both sides in hot shortening. Arrange chops in a 6" x 10" baking dish. Stir together in the drippings left in pan, sour cream, Worcestershire, and seasonings. Pour over meat and arrange bay leaves over top. Store in refrigerator until ready to leave.
 When you reach your destination pop it into a 350°F. oven for 35 to 40 minutes. Before serving remove bay leaves and sprinkle with parsley. Serves 6.

Bean Sprouts and Mushrooms

Fresh or canned bean sprouts can be used in this interesting dish.

1/2 pound fresh mushrooms, washed and sliced, or 1 1/2 cups canned, sliced mushrooms
 4 tablespoons butter
 1/2 pound fresh, washed bean sprouts, or 3 cups canned sprouts
 2 teaspoons soy sauce (or to taste)

Sauté mushrooms in butter for about five minutes. Add bean sprouts, cover, and cook over low heat for about five minutes. Before serving, cook five minutes more, stir in soy sauce and simmer a minute or two. Serves 4.

Parsley New Potatoes

If fresh new potatoes are unobtainable, use canned new potatoes, heated in butter and sprinkled with parsley.

Sherry Fluff

2 tablespoons gelatin
 1/2 cup cold water
 1 cup sugar
 1 cup sherry
 2 cups whipping cream
 2 tablespoons lemon juice
 1 cup ground blanched almonds

Soften gelatin in cold water, then heat over boiling water, stirring until dissolved. Add sugar and lemon juice and sherry. Chill until it starts to jell, then whip the cream and fold into the jelly. Pile in glasses and chill. Before serving dust the tops with the ground almonds. Serves 4.

You will note that most of these recipes require less than an hour's cooking at the end. In most cases they can be cooking during the cocktail period. The general scheme is to have little or no fussing in the kitchen after the guests are assembled, all the real work having been done earlier.

sticky and slippery. Just do all or any of these things and the little woman will chase you out of the kitchen with a rolling pin.

I still remember the charged atmosphere at home when my dad took over the kitchen. He could cook like a fool, but Ma used to get the shivers whenever he went into action. His big hands would grab a handful of salt, dip into the pepper, squeeze off a hunk of butter between thumb and forefinger, and pick up a clean spoon every time he stirred a soup or tasted a sauce. He used every pot in the kitchen and dirtied all of Ma's towels wiping pots, pans, and the stove—sometimes the floor. Every time he laid a spoon down there was a puddle under it, and the floor was a mess. The meal was wonderful, but we needed a section gang to clean up after him.

Sitting on your fanny while the little woman does the dinner dishes is no short cut to domestic serenity, either. Of course you could help, but in that course lies danger. You're liable to get yourself into a steady diet of dishwashing. With a little strategy you can avoid this and still keep your wife in a fairly pleasant state of mind. One of the best maneuvers is to retire quietly to the head with a magazine concealed under one arm. You can usually time it so the last dish is being put away as you emerge.

Pot-pokers and lid-lifters are particularly annoying to their womenfolk. A friend of mine used to be the world's nosiest guy in the kitchen. He'd barge into the kitchen after work and go poking around the stove, making suggestions which would make his wife completely bug-eyed, but he never seemed to read the danger signals until one night he stuck his nose into a pot of dumplings. That did it.

Now one of the principles of light dumplings is to surface them in hot liquid, seal them with a heavy lid and leave them to cook in a mound of steam for 12 to 15 minutes. You can't even peek. When she just handed him her apron with the remark, "You do the cooking, you know so much about it," and marched out of the house with her coat and bonnet on, leaving him to finish dinner, feed the kids and clean up single-handed. I don't know if he's permanently cured, but he hasn't investigated a pot since that episode.

There's a lot of hocus-pocus about dumplings, of course, and making light, feathery ones seems to be quite a trick. They're not mysterious, however, if you just reason with them. The mixture has to be right to begin with, and most any good cookbook can furnish the ingredients, or you can use a package of ready biscuit mix and follow the directions on the box. It's the cooking of the darn things that throws most people.

Dumplings are best if they're not submerged entirely in the liquid gravy, but spooned onto points of meat so that the steam has a chance to do its work. Whatever you use, the liquid must be bubbling hot, and you dip your spoon in the liquid first each time you dip out a spoonful of the batter and drop it into the pot. Dumpling dropping isn't any hit-or-miss proposition, either, as they need plenty of elbow room. They have to swell if they're going to be light. After you have your potential dumplings sitting pretty, plunk a heavy lid on tight—the heavier the better, and go off and do something else for about twelve minutes.

ADVICE TO KITCHEN KIBITZERS— CULINARY AND OTHERWISE

way of something outstanding with fricasseed chicken try:

Corn Meal Dumplings

1 cup sifted flour
1/2 cup yellow corn meal
2 spoons baking powder
1 spoon salt
1/2 cup milk
2 spoons melted butter
1 egg white, well beaten

Put flour, corn meal, baking powder and salt together into a bowl. Add milk and butter and just stir enough to mix into a stiff batter. Fold in the beaten egg white and drop by spoonfuls, well apart, over fricasseed chicken. Cover tightly and steam for 15 minutes. Corn meal dumplings are a little longer than plain dumplings.

The guy who is always late for dinner is a legitimate cause for concern. What makes you think it's your fault for your bride to sit home and wait for dinner hot while you're at the local bistro lapping up martini or shaking for drinks with a bunch of the boys? I'm no angel. But if your wife came bouncing in every three times a week and ordered a big, juicy martini-flavored shrimp on your puss you'd raise the hell. You'd be amazed at how much stock would rise if you came home now and then and suggested that she join you in a cocktail or two in your own living room.

Do you ever make love to your wife when she's futzing around, getting dinner? It's a common practice and a good one, in my opinion, but so help me, I've found the exception. I know a couple who've been married, I guess, fifteen years. He's the greatest sort of guy and she's such an apple pie and oh-so-good-peachy sort of gal that she could be my secret sorrow any day. We were talking one evening about what husbands and wives do that get on each other's nerves and my friend blurted out, "My wife doesn't like me to kiss her in the kitchen!" Well, I'll be damned. If I were a woman I'd want my husband to kiss me any time he felt like it and be glad of it—in the kitchen, at the movies, at Times Square or 14th and Broadway—those little quick ones that keep you perking.

I thought of that charming story by the late Dr. Frederick Loomis, about an inscription found in a Chinese Garden: "Enjoy yourself. It's later than you think."

Just scratch around. You'll probably find a few little habits of your own which get your bride's goat and destroy the erstwhile serenity of your little castle. It's all those petty little irritants which chafe and beget big trouble. Frequent applications of consideration can keep love in bloom, way, way into winter. Might as well give it a try.

THERE ARE TWO KINDS OF MAGAZINES

One is the kind you're reading now. It carries entertainment, education, and projects the American way of life. The other is the kind our GIs are reading in Korea. That one carries explosives, firearms, and the last-resort weapons against communism.

It's only the dictator's damper on free expression, as voiced in our paper magazines, that forces us to keep our powder dry in the steel ones. If the world had more access to the printed ammunition, it would have less need for the primed.

You can help fight communism with this magazine by sending it, together with others which depict the American way of life, to our potential friends abroad. It costs only an average of sixteen cents per pound to mail the millions of copies wasted each week—that many humane weapons against tyranny.

Safety is your business if you're a good wife and mother. Safety especially in the kitchen and especially around the range. Maytag's gas ranges have the controls on the top of the back panel.

Here exploring little fingers can't reach them, but Mother can find them at easy eye and arm level. With the roomy work area between burners, there's no danger of protruding pan handles to bump into and spill over. Range has Dutch oven and chrome broiler tray that can come to table. You may have range with or without oven-door window.

SKETCHES BY KELLY GESCHLI

Like the look of pine paneling practically anywhere in the house, including the kitchen? Then you'll want a harmonizing utility cart, and Cosco now has it. Drop-leaf top and shelf look like wood, but really aren't. Instead, they're of a wood-grained plastic, resistant to stains and scratches, easy to keep clean. Cart is mounted on chromium-plated steel frame. Two push-handles and ball-bearing casters make it easy to push indoors, outdoors, wherever you want it. Top with leaves down is 17" x 24", with leaves up, 24" x 41".

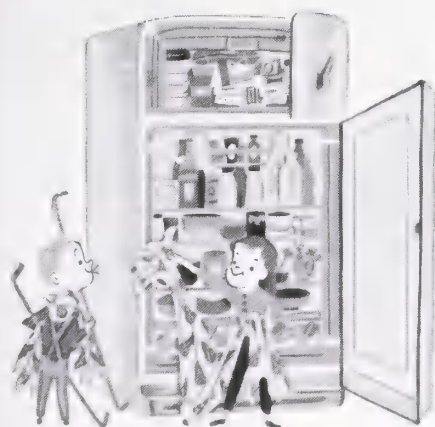

Problem windows are no excuse for not having the comfort of a circulator-type window fan. Emerson has a new one, requiring no installation, which you can use with casement or side-sliding windows.

Put it in front of the window at night to pull cool air into the room, or use it to exhaust hot, stagnant air out of the room. You can adjust it to any height from 28" to 48" from the floor to the center of the blades, and tilt it to direct the flow of air. Its wheels make it easy to move from room to room, as comfort dictates.

If you're anything like us, you do household chores that are easy to do, postpone those that aren't. No question of postponing cleaning it when you have NuTone's newest kitchen fan. All you do is remove thumb screw that holds removable grille in place, slip out motor and blade part. Grille can go right in the dishpan, blades can be wiped off easily. Ventilator is 8" in diameter, can be mounted in ceiling or inside wall. Housing is only 3½" deep and will fit between standard 16" center joists or studs. Fan plugs into house wiring.

No, our sketch is not exaggerated. You really can match kitchen curtains to your refrigerator, or vice versa, with the new Servel refrigerators. For they come with interior trim in one of three colors, blue, green, or gold. These Servels, whether operating on electricity or gas, have plenty of built-in utility as well as good looks. They defrost automatically, have a butter conditioner, odds-and-ends basket for small items, hors d'oeuvres tray, and a very special latch you can manipulate with a touch of your elbow.

dishwasher!"

"Yes, I'm the Executive Manager of one of the world's finest hotels and I have to be an expert on dishwashing. After all, we serve hundreds of guests every day . . . guests who insist on fine table settings . . . sparkling, immaculate tableware.

"That's why, when it comes to dishwashing in my home, I insist on a KitchenAid Home Dishwasher! KitchenAid is built by Hobart . . . and we use Hobart Commercial Dishwashers in our hotel. That's recommendation enough for me! With Hobart experience in building commercial dishwashers, it's just logical that KitchenAid would have the same unexcelled performance I expect from Hobart. The revolving wash and rinse action of Hobart Commercial Dishwashers is an exclusive advantage in KitchenAid, for example. The other great KitchenAid advantages . . . independently sliding racks with upper rack adjustable for two positions . . . circulated electric hot air drying . . . the plate warmer feature . . . are all the result of the more than 50 years of commercial dishwasher experience."

San Angelinos themselves will proudly escort you through six homes and their gardens. Each is related in some way to a historically significant past, usually romantically furnished with ghost and legend, and a rich heritage of art treasures. One stop will undoubtedly be at the seventeenth-century monastery from which the village is named, to visit one of its patio apartments, where whitewash, blue paint, tile, plants, and antiques manage most gracefully to blend modern living into rather awesome surroundings. Another may be the seventeenth-century House of Lace, so called because of the delicate carvings on its façade. In still another, younger house, merely mid-nineteenth-century, Victorian mingles with ancestral, purely Mexican pieces.

The tour takes only a morning, from about ten to one, costs $10, includes lunch and transportation from the Monument to the last house. Only a limited number of tickets are sold. For advance reservations and information on future tours, write: San Angel Tours, Apartado Postal #79 Bis, Mexico I. D. F. Fruit of the vine

Finest time of all the year to drive the vineyard areas of New York State is early fall. By mid-September the terraced and trellised hillside vineyards of the Finger Lakes Region, through the Hudson River Valley between Highland and Bear Mountain, and along the shore of Lake Erie in the extreme southwest corner of the state, glow with the deep purples and reds of the heavy grape clusters.

Along U. S. 20 from Silver Creek into Pennsylvania, you will see the grapes predestined for unfermented grape juice. (Appropriately so, since it was at Fredonia, one of the larger towns along this route, that Mrs. Esther McNeill founded the W.C.T.U.) Elsewhere you are in wine country, in the richly dyed and scented scenery which is incipient champagne and sparkling Burgundy. En route you are welcome to visit almost any of the ten wineries where such fancies become fact. The four largest, Pleasant Valley, Taylor's, and Urbana in

Pomp and circumstance

The Coronation of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth next June 2 will make both May and June a particularly exciting time to visit Britain. It has caused a rush for transatlantic bookings and other reservations which should spur you to quick action, if you are at Coronation-minded.

The actual Coronation ceremonies will be closed to you, except by television, since you're probably not a peer of the realm. And crowded grandstand seats along the route of the Royal Procession—$5 to $75 including a box lunch while in the $65 to $75 bracket, goes out, even to champagne—are going fast. So are rooms in the few hotels which overlook the route.

But even if you cannot manage a close-up of the main event, British Coronation is much more than a simple pageant. It's a whole season celebrated throughout the British Isles, including a sufficient number of Royal public appearances, ceremonies open to the public and free, to make it worthwhile to be around anyway. Try at least for London during Coronation Week, when hotels, night spots, department stores strive to outdo each other in decorations, special entertainment, gifts. All lead to a Coronation Night climax more gala than any New Year's Eve. At the time this is printed, your travel agent will have details, or ask the British Travel Association, 3 Madison Avenue, New York.

Bargain hunter, beware!

South American shopping is full of South American scenery: It comes in such quantity, such variety, at such alluring prices that it is essential, if you would make your $500 customs allowance real count, to figure out ahead just what is for you and, particularly, what is not. Suggestions on the positive side are easy enough to get, often come automatically with your initial swatch of literature and maps. Here are some equally important don'ts, not quite so frequently mentioned:

In Ecuador, don't necessarily buy the first Panama hat offered you.

Italian Renaissance bedroom in Gonzalez Jauregui house in San Angel, Mexico, is an inkling of the fabulous treasures with which grandees lived. House is open to the public during fall tour.

The better buys await you at their source, at Jipajapa, San Pablo, Montecristi, where, many think, the best quality is produced; or at Luenca, whose streets, most any day, are literally white with beautiful Panama drying in the sun.

In Paraguay, resist that tempting, slippery Paraguayan lace until you can buy it from the woman who made it, preferably at the village of Itaugua, which produces the most and the best, and is more amenable than most second-hand sources as to price.

In Venezuela, remember that most of the merchandise displayed in those well-stocked, bigger city shops is imported, and priced accordingly. Wait with your shopping until you reach the Island of Margarita, good for pearls, mother-of-pearl trifles, native hats, sandals, shawls.

In Brazil, where everybody shops, at least for semi-precious stones, think twice before you buy both stone and setting. That lovely new aquamarine, topaz, tourmaline, amethyst will cost less duty if you bring it through Customs unset. But know a good jeweler at home who can do your stones justice.

In Argentina, be firm when offered cigarettes, birds of paradise, ostrich, which are not permitted through Customs at all; and when street vendors tempt you with so-called French perfumes at a price which may be cheap but not always as labeled.

At native markets, until you've felt your way around a bit, don't pay the first price asked. At most of them, even the larger, more frequented ones like Lima's must market on the Giron Ucayali, you are expected to bargain, miss half the fun, and pay more, if you don't.

Anywhere, don't buy the obvious thing unless you are sure you can really use it, or definitely lack the time to look further. In South America as elsewhere much of the merchandise which looks so suitable and appealing in its own surroundings may suddenly turn out to be completely out of place and useless back home. And the South American bargain counter is not only generous with articles of real artistic merit, good anywhere, but, for those who are willing to search, turns up surprises like the baroque angels carved of wood you may occasionally find in Buenos Aires, the miniature native paintings offered by the Indians in Quito, the antique carved Spanish-Colonial silver stirrups.

Hawaii, here we come

Just as if it were not tempting enough any time of year, Hawaii will be all the more so this fall, when United Airlines initiates a new, all-time-low air excursion rate of $240 plus tax round trip. Good on all trips completed in 16 days or less between October 1 and December 10, this rate gives you, at $43 less than standard fare, a full two weeks in the Islands.

Nor is it actually an off-season rate. Hawaii, it is true, is less crowded in the fall. But that is because fewer people can travel then, not because Hawaii itself is much different in the fall than at other times. You can use this rate, for instance, to be on hand for the Hawaiian Invitational Regatta, held the week of October 6, or for Aloha Week, October 13-18. Or use it later to escape winter's first unpleasantness.

You'll find the sunning and the bathing as always, and the usual activities: luau, hukilau, tours of private gardens, visits to the sugar mills, fashion shows going on as usual. In fact, were it not for the school boys assiduously practicing football on a Sunday afternoon, you might never suspect it was fall at all.

First prize—Europe!

Keep your yearnings to see Europe in mind when you buy bulbs for fall planting. For some lucky gardener is going to win a free trip for two to Europe in the Garden Photo Contest sponsored by the Associated Bulb Growers of Holland, and it might as well be you. Merely make sure you get an entry blank when you buy bulbs—available from any distributor of Holland-grown bulbs—plant as usual, photograph next spring either in black and white or color transparencies, and submit before next June 30 to the judges.

This is a contest in which no one really loses. It is not necessary to purchase any minimum quantity of bulbs to qualify, and the judges want interesting pictures rather than proof of fancy floriculture or expert photography.

In addition to that first prize, moreover, there are over one thousand more: fine Leerdam glass, Royal Delft porcelain, Gerritsen and Van Kempen silver, rare varieties of bulbs. And, even failing to win one of these, you still win the beauty of Holland-grown bulbs for your garden.

Leatherstocking land

If your plans for foliage-time driving in New York need only a worthy goal to make them perfect, why not make that goal Cooperstown, handily centered in the state, 200 miles northwest of New York, 275 east of Buffalo.

Cooperstown, what with forested hills behind and Lake Otsego at its feet, puts on a very nice foliage display all its own, besides being the repository for one of the country's more precious, extensive, and varied displays of Americana.

Between its three impressive museums it offers, in fact, something for each member of the family. Those who lovingly remember James Fenimore Cooper's Leatherstocking Tales will particularly enjoy the collection of Cooper family relics in handsome Fenimore House, open daily to October 31, thereafter Monday through Friday. But others may be even more intrigued by its really fine displays of early American art—portraits, life masks, genre paintings.

The whole family will find consolation, at least, in the Farmer's Museum, open daily to October 31, and demonstrating in detail just what one had to go through to earn a living, keep house, and grow up in the early four-corners village, reproduced with country store, schoolhouse, blacksmith shop near by. The philosophical will be further consoled by gazing down at the famous Cardiff Giant, proof perpetual of the gullibility of man.

If, on the other hand, you are neither the philosophical type, nor devoted to the past, you will still enjoy Cooperstown. Those to whom baseball scores mean more than candle molds will delight in the National Baseball Museum, open 9 to 9 daily through October 15, thereafter 9 to 5. This museum traces the history of the game on the very spot on which it was founded, especially if a game is on at Doubleday Field, named for its founder. And even those to whom this trip is merely a last outing before fall decorating will come home rewarded. For at Cooperstown you can see first hand some of the very articles which have inspired the collection of "living heritage" fabric, wallpaper, and rug designs now being produced by F. Schumacher & Co., New York, and distributed under the Farmers' Museum Hallmark.

Ideas for dissolving decorating dilemmas, from the notes and jottings of a decorator who covers the markets with a discerning eye

Had an idea the Websters must be rattling around in that 8-room apartment now that all four of their offspring have departed for school. But when I suggested as much to Elsie she started with amazement. Rattling, it seems, is the least of their problems.

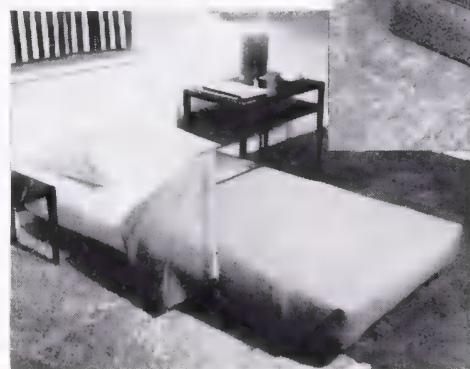

"If Ted and I are alone for four weeks running," she explained, "that's a record. First there are football week ends, then the holidays, then mid-year. And in between, those unpredictable leaves that have nothing to do with any holiday you've ever heard of. We love it, of course. But it gets complicated. You see no one of our children ever manages to come home alone. There's always the roommate from New Mexico who couldn't humanly be left to stay away the holiday in the dormitory. Or the pathetic algebra teacher who's working his way to Boston. We never seem to have enough beds. What would you do?"

I'd hang out the SRO sign early in the year. No use suggesting that to Elsie, though. Nothing could ever persuade her to curb the children's carefree hospitality. So I kept my peace. And next day, Bloomingdale's I was inspired with a more constructive answer.

checks. I adhere to no rigid schedule. If a room has to be cleaned, I clean it. The important factor is need, not schedule. Why can on Friday if the room doesn't need cleaning?"

In practice, here's the way Dorothea's system works. She starts each morning by loading the Benetton with the soiled clothes the children have brought from their rooms to the laundry. (She averages 17 loads a week.) Then she cleans her bedroom wing while Kizi, the student-helper, covers the children's west wing. Then, following her system of checks, she inspects the bathroom, the mirrors, the closets. If any one of them needs special cleaning, she does it before moving into the living room. When there are other demands on her time, she finishes her housework in 15 to 20 minutes, and the special cleaning jobs are put off for another day.

SINCE the house is a one-story structure, there is no need to run up and down stairs. It is laid out so that the parents' suite and living room are at one end and the children's rooms with their community playroom at the other. This eliminates the normal clutter of five children to one section of the house that can be screened off.

Everywhere Rodney Walker used building materials that demand little care. The floor surfaces are of three types: vinyl-coated brick, asphalt tile, and concrete. The latter two are waxed by an electric waxer twice a month, so that an occasional mopping and frequent push-brooming keep them clean.

Similarly, the interior walls are materials chosen for imperviousness to dirt: hardwood paneling, mica, Micarta, and high-gloss paint—all wipe-clean or wax-clean surfaces. Rodney has used mica or Micarta on every horizontal surface. All of the tables in the house are covered in Formica or Micarta, which is why Dorothea doesn't bat an eyelash when her children tip over a chocolate milk or dribble syrup on their dining table. The kitchen counters and cabinet fronts, the living room and dining cabinet, and the master bed, built-in, are also surfaced with wood-grain Micarta. The bathroom cabinets, the girls' desks, and the top below the blackboard in the playroom are covered with attractive, bright-colored Micarta which has proved impenetrable to just about every type of youthful beating with one exception—dart throwing. Darts are not allowed unless they're aimed at the beaver-board squares in the playroom.

In furnishing their home, the Walkers continued the direction they pursued in two previous ones. They kept the number of free-standing pieces to a minimum—using more built-ins and fewer decorative accessories. They prefer to let the design of the house, the panoramic view, and the indoor planting supply the decorative touches. Where it was necessary to buy more chairs and tables, they chose only the natural finishes like rattan, glass, wrought iron, and unstained woods. All the old upholstered furniture was recovered in a modern plastic material called "Naugahyde."

In every way, the Walkers have eliminated furnishings that demand "loving care." There are no lamps in the house, and absolutely no bric-a-brac or collections of dust catchers. The only carpeting consists of hemp squares in the living room. All the beds, with the exception of the parental double bed, have two sets of washable spreads. None of the rooms, except the master bedroom, has draperies. "Tem-lite" vertical shades and a plastic, "Curtition," answer the same purpose, eliminating the usual upkeep of curtains.

AS PROOF that her house can carry on with very little cleaning, Dorothea likes to tell about one two-weeks stretch when she literally did no housework except make the beds and prepare meals. She was taking a course in Cub Scout Leadership at the time. It was also National Boy Scout Week and time for the door-to-door Brownie cooky sale. During this period she would leave home early in the morning and not return until it was time to prepare dinner. At the end of two weeks, the bathrooms were pretty messy and her bedroom needed straightening up, but the rest of the house was livable.

Dorothea Walker doesn't maintain that her home can be left untended indefinitely, but time and time again she has proved conclusively that in 15 or 20 minutes she can get the house in fairly good order, presentable enough for guests or for showing to one of Rodney's clients.

This is a pretty sizable achievement when you realize that she has only one part-time helper and that the household numbers eight.

Naturally, she has the benefit of every mechanical aid that she and her husband could think of. There's a dishwasher, a freezer, the home laundry and dryer. There is also an inter-communications system which saves her steps and lung power. It makes it possible, for example, for her to help the children decide what to wear to school without ever getting out of bed. Other labor-saving devices consist of the touch latches on all the cabinet doors, and the self-mixing faucet which eliminates two extra motions. Of course, there is Kazunori Nakamura and the Walker progeny themselves.

Kazi is a Japanese college student who lives with the Walkers. In exchange for room, board, and a small salary, he gives them five hours of his labor daily and ten on Saturdays. He's important in the scheme of things because he's an adult who helps Dorothea when she needs help most and he's a responsible person with whom they can leave the children at night.

His duties are to fix the children's breakfast and prepare their lunches, thus providing Dorothea with a leisurely interval between waking and seeing the older children leave at 8:10 on the school bus. During this time she reads the paper, has a cup of coffee, quietly collects her thoughts.

In the evening Kazi stacks the dishwasher and cleans up the kitchen so that when dinner is over, so is Dorothea's housework. And he helps with the heavy Saturday cleaning.

The five Walker children also aid in keeping house. They set the table for meals and are charged with keeping their own rooms clean as well as the community playroom. When the playroom becomes a mess, Bruce picks up the sports equipment, Lisa puts away the books, Mark collects the pencils and crayons, Elle stacks the magazines, and Craig gathers the paper scraps.

When their mother is cooking the children fetch and carry the various ingredients. When there's a big cleaning job under way, each child is given a damp sponge and assigned a definite area to clean. Frequently, childish zeal exceeds childish skill, but the habit of household responsibility is being inculcated early.

THE Walker girls, at age eight, are born baby tenders and relieve their mother of the job of supervising the younger children. Lisa takes the morning shift and helps the boys dress before breakfast. Ellen bathes them at night and gets them into their sleepers.

Lisa has a natural ease with and a great love for animals, so to her goes the job of feeding and watering one pony, one goat, three dogs, two cats, ten kittens. In the two years she's had this chore, Lisa has seldom forgotten to do her duty.

Like all growing girls, the Walker twins love to cook, but their time in the kitchen is not limited to an afternoon of fudge making. They work right along with their mother in such steps in food preparation as peeling vegetables, beating eggs, and chopping nuts.

"A few weeks ago," Dorothea says, "I would have said they were too young to be allowed near a frying pan. But I was fixing fried chicken and they wanted to help. So I gave them each a brown paper bag filled with flour and seasoning. I showed them how to shake the chicken parts and flour at the same time. Then I started the frying."

In all homes where a good deal of work seems to get done easily, there is always careful planning. The ability to organize is one of Dorothea Walker's chief virtues, which is why early in their marriage her husband appointed her the family purchasing agent. It is she who shops for and selects all the food, supplies, and clothing for the entire household.

Here is how she does it. Dorothea shops for staples once a month. She invades the supermarket at night, so that Rodney can help with her gigantic order. Together, they cover the store in half the time. They buy in quantity, but not necessarily the giant economy-size containers of food and cereals. She's learned that in her house a giant-size box of pancake flour, for example, cracks and leaks before it's empty. There's no more waste on the cupboard shelf than money saved in the economy price. In addition, the large-size boxes of cereal, dog food, etc. are awkward for the children to handle.

HE buys perishables in two ways. Fresh fruit and salad greens are purchased at a neighborhood market which is higher priced than the chain stores, but it happens to be conveniently located next door to the woman who does the family's bi-monthly ironing. Thus one stop serves two purposes.

The food for their 22½-cubic foot Carrier freezer is bought under "food plan" system. This plan, popular in California and beginning to appear elsewhere, involves a salesman who calls at the house about four times a year and takes a wholesale order for meat, fowl, fish, frozen fruits, and vegetables. It takes around 100 lbs. of food, costing approximately $200, to fill the Walker freezer.

With her size family, Dorothea must re-stock every three or four months. If she runs short of a favorite delicacy, she phones in her order to the Rich Food depot. These people, however, won't deliver unless the minimum order comes to $40, a requirement which Dorothea says, "can make a good manager out of any scatterbrain," since she's forced to study her family's food habits.

FOR clothing, Dorothea shops for the family in one large department store. One shopping trip must satisfy a lot of needs. She buys for easy identification as well as easy upkeep. The boys wear jeans and tee shirts. The girls wear dresses to school, but play in tee shirts and corduroy shorts. They all wear identifying socks—white for the twins, solid colors for Bruce, and striped or plaid for the little fellows.

Dorothea, herself, works around home in good-looking playclothes. Her checked gingham shirts and sailcloth pants go into the Bendix and dryer along with the children's things. They all come out fluff dried, but needing no ironing. Dorothea has reduced the ironing to a minimum. She rough-dries her bed linen, uses paper napkins, and is constantly trying the newest things in nylon, Orlon, and Dacron.

Probably, the greatest evidence of her good management is that in every typical day she manages to reserve at least two hours for her personal pursuits. The cleaning is done by about ten each morning and the Bendix-dryer cycle is on its second round. Dorothea stops housework and goes to her room. Mark and Craig know they must play alone during this time, and not disturb their mother until she comes out. During this morning recess Dorothea makes telephone calls, writes letters—she handles her husband's business correspondence, types out his contracts and specifications—and plans her scouting activities. Her afternoon rest period coincides with the children's nap. Dorothea uses it for pure relaxation, which explains why the books on her bedside reading shelf change constantly, reflecting her belief that a woman should exist on many levels. Sometimes she indulges herself and naps, too. When the older children get home from school and Rodney returns from work, she's refreshed and looking forward to a pleasant evening with her family.

It is this way of life which she has evolved for herself—a busy life but with organized islands of quiet for thinking and mental renewal, which stamps Dorothea Walker as a new, modern, and inspiring type of American woman.

In the eyes of her family, she's more a mother than a housekeeper, more a wife than a daily drudge, more a human being than a cog in the kitchen. How many women can make this claim?

guest. There was just room enough in the girls' room for the second. When they end up, as they sometimes do, with four girls and one boy or vice versa, they can always shuffle things around. Compared with most sleepers, an ottoman on casters is no trick to move.

Can't think of any one thing they can do a better job of marrying old things with new than an upholstered fabric, providing it's exactly the right fabric. More than once I've seen a modern cover make a lonely antique chair look as if it were specially designed for a very modern house. But most of the time the problem is a bit more subtle. People who have lived their lives in staid traditional homes are suddenly taken with a modern chair that has no relation whatsoever to the rest of their furniture. What can they use for upholstery—something that will do justice to the chair, yet keep it on speaking terms with its neighbors?

Transitional Upholstery

My latest find in this category is a cloth I came across at Mortimer Sundour called "Murat." It's on the order of a damask with a small scale Jacquard-woven pattern of squares, lines, and rectangles. The patterns are brown on a gray ground, a combination that gives subdued elegance. Ordered it for Mrs. Wilson's new living room chaise and thought I'd made a smart choice. But I must admit I had misgivings when I peeked at the finished job in the workroom just before it was delivered. "Look far too modern," I groaned. But not when I saw it at home! Joins right in the chorus with the Hepburn white sofa and the Chippendale breakfront. And no one has yet raised an eyebrow over Mr. Wilson's radical departure from Edwardian propriety—having a chaise you can put your feet on right in the living room!

When people stop thinking about modern design as a sort of "party" which they have to take whole-hog-or-none, I begin to think there's hope for the world after all. Basked in global optimism for days when the Evanses agreed to the pair of Greeff printed linens that were my number one choice for their new house. Saw it as a sign their taste is developing. No more blind nodding to fashion! For it's all very well to strip the house and everything in it of all meaningless detail and superfluous ornament. Good sound reasoning at the level of practical house-keeping. Sound on the aesthetic level too when you're aiming for the restfulness that comes from visual simplicity. But even the best reasoning ceases to be sound when you carry it to the extreme. Blossoms and curlicues have their place, and they don't have to interfere with practicality. Printed on a fabric, for instance, they're no harder to cope with than dots and dashes and geometrics.

Now the Greeff "Spirea" and its companion "Bahia" are a long way from being traditional patterns. But neither are they the types of patterns that a progressive modern designer would call aggressive modern design. Never mind, they work out better in this house. We used the "Spirea" in brown on natural for draperies for the window wall, and the heavier "Bahia" in a pleasant conglomeration of brown, turquoise and natural to upholster the dining chair seats and the long built-in sofa.

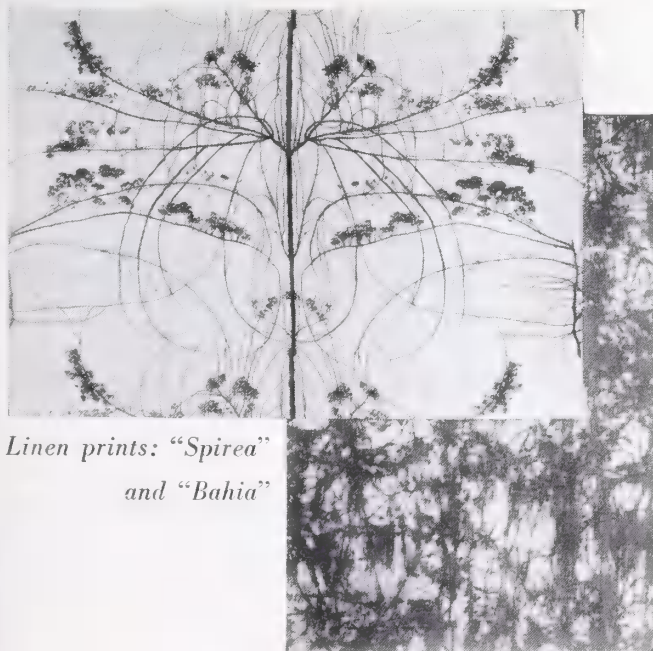

Played the same kind of counterpoint in the Westgate's tiny dining room. The wall opposite the window is the only one that's not chewed up with doors and cupboards, so we papered it with Katzenbach & Warren's "Garden Baskets," a riot of fruits and flowers and curly foliage in sharp clear colors on a deep gunmetal ground. The other walls, woodwork, and cupboard we painted the bright, slightly greenish yellow of the melons and squashes in the wallpaper design. Does it sound giddy? Well, it might have been—as a background for French Provincial furniture. But the Westgates had already decided they wanted George

Did you ever have the problem of trying to cram a full-size range into a very tiny space? You can't quite do that, but almost, with the Deep freeze apartment-size electric range. In spite of its small size, you have four regulation surface heating units, and a full-size oven. Of course, there's a back-splash a generous 8" high, and a storage compartment at the bottom. An automatic oven timer, and a receptacle for small appliances like toaster, coffee maker, are other conveniences that make this a big prize in a little package.

Have a hard time serving hot things hot and cold things cold these summer days? You need the magic Hotray-Gourmet, made by Salton Mfg. Co. Here in one piece is a radiant-glass heated center section, with two side sections of wood-grain Formica which do not heat up. Keeps your casserole hot in the center (shatter-proof glass reaches a temperature of 200° F.), your salad and iced tea cold on the sides. Tray measures 14" x 21". Formica sections come in mahogany or blond finish. Tray has aluminum frame, easy-grip wood handles.

If you have trouble getting everything you want fitted into your kitchen, the new Lector-Host electric range is for you. It comes in two sections, the oven, and the surface unit; the latter with one giant-size and one regular-size cooking unit. You can install these at any location, at any height and in any combination you like. If you have a big family, you may want a total of 6 cooking units and 2 ovens. If you're just starting housekeeping, you can have only one or two units. A. J. Lindemann & Hoverson make units to suit your needs.

Nelson's Lazy-Susan table with the white Formica top and his white "angle-iron" chairs with cane seats does the most for which—the frivolity of the background or the austere purity of the furniture.

When the Morriszes finished their new house two years ago they were dead broke, or so they said. Four chairs, they claimed, were all they could possibly afford for the dining room. (Should say the dining area since there's no real wall to make it a separate room.) Was sure that kind of parsimony wouldn't last for long, so I waited.
The call came last month, and no surprise.

"We must have four more right away. Maybe six. Can you get the same kind?"

I could. But by then I had a better idea.

"Eight or ten chairs all alike are going to look awfully monotonous—especially in your casual modern house," I told Nancy.
"How are you fixed on the terrace?"

"The terrace? Well . . . we need more chairs there, too, but that will have to wait until next year.
Right now I'm worrying about the dining room."

My plot was to kill two birds with one chair—a new one I'd marked down in my little book when Allen Gould opened his own showroom last spring. Had a foam rubber seat and back floating—more or less—on a wrought-steel

The tossed salad has become one of the basics of our American menu-making. We've taken a darned good idea from the French and we've made it better. Not often willing to stop with greens dressed in purist French fashion with only oil, vinegar, salt and pepper, we add this and that—tomatoes, grated cheese, hard-boiled eggs, capers, and bits of bacon. We toss in thin slices of celery and croutons for crispness, fresh herbs for flavor, avocado for richness, and anchovies for their smoked-fish shock to our taste buds.

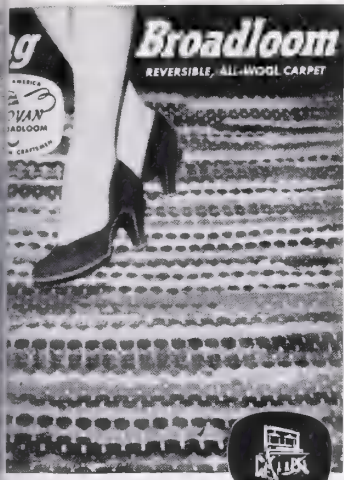

This kind of creative activity is good, but it can run away with us. It's a very bad practice to put everything in the salad that happens to be on hand and might be good. Any salad that is served with a meal, and is not a meal in itself, should always be the perfect complement. For instance, a garlicky, highly seasoned salad full of red wine vinegar and marinated beans à-la-the-little-Italian-restaurant would overpower and ruin the subtle flavor of a piece of broiled fillet of sole.

In planning a meal, the salad assumes one of two roles. Either it is added to a well-rounded meal of soup, meat, vegetables, etc., or it is a special partner of one important dish as in the buffet supper formula. In the first case, a classic French green salad is perfect, because it plays beautifully its role of a refreshing palate cleanser. But, in the second case in a limited menu, the mixture should have its own character and be a little more interesting. Above all, it should "go with" the rest of the meal.

Think about why we have salad. Nutritionally, it's to provide a vegetable or green in the meal. But, gastronomically, it is to provide the sharpest contrasts—crisp texture, of cold temperature and of sharp, acid taste amid the heavier, bland-to-robust meat and starch flavors.

The very nature of a salad creates contrast. Yet, because it is opposite and dramatic, there can be a subtle harking back to the main dish of the meal within its flavors. Sometimes the dressings and seasonings and crisp bits of vegetables echo the same flavor of the rest of the meal. Sometimes they are just sympathetic flavors. Sometimes they're merely related by mood or tradition. When it comes right down to the mixing, there are only three important elements to think of—the greens, the accents, and the dressing.

Many salad greens, like mustard greens, water cress and dandelion greens have a definite flavor value. Others are very sweet and tender (Boston lettuce and all the loose head lettuces, for example), and wilt easily when dressed with a dressing that is full of good sharp vinegar. Some are good for body to "support" the salad—Romaine and regular head lettuce particularly—but are rather pallid as to flavor. Each type has its own role and a good mixture uses some from each group, some for flavor, some for sweetness and tenderness, and one for good backbone.

You can have real fun with the accent department. These should be added sparingly so that the salad is complemented, but not burdened, by the new elements. You can add bits of almond or cauliflower for crisp texture to a rather soft or delicate salad, and sharp flavor to a bland one. You can add surprise ingredients like water chestnuts or chicken livers for interest. Or you can make a very simple salad glamorous by making an unusual dressing that is particularly harmonious with the main dish.

With chicken (broiled, sautéed, or fried), for instance, I cook the livers in with the chicken and then add them to the salad I serve with it.

This salad begins with plain lettuce, both the stronger textured ordinary head of lettuce, and a couple of heads of tender, young, loose-leaf lettuce. A few leaves of curly lettuce or a few sprays of water cress can be added for looks as much as anything else.

Chop a couple of tablespoons of chives (it's a salad that should be on the delicate side, so better not use onions) and put the livers and a hard-boiled egg through the Mouli grater right onto the greens along with the chives. Everything is tossed with a dressing made of $\frac{2}{3}$ olive oil and $\frac{1}{3}$ herb-flavored white vinegar, the juice of a lemon, a teaspoon of Spice Islands Beau Monde Seasoning Salt, and some salt and black pepper. The livers echo the crisp chicken flavor and the seasonings (chives and Beau Monde) seem to harmonize.

For creamed chicken dishes, fricassees, or any rather rich chicken casserole. I like another type of salad. To offset the rich creaminess of main-course dishes such as these, the accompanying salad should be very tart, tangy, and super crisp. A combination of the inside hearts of Romaine and water cress is good, with the addition of some thin slices of apple (sprinkled with lemon juice so that they won't discolor) and canned mandarin orange sections. The dressing can be the same as in the chicken liver salad, above.

With all kinds of chicken dishes there is nothing better than fresh tarragon. Use it with a good mixture of greens, thinly sliced raw mushrooms or artichoke hearts, and toss it with the same Beau Monde dressing. (A tarragon-flavored white vinegar will amplify the flavor of the fresh herb.)

Salads that really complement fish are, in character, very much like the ones that go with chicken, but they differ sharply in the seasonings that are most effective. They, too, should be delicate and use sweet young greens and white vinegar in the dressing. Sometimes lemon juice is even better than vinegar.

With plain, broiled, or sautéed fish, or baked fish with lemon butter, a good sour cream salad is a delicious accompaniment. It can be made of Romaine hearts, water cress, and curly lettuce for the greens, over which is sprinkled chopped parsley, some sprigs of fresh dill (if obtainable), and a thinly sliced cucumber.

Sour Cream Dressing

½ cup sour cream
¼ cup sweet cream
Juice of ½ lemon
1 oz. white vinegar
½ teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon minced onion
Salt and white pepper to taste
1 teaspoon celery seed

Mix creams together with lemon juice and vinegar. Then add seasonings in order given.

If the main dish is really rich, (such as deviled shellfish or salmon hollandaise) the salad should be light and tart, but seasoned sympathetically. Try plain crisp Romaine hearts (just the curly little yellow inside leaves) with a garnish of thinly sliced green onions and a teaspoon of dill seeds. Toss with this dressing:

Cucumber Dressing

½ cup olive oil
Juice of 1 lemon
½ cucumber, peeled, seeded, and puréed
½ ounce (or more) dry vermouth
Salt and white pepper to taste

In these salads the link between the fish and the salad is via the seasonings, which are the same ones usually used in fish cookery. Having them turn up in the salad, too, isn't the least monotonous. They have an entirely different effect.

The more robust flavors and rich fats in most meats—beef and lamb particularly—call for a lustier type of salad, a salad that has more zip in its own right.

Water cress and beef are so good together it's distinctly worth while to serve nice, thick, juicy ham, burgers on a bed of fresh water cress. You don't even need a dressing, just the rich meat juices and perhaps a squeeze of lemon juice.

One good trick to pull out when you are serving a beef roast is a cool bowlful of crisp water cress with a few white onions sliced very thin, tossed at the table with a good strong French dressing to which has been added 2 table spoons of the meat drippings.

French Dressing

¼ cup garlic red wine vinegar
2 tablespoons beef drippings
Salt
½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Another good salad with beef is a young spinach salad with a mustard dressing. The beef can hold its own against the distinctive flavor of the raw spinach and its spicy dressing.

Mustard Dressing

Because the spinach is so strong you want a dressing with real punch. So add a good teaspoon of prepared mustard to the dressing given just above for the water cress recipe. Use a riced, hard-boiled egg and thinly-sliced green onions with it, and leave the spinach leaves whole, breaking off all stems.

Since lamb is a more delicately flavored meat (like fish), it takes kindly to salads seasoned with the same herbs that are used to season the meat itself. Mixed greens combined with ½ cup of cooked fresh peas and some thinly-sliced white onions is a good salad to serve with lamb. Toss with a dressing made of ⅓ cup olive oil, ⅓ cup Crosse and Blackwell mint sauce and the juice of a lemon.

If you ever broil skewers of lamb try this self-assertive and herby spiked salad to go with them. It be longs with an outdoor barbecue meal, and seems to set off the subtle flavor that marinating and charcoal broiling give the lamb.

Salad for a Barbecue Meal

Use a mixture of butter lettuce, red lettuce, and some regular head lettuce. Slice in an avocado and sprinkle it with lemon juice. To a very tart French dressing (made with a generous amount of red wine vinegar) add 2 tablespoons of Italian tomato hot sauce and a teaspoon of fresh rosemary that has been slightly crushed. Toss all this together

We've all had boiled lamb and caper sauce and know that it can be delicious. But so can a sour cream and caper dressing for a salad that is served with cold sliced lamb or tongue. Use about half butter lettuce (or loose-leaf lettuce) and half regular lettuce in the bowl.

Sour Cream Caper Dressing

- 1/2 cup sour cream
- 1/4 cup plain cream
- Juice of a lemon
- 1/2 bottle of capers and all their liquor

Mix, season to taste with salt and black pepper, toss and serve.

Another good salad with cold lamb is made with a mixture of greens, some thinly-sliced cucumber and plain French dressing to which two generous tablespoons of chutney have been added. Sometimes it's more interesting and more pleasing to the palate to find in the salad the condiment that is supposed to be on the meat.

Foreign dishes, like spaghetti and curry, require just the right kind of salad. Until you are thoroughly at home in a foreign cuisine, it pays to follow the seasoning lead of the country to which the dishes are native.

With Italian food, use the traditional tomato and zucchini as a salad, dressed with a good garlic French dressing made with red wine vinegar. Season with oregano, marjoram or sweet basil, or even chervil. These herbs are best used fresh as the Italians use them. But if you must use them dry, add them to the bottle of dressing.

Scrub the zucchini and slice very thin. Peel and seed the tomatoes. Toss greens and zucchini until the dressing thoroughly coats the greens. Then add the tomatoes and re-toss. This prevents the tomatoes from "watering" the salad.

Another good Italian salad is spiked with either garbanzos (Italian ceci beans) or red kidney beans marinated in a good garlic dressing with some chopped onion and tossed with some tiny flowers of cauliflower (for texture contrast). The Italians also use the paste they make to season minestrone (a mixture of grated cheese, chopped fresh herbs, garlic, and olive oil, all mixed into a stiff paste) to season French dressing. You can make this by the half cup and store it in a jar in the refrigerator, and a teaspoon goes a long way added to either soup or salad dressing. All these salads, incidentally, are as good with plain veal, ham, and pork as they are with Italian dishes.

If you serve duck, squab or spareribs barbecued in the Chinese fashion with a basting of oil and soy sauce, go all out and add a few truly Chinese accents to your salad. After all, many Chinese vegetable dishes are cooked so quickly and crisply they practically are salads.

Use thinly-sliced water chestnuts, canned or fresh. These can be bought fresh in most big cities and in practically all West Coast cities. They keep several weeks unpeeled. Use these together with bean sprouts, slivered almonds, thinly-sliced green pepper, celery and green onions. It's nice to add a few Chinese greens, like dandelion or mustard, to the usual Romaine and lettuce.

Chinese Dressing

¼ cup sesame oil
Juice of a lemon
2 tablespoons soy sauce
Freshly ground black pepper
1 teaspoon prepared mustard

If this is a little too Chinese for your tastes, just use a plain French dressing made with white vinegar.

A delicious salad to serve with any curry dish depends on orange for its main accent. Use a selection of rather delicate simple greens, plain lettuce, Boston lettuce, or loose-leaf lettuce, and Romaine hearts. To the bowl, add some Spanish onions, the big red sweet ones, sliced very thin. Add the zest of one orange. (This means just the colored part of the peel, not white.) Make a white wine vinegar dressing, using the 2:3 to 1:3 proportion, and season it with salt, pepper, a dash of clove, two or three tablespoons of orange juice, and maybe a little sugar if the oranges aren't sweet.

Or use this same dressing on a mixture of plain greens with perhaps a little water cress and some sliced melon and fruit. Use a honeydew melon, a Persian melon or a canteloupe, and peach, pear or apple—one of each. A few white raisins soaked in a little white wine is a good addition, too. The delicate fruit flavors are fine with the hot curry.

At meals with wine, the salad dressing should be delicate, made with wine or lemon juice in place of strong vinegar. We often use cream, sour cream, or mayonnaise thinned and seasoned various ways instead of a true French dressing.

If we are having fresh fruit salad and a light white wine, this is the formula: Put the fruit over Iceberg and loose-leaf lettuce.

Fruit-Salad Dressing

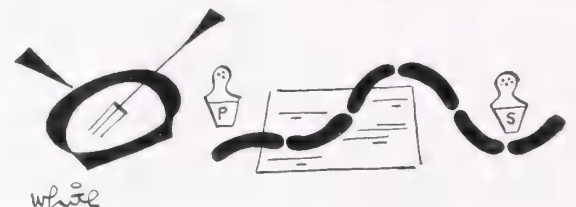

¼ cup olive oil
Juice of 1 lemon
2 tablespoons honey
2 tablespoons sherry
Salt and white pepper

Mix the lemon juice, honey and sherry together first and then add the oil. A few fresh mint leaves in the bowl are good, too.

Our very favorite salad to serve with wine is borrowed from Helen Evans Brown. It's her recipe for

Lettuce and Cream

Use only young tender loose head lettuce. In a mortar mash the yolks of four hard-boiled eggs until smooth. Work in 1 cup of heavy cream, ½ teaspoon of salt and a few grindings of pepper, and or 3 tablespoons of lemon juice added a few drops at a time, though you were making mayonnaise. Sprinkle the greens with chopped chives, parsley, and tarragon (we like marjoram, too) and toss with the dressing.

PANTRY SHELF NEWS

They make delicious nibbling in place of potato chips or the like; good, too, as a garnish for soup. Three packages of these (3½ oz.) cost $1.25.

In the line of things to nibble when drinks are passed, the Waggoner Salted Sunflower Seeds have much to offer. This nut-like tidbit is entirely unlike the usual sunflower seeds purveyed. In this roasted state they're about the size of a shelled pistachio. Those who didn't know what they were thought them to be some new kind of nut. They disappeared by the handful. Once you start nibbling, you go on and on. That's the sole issue one could take with the delicious morsels. But you're bound to nibble as you drink, so why hold that against them. You can order them from Vendome, Inc., 415 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y. Three 5-oz. jars cost $2.45 ppd.

Still another form of nibbling-food that keeps you coming back for more is a dessert chip made of roasted, flavored coconut. The tiny, crisp squares come in four flavors: maple, rum'n'honey, honeyed, almond. The reigning favorite around these parts was the maple. Perhaps, because the tasters happened to favor maple. It does seem to have an edge over the other flavors when used as a topping for ice cream. All but the salted type have delicious possibilities, too, when crumbed as a crust for frozen concoctions. They're a tasty change from cookies with lemonade or iced tea, and it occurred to me the other day that adding them to dry cereal might curry Junior's favor. All types are called Coco Nuttees; you have to specify the desired flavor. You can get them from Sunaid Food Products, 860 Northwest 36th St., Miami, Fla. Three jars, of the same or assorted flavors, cost $1.95 plus postage.

Tomato marmalades were never my dish, but I became a convert after tasting the trio produced by Saw Mill Farm. I mention my personal reaction solely to indicate what persuasive power the exceptional marmalades have. I admit that their herbed nature might have had something to do with my change-of-heart; somehow tomatoes and herbs seem to belong together, whatever the concoction may be. The green-tomato marmalade is flavored with basil; the red-tomato with thyme and the yellow-tomato with tarragon. And in each instance, the herb in question manifests itself in delightful fashion. They're used in ample quantity to both enhance the marmalade and have an entity of their own.

The marmalades, as such, are of a very super-quality. Even if one didn't know the home-kitchen methods used to make them, this fact and the fine quality of the raw ingredients employed are made evident by the superb flavor of the final product.

It's suggested that the basil marmalade be used for breakfast toast, the thyme for tea, and the tarragon for meat. But as with wines, there's no reason why one shouldn't let his personal preference dictate the use.

The Herbettes Marmalades come attractively boxed with the thought that you might consider them for gifts. They're mighty apt as a thank-you gesture to your hostess. The set (10-oz. jars) cost $2.95, from Edith Chapman, 50 Piermont Ave., Nyack, N. Y.

It seems to me that more and more inns and restaurants are bringing their salad dressings into the commercial market. I'm all for the movement, for usually these dressings are of an especially interesting nature. All this leads to one that's a tasty example of Pennsylvania Dutch cuisine, made by The Old Baer House in Somerset, Pennsylvania. As often happens, they had many requests from their clientele for a bottle to take home or to give someone as a gift and ultimately decided to branch out and make the dressing available on a mail-order basis.

The chopped, fresh onions with which the oil-vinegar base is lavishly stocked, are what make it so unusual and interesting in flavor. At the famous eating house, as they call the picturesque old houses that are converted into restaurants, the dressing is used as a sauce on sea food and in sea food salads. I haven't yet tried it for these purposes, but I do know that when I served it to dinner guests on a tossed green salad, everyone wanted to know where they could get the dressing. A 12-ounce jar is sold for $1, postpaid, from Old Baer House, Somerset, Penn.

Since Rodney wanted to spend most of his leisure time with his children, the garden was planned for minimum upkeep. This planting outside the garden room utilizes sturdy native material, requires no pampering.

Life seems less hectic, more worth while. So the garden room becomes a second living room, a dining room, and a patio all in one.

You don't acquire this kind of house or room haphazardly, of course. Views can be wonderfully exciting, or just miles of nothingness. Plants must be chosen that actually thrive indoors, for sickly furnishings have no place around water and soil. Nature, ungroomed, may disappoint you.

The magnificent old oak trees that fill the view from the Walker garden room would scarcely rate attention if they hadn't been pruned with taste to silhouette their rugged lines against the sky. These tree forms are uncluttered by wispy twigs or confusing shrubs, so their form registers convincingly and cleanly. As a result the room has real style and great glamour.

Big, important plantings indoors are not dream stuff, practical only

Revive Dry, Summer-Parched Earth Before Fall Planting

MIRACLE SOIL CONDITIONER

Changes Hard Clay into Workable, Crumbly Loam Assures You Thick Lawn, Lovelier Flowers, Healthier Shrubs, Trees, Perennials Next Spring

For a faster, luxurious start next Spring, for bigger, more vigorous plants that will survive winter damage, it is important to condition your soil now, before you start autumn planting and seeding.

LIQUID FLUFFIUM IS EASY TO APPLY!

Just sprinkle or spray Fluffium and you can convert organically poor soil, or earth baked hard by summer sun and drought, into absorbent, productive soil. You break up the crust chemically, producing proper tilth, to assure best growth of new lawn, successful renovation of old lawn, "setting-in" of shrubs and trees, best germination of fall-planted bulbs.

Fluffium seeps into the crust it chemically changes its structure. Fluffium-treated soil permits life-sustaining nitrogen and other essential elements to reach the plant roots. The soil will absorb and hold more water.

Apply Fluffium this fall and eliminate these problems: dried out, parched soils; flowers, or shrubs that are stunted and small; clay expanses that won't drain.

UNCONDITIONALLY GUARANTEED OR YOUR MONEY BACK

These amazing results are being enjoyed by over 50,000 home and commercial gardeners in every state. Use Fluffium in your garden this fall. Use it on our unconditional guarantee that it will achieve the miracles we describe . . . or . . . we refund your money at once.

Plants Grow Better in Fluffium-Treated Soil. After 3 weeks growth, see how the Snap Beans have flourished in Fluffium-treated soil (left), and are many times larger than those retarded by crusty untreated soil (right). Plant growth in looser, Moisture- and air-rich Fluffium-treated soil is almost 3 times better!

Roots Grow and Branch Easily. Plant in Fluffium-treated soil (left) flourishes; roots grow quickly, healthily; seedling comes to the surface sooner. Plant (right) grows poorly in untreated soil.

Changes Hard-Packed Clay into Soft Crumbly Loam Fluffium-treated soil (left) is soft, crumbly, ideal for planting and growing because it retains moisture, air, nutrients. Untreated soil (right) is a mass of hard clumps that don't allow moisture and air to penetrate.

Absorbs and Holds Water. Drop soil into a test tube of Fluffium (left) and it forms large soil clumps allowing easy entry of moisture, nutrients. But soil dropped in water (right) quickly becomes a muddy dust-like sludge.

Apply Fluffium on Your Garden Now

- Makes digging-in of peat unnecessary! (1 gal. of Fluffium is equal to numerous bales of peat moss!)
- One application keeps soil conditioned several years! (1 gal. of Fluffium conditions 40,000 lbs. of soil, 1500 square feet!)
- Eliminates garden drudgery. Liquid Fluffium is easily, quickly applied, without hard work!

PHOTOGRAPH BY JOHN ENGSTEAD

Living close to Nature—indoors as well as out—is part of the Walkers' daily life. Plants thrive in their garden room because there is ample sunlight from glass walls and skylights. They can be watered without damaging the floor which is concrete.

in tropical areas. Plants thrive regally in the Walker garden room, not because of the local climate, but because the Walkers provide two physical requirements applicable in any climate. Light reaches the plants from three directions (including eight skylights). The humidity of the air is boosted by daily hosing of the plants, which is feasible because all materials in the garden room are impervious to water damage.

Potted plants are seldom used in the Walker house. Pot plants are too much trouble and plants growing permanently in the ground get along on their own more fully, the Walkers believe.

The garden outdoors is a low-upkeep affair, too. It contains only tough plants—those able to get along without pampering in hot, dry weather. None requires fancy pruning or special diets. All bounce back quickly when brushed aside by a boy intent on finding a missed baseball. Most are strictly natives of the area, but any part of the country can produce a sizable list of its own native plants for such a big-return, low-upkeep garden.

There's a big lawn. Rodney likes grass and the children need it to play on in this dry climate. But it's not a time-waster, thanks to its start. Albert Heinemann, landscape architect—Rodney always calls him in before starting a house—saved the topsoil, and built it up with humus and plant food before seeding the lawn. Nothing the children have done since has hurt the grass or impaired its beauty.

So far the children haven't become active gardeners, but signs point to this as the next exploration for them. Their parents look forward to it. They've watched with pleasure the amazement and excitement that come with the first unfurling of a new leaf. Now that their growth is bringing a longer attention span, Rodney and Dorothea foresee that watching from seed to plant to flower will be as surprising.

But it'll be a self-generated exploration—not a chore. There will be no garden work as such. It'll be low-upkeep gardening, with wonder the reward. If flowers or fruit come too, these are to be extra dividends. Their chief goal for their children is this: having lived close to Nature, each in his own way, each following where Nature leads, each child will discover for himself the miracle of all life—growth and renewal.

BOOKS FOR GARDENERS

Greenhouse Hobby
Popular Orchid Growing, by Sanders (Royal orchid growers). Distributed by Horticultural Book Service, 200 Detroit Ave., Concord, Calif. 73 pages, $1.75.

A title such as Popular Orchid Growing gives the impression of a book which deals with orchids in sunroom windows, but alas, the first illustration shows a plan for an orchid greenhouse containing separate "stove," "intermediate," and "cool" sections.

Nevertheless, the book aims to dispel the notion that orchids are difficult to grow. In addition to the general directions for culture, propagation, and pest control, it provides a tabular list of requirements for 41 genera of orchids. There are eight color illustrations.

The Complete Book of African Violets, by Helen Van Pelt Wilson. Barrows, New York, 1951. 247 pages. $2.95.

All About African Violets, by Montague Free. Doubleday, New York, 1951. 304 pages. $3.50.
How to Grow African Violets, by Carolyn K. Rector. Lane, Menlo Park, Calif., 1951. 94 pages, paper-covered. $1.35.

New books on the culture of African violets have been keeping pace with the expansion of this most popular indoor garden hobby.

Although in the Free and Wilson books the chapter arrangements and style of writing are completely different, much the same information is given. A notable distinction is that where Montague Free reports individual experiences with plants, Miss Wilson summarizes such experiences into concise recommendations. Her single opening chapter, "To Make Them Bloom," covers in 31 pages essentially what Mr. Free treats in five chapters totaling 70 pages. On the other hand, Miss Wilson devotes three chapters of 40 pages to propagation, whereas Mr. Free handles the topic in less than half that space.

Both books have five pages of fine color illustrations depicting about thirty varieties of flowers—individual blossoms being shown in natural size in the Free book; plants much reduced in size in the Wilson volume. More than 100 half-tone illustrations are in the Free book; 39 drawings of varieties, cultural practices in the other.

WHAT GOOD IS A LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT

If you're thinking of buying property, take along your landscape architect. The real estate agent is seldom capable or anxious to tell you whether it's a suitable house or site for your requirements. His business is to sell it. The landscape architect can measure your requirements and your budget against the probable costs of developing the property. Maybe the trees are either poor varieties or in bad condition. Maybe it's covered with obnoxious weeds which would be almost impossible to eradicate.

There may be problems of an entrance driveway that aren't obvious. There may be indications of poor drainage, heavy clay soil, erosion, or an exposure that might influence your decision. Will it have to be fenced to keep out rabbits or deer before you can have a garden? If you're looking at the property on a hot summer day and find it lush and cool you might forget it's a north slope with no sun from October to March.

Most people start out with a budget. The only way to hope to stay within it is to avoid as much guess work as possible, and to know all possible costs before you commit yourself. To the average layman the headings are simple: The lot. The house. The garden ("can be done gradually later") and Furniture. Ever hear of "site improvements?" They're seldom included in the house budget. The garden allowance is only for soil preparation, plants, and lawns.

The site improvements are the big costs. They must usually be done before you can move in. On a simple, flat property they may not strain your budget. In a tough terrain they may cost as much as the house itself. Aside from special conditions imposed by the site or the clients' whims they consist of the following:

- Retaining Walls
- Grading and leveling
- Tree clearance, pruning, and surgery
- Entrance road and parking courts
- Drainage system
- Boundary fences
- Screen fences—garden lighting
- Supplementary garden structures (tool storage, bath house, extra storage)
- Sprinkler system

Most budgets fail for one of two reasons or both: Under-estimating the house costs, wanting more house than you can afford, and failure to provide for site improvements.

Let's take a case history from the files. Mr. and Mrs. A. came to us with a budget of $40,000. They had the lot ($5,000) and allowed $30,000 for a 3-bedroom house and $5,000 for the garden work. The lot was steep but attractive. They wanted a simple house but good materials. On further questioning about room sizes, it appeared that they wanted a house of about 2800 sq. ft. What living space they expected a lot (an acre) to produce for this: a preliminary budget came in like this:

Lot	$ 5
House at $15.00 per sq. ft.	42
Boundary fences
Roads and parking area	2
Grading and top soil	1
Drainage—catch basins
(roof leaders and tile)
Water system and lawn sprinklers	1
Construction work	3
Lawns
Planting & labor allowance	2
Professional fees	1
(landscape only)

$61

That's 50% over at the start, a good thing to know. How many times have you heard people say "Our house is running way over original estimate." or, "If I had known how much it was going to cost, I never would have started."

Your landscape architect is trained to look at the whole picture and warn you what to expect. Mr. and Mrs. A. sold the steep lot and bought another with fewer complications for $8,000. They were best with their architect, trimmed their requirements, and didn't keep adding things to the plans. They got about everything they wanted for $46,000.

The important thing is to start right. Sometimes the thing done in the first ten minutes will set the pattern for your whole project. Compromises will lessen its dramatic value. Changes are expensive. If you can afford a $25,000 house, don't force your architects to draw plans for a $50,000 house, cross your fingers and hope the bids will come in low.

The principles are the same whether you build or buy. Do not sign any papers until your landscape architect has studied the problem and can tell you what you are letting yourself in

Why don't you do what Dorothy Kilgallen does?

Famous Broadway columnist and TV star, Dorothy Kilgallen, serves cigarettes in miniature Toby jugs! It's so smart! She keeps Ronson table lighters on hand, too; they're a "must" for guests!

Ronsons are gems of design, made with jewelers' precision. One fueling serves for months. Look for the name Ronson.

mahogany chairs we'd started out with. But unlike the latter they'd also make good sense on the terrace. And since nothing but a sliding glass wall separated indoors from outdoors, there'd be no problem moving them back and forth.

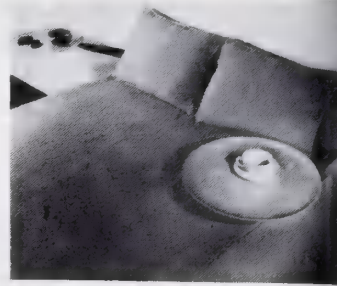

When Nancy heard my discourse and saw the chair she agreed—then did me one better by upping her order to eight of the Gould chairs.

"I'll keep the two extras in the boys' room. They really need them. Don't forget there's a little terrace outside their room too."

I'm forever fascinated by those tales of the World's Greatest Geniuses—the ones who do nine-tenths of their work in bed. Tried it myself once or twice with conspicuous lack of results. I was so uncomfortable! The Geniuses, I suppose, have themselves well surrounded with storage headboards, storage night tables, storage on wheels to keep handy all the paraphernalia of their craft.

But what do they use for a desk top? I've tried my knees. Very awkward. A bed tray on legs. Too confining. But I haven't given yet. Last week I was inspired again by a swing-out bed tray discovered at Herman Miller. A round tray molded plywood attached to arm that's hinged to the headboard of the bed. That ought to do trick. Now it will be easy to write all those polite little notes (or I've promised myself). I'll make lists every night for the next day's chores. I'll sketch out those brilliant design ideas that come to me only in the bathtub and evaporate so quickly after I'm dry. The list will be delivered sometime next week. Well, we'll see. —M

The Kind of Comfort Every Home Should Have

Now you can have the exact temperature you want—in every part of the house—with Honeywell Zone Control

The striking new home of Mr. and Mrs. Max Allen in Warwick, Rhode Island, is an excellent example of how the traditional home has been modernized and brought very much up-to-date.

And it's an excellent example, too, of how Honeywell Zone Control can give you comfortable, even warmth—in every part of the house—all winter long.

In developing the floor plan for their home, Mr. Allen, an engineer and designer by profession, realized no ordinary temperature control system would do.

"With three distinct areas in the home—living-dining and service on the first floor, sleeping on the second, we definitely needed zone control," he says. "So we divided the house into three zones—each with a separate thermostat system."

Today, because of Honeywell Zone Control, Mr. and Mrs. Allen and their guests enjoy the right degree of even warmth—in every part of the house—no matter how changeable the winter weather.

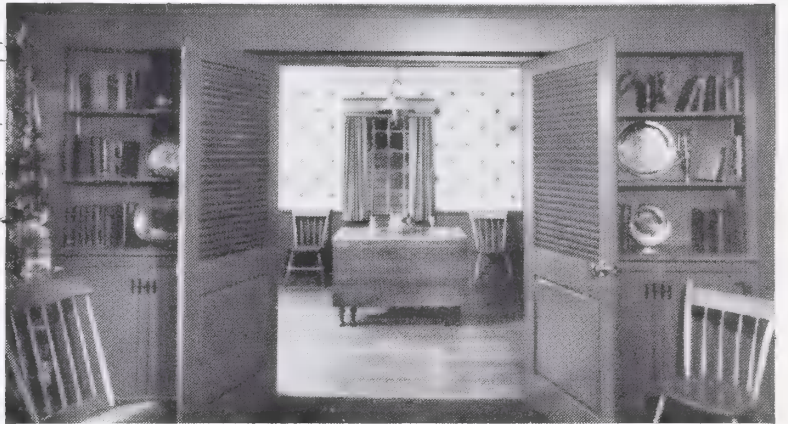

So why don't you investigate Honeywell Zone Control? Ask your architect and heating engineer how easily you can have the kind of comfort every home owner should have.

Windows facing south and west admit plenty of sunshine to help warm the living room, even on a cold winter day. Yet when it clouds over—these same windows are a source of heat loss. Honeywell Zone Control, with a separate thermostat system in the living-dining area, makes sure both rooms are comfortable all the time. It also easily compensates for the extra heat of the fireplace.

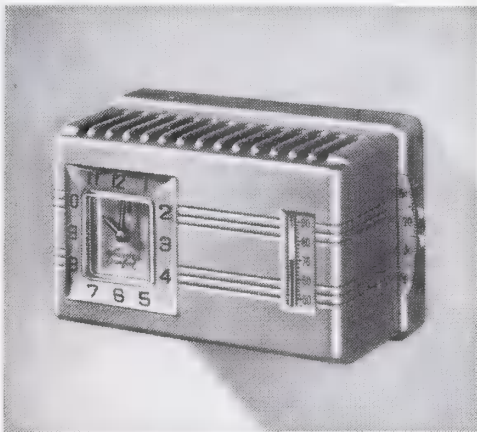

The kitchen-breakfast area is in heating zone 3. Here Honeywell Zone Control assures even warmth at all times by compensating for the extra heat from the range. Too, it often has to make up for heat loss on a day when the wind is strong from the northeast.

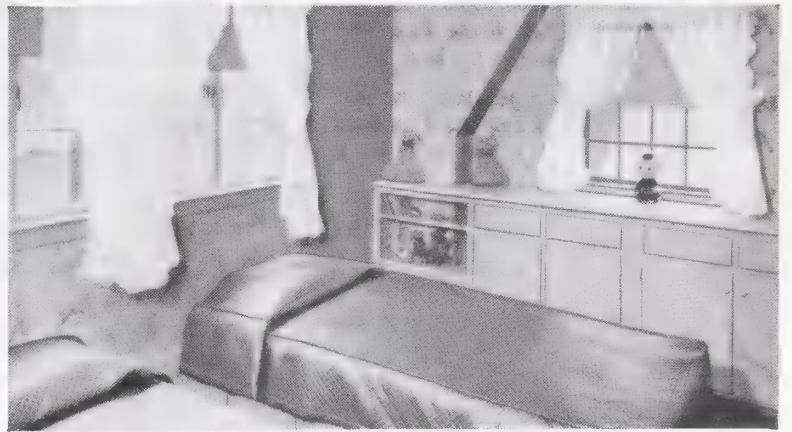

Heating zone 2, as the floor plan indicates, includes the dining area as well as the living room. And since a good deal of the dining room wall area faces north (that's the north wall you see through the doors above), only zone control, utilizing separate thermostat systems, can keep this area comfortable on blustery winter days.

HONEYWELL CLOCK THERMOSTAT

Owners say the Honeywell electric or electronic clock thermostat is wonderful because it turns down the heat — automatically — when you go to bed, and gives you a nice cool room to sleep in; turns up the heat — automatically — while you're still asleep, and your home is warm when you get up. Saves you fuel, besides! Ask your architect, heating engineer or heating dealer about the new Honeywell thermostats and other automatic heating controls that can make the heating system in your home a better heating system.

The bedrooms are all located on the second floor. A separate heating zone — zone 1 — gives independent temperature control up here. This means that at night the bedrooms are comfortably cool for sleeping. And during the parts of the day when the second floor is not used, Honeywell Zone Control makes it possible to maintain a lower temperature — and thus save fuel.

CAR ABOUT TOWN. Lincoln fits the modern town scene with its feeling for graceful living...with its deep, wide, soft-cushioned seats...with its warm, rich-toned fabrics and soft, deep-piled carpeting. Sensibly sized for easy parking. New ball-joint, front-wheel suspension for easier steering. And, of course, dual range HYDRA-MATIC Transmission (standard equipment) for the most effortless driving of your life.

SPACE—WITHOUT WASTE. Like the modern apartment, Lincoln makes practical use of every inch of space, achieving an air of openness and freedom. Big, wide, safety-curve windshield and large windows give window-wall visibility (up to 3,271 square inches of glass all around, with sea-tint glass available). The down-swept hood and chair-high seats let you see both front fenders.

in LINCOLN modern living reaches new heights

Standard equipment, accessories, and trim illustrated are subject to change without notice. Sea-tint glass, white side-wall tires optional at extra cost.

The modern living approach has come to town. It has made today's townsman leisured, informal, easygoing. It has created the modern apartment with the sweep of the country home.

And modern living has also come to town in the distinctive, modern Lincoln.

Here is a car designed for the times we live in. That is practical...livable...and, above all, beautiful. With a feeling of openness and spaciousness never thought possible. With magnificent interiors. And with almost 30 cubic feet in the luggage compartment alone.

Lincoln says power in its clean, action-trimmed lines. And it has more power than you may ever need in its new overhead valve high compression V-8 engine.

How majestically this Lincoln rides the open highway. How easily it climbs the steepest hill. How effortlessly it winds through city streets.

Whether you are living in town or country—or both—you owe it to yourself to see the new Lincoln Cosmopolitan and Capri at your dealer's showroom. Even better, accept his cordial invitation to drive the one fine car deliberately designed for modern living.

Going to Concerts

By Richard Williams

YOU do not go to a concert to relax. In this respect the concert differs from other forms of entertainment, from the movies, or the theater. Watson tells us that Sherlock Holmes relaxed from his celebrations by listening to Sarasate at the Albert Hall, but I suspect that he was working on the solution all the time and made but a poor auditor for the violinist. A concert may well take you out of yourself and help you forget your problems. Not, however, through casual relaxation. A concert is not casual entertainment.

In the theater you may be amused, you may occasionally be thrilled, and you will often be bored. Your feelings may also hover somewhere in the middle and you may be mildly entertained. In fact, these days mild entertainment is what you get most frequently from theatergoing (if you're lucky). What do you get from a concert? Here you will either be very thrilled or you will be bored to death.

Concertgoing is an experience in extremes. That is because music is an experience in emotion. And emotion deals with extremes. You may pale at the music or cry tears, your skin may tingle and your hand shake. Your glance, fixed on the artist, may yet sweep unreal horizons, your ear may penetrate to the very bottom of the music, your whole heart may be captured, and, come intermission time, you may wonder where the hour has sped. On the other hand it may be very hot, your feet may swell, you may hate every one around you who seems to be having a good time. You may surreptitiously look at your watch to find that only two minutes have elapsed. You may read every word in the program twice and then run out of reading material. In short, you may be miserable.

Neither experience, neither the thrill nor the boredom, is necessarily dependent on your general musical culture or on your acquaintance with the music that is being played. Nor does your reaction depend entirely on the quality of the performing artists, though of course there are fascinating artists and dull artists. Few artists you are likely to meet in the concert hall are dull, but fewer still are unfailingly interesting. The same music is received by you at various times. So is the same artist. I have often had the experience that a Brahms symphony has at one performance absorbed all my attention and engaged my capacity to feel, while at another performance—and not necessarily a “bad” performance—I have had all I could do to keep my mind on the music.

Every actor will tell you that the quality of a performance depends to some extent on the willingness of the audience to enter with him into the spirit of the occasion, to co-operate in make-believe. There are “good houses” and “bad houses.” In the concert hall you make your own good or bad house to a remarkable degree. Your mood plays as important a role as the musician.

How do you get yourself in the mood? It is impossible to write a set of rules or give a formula. The communion with music is best achieved, I think, by not seeking it too consciously but letting it come naturally. For myself I try, before the music begins, to wipe my mind clear, to stop thinking of what happened to me in the course of the day, to turn myself free of the space and time of my daily life. I believe that the secret of concertgoing (and indeed of all listening to music) is to try to cut yourself loose from yourself. Re-

Concertgoing, then, is a gamble. However, it is a gamble with the odds for you, not against you, and therefore worth taking every time. The chances are that somewhere during the evening the thrill will come. You may be unresponsive to a quarter of the music and absent-minded throughout another quarter; there remains the half, and within that half there occurs the moment of revelation when it becomes clear to you that what you are hearing is beautiful and important and sweet and full of meaning, and worth the gamble.

IT IS necessary to give a concert every chance. You never know when you will begin to enjoy it. Here also the experience of music differs from that of the theater. I am a passionate theater-goer but I also hold the world's record for quick exits. If I dislike the play in the first seven minutes after the curtain is up I will only add to my irritation by staying. It won't get better, so I go home.

Contemporary adaptation of Lawson chair. 4 1/2 inch cushion of moulded Foamex on seat. Cylindrical air cores act as natural springs for comfort. An inch of Foamex on back and arms gives far more comfort than twice as much ordinary stuffings — makes for slimmer lines, greater beauty.

From the day she was named — till the day she changed her name — she's nestled in the arms of her favorite Foamex-cushioned chair — restful haven after hopscotch, homework or the senior prom.

Now that she's a bride, she chooses Foamex for every chair, sofa and bed. Because she's proved, through experience, how much lovelier and longer-lasting furniture can be, thanks to Firestone Foamex.

No "pillow plumping" for this modern Mrs. She knows that Foamex "gets up" with you — gracefully, neatly — returning to firm shapeliness, through millions of "ups and downs".

No expensive re-cushioning — Foamex can never sag, bag, or lump up. Even your upholstery material stays beautiful longer, because Foamex will not hollow out to stretch and wear the covering thin.

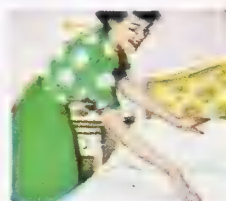

Luxury comfort — modest price-tag — is yours when you look for the famous gold, scarlet and blue label that identifies Foamex-cushioned furniture. Yes, now you can enjoy Foamex (once restricted to custom-made, decorator designs) in popular-priced pieces at your favorite furniture or department store.

Petal-soft Foamex breathes with pressure — expelling dirt and dust — air-cleaning and air-cooling itself.

YOU'LL BE PROUD OF YOUR

Concrete House

WHEN you build or buy a concrete house you can be proud of it for life—on many counts.

First, you'll be proud of its enduring charm. Concrete masonry can be laid in many attractive patterns and finished in a pleasing color with durable portland cement paint. This gives you a wide range of decorative possibilities inside and out.

Second, you'll be proud of the comfort of a concrete house. When properly insulated it is warm in winter, cool in summer and snug and dry and easy to keep clean in all seasons.

Third, you'll be proud of the safety and protection afforded by a concrete house. With concrete foundations, walls, subfloors and a firesafe roof, your house will possess outstanding durability and resistance to storms, quakes, decay, termites, vermin and fire. Concrete can't burn!

Fourth, you'll be proud of the economy of a concrete house. Compared with other construction, its first cost is moderate.

Being exceedingly durable, it requires less maintenance and repair and lasts longer. These factors—moderate first cost, low maintenance expense and long life—mean low annual cost. Yes, it costs less per year to live in a concrete house.

HOW TO GET A CONCRETE HOUSE ...and what will it cost?

Visit or call your local concrete masonry manufacturer for names of architects and builders experienced in concrete house design and construction. Have the architect of your choice show you how to build your house economically with concrete walls, concrete subfloors and a firesafe roof. For more information write for free booklet describing many concrete houses. Distributed only in the United States and Canada.

A leaf from the pages of experience . . .

The name BARTLETT has become synonymous with science and research in shade tree care. For over 40 years, this organization with its trained staff of scientists, experienced representatives and skilled dendricians has been working as a team pioneering in research and tree care and building it up to a highly developed science.

. . . Scientific research has proved that what the science of microbiology did for the medical profession in chemotherapy, antibiotics and nutrition could also work to a large extent for ornamental shade trees.

. . . By research and experimentation, new methods and materials have been developed for spraying and control of insects and disease.

. . . Years of compounding nutrients has brought about more effective tree feeding.

. . . Efficiency and speed have resulted from new techniques and the introduction of labor-saving devices.

. . . The application of engineering knowledge has led to more efficient and scientific bracing methods for weak trees.

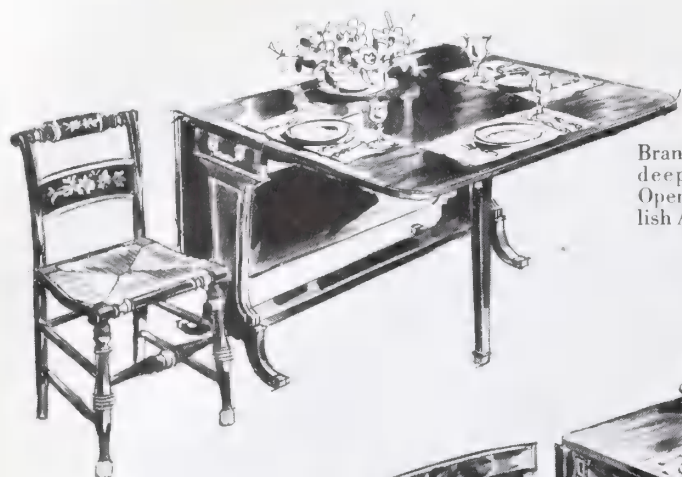

No wonder those who are critical of results are turning more and more to the Bartlett Way. To find out how to improve the beauty and preserve the splendor of your trees, call the nearest Bartlett office for an appointment.

Mother can cook and baby-sit too!

If you have a tot who's starting to toddle, this is for you:

In this kitchen, mother has only to move her head to see what's going on in the sauce pan or in the play pen. She doesn't have to "go see" what causes sudden cries from the nursery . . . and then rush back to keep daddy's dinner from burning. And, of course, baby is mighty well pleased with being able to see Mom, too!

By working out details of matching as well as arranging fixtures, Crane has made it easy for you to adapt this idea. Note how everything—from the Crane Kitchen Queen sink to the Crane-Line cabinets—blends to make this kitchen attractive and practical.

"I thank my lucky stars that I chose the organdy with truly permanent beauty — Defiance organdy labeled the 'Heberlein Process' "

What "HEBERLEIN Process" Is . . . HOW It Helps You

Defiance craftsmen working with the "Heberlein Process" actually change the form of the cotton fibre. The organdy finish is made of the fabric itself . . . it can't wash away.

That's the secret that makes Defiance organdy crisp, lustrous, transparent . . . a joy to live with for years!

When buying organdy, insist on the Defiance
"Heberlein" label.

Powers' girl, the

TRIPLE MIRROR

Front...side...back... you're just not sure you look right unless you've checked them all. Even a contortionist can't really do it right with a single mirror. A triple mirror like this shows you the final touches needed for that well-groomed look . . . lets you step out with a feeling of confidence.

It's simply three mirrors, with the center one stationary and the side panels swinging. (The center mirror should be full length when not over a dressing table.) Side mirrors can be mounted on hinged plywood backs—or on closet doors where the situation permits, as here.

But before you go shopping for mirrors there's one thing you should know. Be sure you get a mirror made of Polished Plate Glass which will faithfully reflect the beauty of your room.

Manufacturers of quality mirrors use L·O·F Polished Plate Glass and identify them with the label shown at the right. Look for it when you buy mirrors.

novoply^{*} SETS A FASHION... OF MAKING DREAMS COME TRUE!

Do you dream of building, re-building, re-modeling? Bring Novoply into your planning sessions. Find out how this new, economical, all-wood material brings your "some day" plans much nearer.

Are you considering closets or built-ins, but dubious about their sliding doors? Novoply's steadfast, remarkable flatness should resolve your doubts. Doors made from this material are practically free of warping.

Do you long for paneled walls that are bold enough in texture to hold their own against brick and hand hewn beams? While Novoply is smooth to touch, its gleaming textured surface suggests yellow leaves scattered by Autumn winds. Novoply is also available in rich, warm redwood.

Maybe what you want is a snack bar or storage partition wall, built by your own man-of-the-house "master carpenter." He will find Novoply easy to work, even with simple hand tools.

What's more, Novoply is surprisingly low in price, and comes in a variety of convenient sizes: 4'x6', 4'x8' and 2'x8' panels, $\frac{3}{4}$ " thick; 4'x8' panels, $\frac{3}{8}$ " thick. Also in $\frac{3}{4}$ " 6'x12' size for mill shipment. (Novoply is used, too, by makers of plastic-laminated counter tops, and fine furniture.)

Whatever you're planning for in your house, consider the advantages of Novoply!

First, Send for a Sample

Ask yourself, "How can I really consider this low-cost material without seeing it?" — and you realize how sensible it is to get a sample. Then you can feel the smooth surface of Novoply, form a judgment about its appearance, test its flatness and stiffness, and try working it with tools. A 3"x5" sample is yours, free.

LUBBERTS & MULDER — DESIGNERS

It started for Mr. Kandell as a sentimental journey through the castle-studded valley of the Loire. And wound up in Nantes with the successful recapture of an 18th Century motif in a modern Kandell chintz.

Despite the destruction of the Salorges Museum, Nantes still boasts a wealth of textile treasures. And a rare engraving in historic Nantes Castle inspired Mr. Kandell to recreate this exquisite design.

Now see Mr. Kandell's 20th Century salute to the designer of this 18th Century Toile! It's "Nantes" . . . a crisp modern chintz rich in old world charm. In the glowing colors below, and many others.

How Mr. Kandell's visit to the chateau country inspired the gracious elegance of "Nantes"

You're the magician! You can create any atmosphere . . . any illusion you like, by your use of color and pattern. Make a little room look bigger . . . make a big room seem cosier. Make it gay . . . make it dignified. You'll see a hundred possibilities when you see the whole wide, wonderful range of Kandell decorator chintzes!

See them soon, and remember to look for the Kandell name on the selvage, because Kandell means quality Everglaze chintz . . . washable, durable and colorfast.

KANDELL Chintz EVERGLAZE*

*A trademark signifying fabric finished and tested according to processes and standards controlled and prescribed by Joseph Bancroft & Sons Co.

Steel Is First
To Make Things Last

Beauty Treatment for Your bathroom

Bet you can't guess how little it would cost to make your bathroom as pretty and practical as this one.

That is, unless you already know about steel wall tile. How smart it looks. How it protects the beauty it adds. How reasonable it is to purchase and install. Because all the wall tile in this delightful room is made of steel, America's great and versatile bargain metal.

Even better for your bathroom, this wall tile is made of Weirzin—the electrolytically zinc-coated steel that is fireproof . . . resists moisture . . . forms a lasting bond with its finish . . . safeguards beauty permanently.

It doesn't matter whether it's wall tile or lighting fixtures, Venetian blinds or cabinets—whatever you buy, you come out ahead with steel. Make steel your standard—and save.

Metal sculpture executed in Weirzin demonstrates the exceptional workability of this easily fabricated metal.

THOROUGH-BREAD

TRAY. For your spaghetti dinner and your buffet supper party, you must have a long, crusty loaf of French bread. But unless you have a tray as far-reaching as this, you won't be able to serve it in a party manner. The black wrought-iron holder has an interesting geometric pattern. It is wonderful for fruit too. 20 1/2" long. $2.95 ppd. Gift Sources, Inc., Singdale, Connecticut.

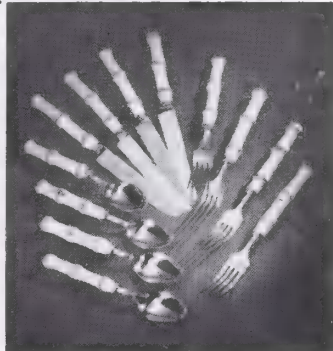

WHAT THE DICKENS?

It's the immortal Pickwick Papers, reproduced on the surface of an old-fashioned hat box-shaped wastepaper basket. And an eye-catching catch-all it is for a den, beside a lady's desk, or in the study room. The basket is metal, hand decorated and gayly lined in red. Better order several as distinguished Christmas gifts. $2.95 ppd. Elizabeth McCaffrey, Inc., Orange, New Jersey.

AMBEAUTIES. For patio or indoor dining, what could be smarter than stainless steel flatware with bamboo handles? Actually, the handles are Wangee root, which is the root-stock of Moso, Madake, and Hachiku bamboo. It won't splinter or crack. 12-piece service for four (knives, forks, and spoons) is wonderfully priced at $13 postpaid. No COD's please. Money back if not delighted.
